As a result of all this controversy on the subject a committee of three men, selected by the House and Senate conferees, was sent to Alaska to look into this matter. They made a most complete and comprehensive report and if anyone will sit down and read that report with an open mind he will come to the conclusion that this is not only a wise expenditure but is an expenditure that this Government certainly should make on behalf of 15,000 to 20,000 poor, helpless natives in Alaska.

When the white man went in there, the native Eskimo had as his means of livelihood the caribou. It was through the white man's activities and ruthlessness that the Eskimo lost his caribou herds entirely. Then the Government brought reindeer in and at the same time individuals who thought they could make money out of the reindeer industry also went into that business. As a result there have been two sets of reindeer, native and nonnative and Government and non-Government reindeer. Neither have profited. Both are threatened now with complete extinction and the purchase of the herds at the figure here fixed will be a tremendous loss to the nonnative owners who purchased the reindeer. They will get but a small part of what they originally invested. This purchase of the reindeer will make it possible to consolidate the native-owned reindeer herds with the nonnative herds; then the Government can put the Eskimo, at least in part, back to where he was before we ravaged his land and drove from it his single means of subsistence, the caribou, because the reindeer takes the place of the caribou.

Mr. Chairman, I am glad to note that Members have come down into this Well and made the statement that as they have studied the facts, and as they have learned what they are, they have changed their minds. I am satisfied that if every Member of the House looked into the facts they would all support this expenditure as essential and humane.

[Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr.

TABER] is recognized for 31/2 minutes.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I dislike opposing a matter in which the chairman of the Appropriations Committee is interested and I would not do so if it were not for the fact that I have been into this thing very thoroughly and I thoroughly understand it. I listened for over 2 hours to Mr. Lomen tell his story and I have not been able to see the justice of the claim.

It is true that the Interior Department has not treated Mr. Lomen very fairly, but it is also true that he went over there and established his own business. Here is another part of the picture to which I direct the attention of the Committee. There are approximately, according to the story we have been told, 360,000 reindeer belonging to the natives, or better than 20 for each Eskimo in Alaska. There are supposed to be 180,000 belonging to Lomen and other white owners that it is expected will be taken over. It is said by certain people that the wolves are destroying them and that the natives are not going to have anything to eat. The Interior Department itself on page 550 of the hearings

There have been increases as well as deaths and the increases will more than take care of the animals that have been killed by

Now they have more than 20 reindeer for each Eskimo. The trouble is we are spending $75,000 a year to provide people to look after them through the Interior Department. What we ought to do is to fire that gang and hire competent help to do the job instead of keeping those people on the pay roll and permitting the Eskimos to lose what they already have. If we had 20 milk cows for every person in America or 20 cattle, we would come to the conclusion, I am sure, that we had plenty to take care of our people. have plenty there to take care of the situation and there is no excuse whatever for Uncle Sam going in there and paying $720,000 to these white owners to bail them out of an unfortunate investment.

Mr. COLMER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi. Mr. COLMER. Is it not a fact also that the Department estimates it will cost a minimum of $130,000 a year to administer this?

Mr. TABER. Oh, yes, to keep these fellows in employment who are not doing their jobs properly now.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. Taylor].

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, this is the first time I have come down into this Well to make a speech in the past 2 or 3 years. I should not be here now if this did not involve a question of humanity. It is a question of appealing to our human instincts; it is a question of whether or not we are going to permit the wolves to kill off the reindeer in Alaska and then be compelled either to support the Eskimo on a dole or permit them to starve to death.

I took the pains a few days ago to have the Department telegraph to Alaska and obtain a description of the reindeer situation at the present time. I shall read the telegram, which will give you the picture of the reindeer situation in Alaska right now. This message is addressed to the Commissioner of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and comes from Mr. Rood, the chief ranger of Alaska. It reads as fol-

Wolves completely wiped out Noorvik herd. Past spring and winter have reduced Shunknak from 1,700 to 262. Buckland and Koyuk herds scattered by wolves and reduced from 15,000 to 6,000 and from 5,000 to 1,200, respectively, during past year. Wolves destroyed Shaktoolik Unalakleet herds. Selawik herd formerly 12,000 now 1,800, being ravaged by wolves which re-cently killed over 60 fawns one night. Barrow herd reduced 50 percent by wolves during past year. Natives helpless, too poor pay total herding costs, unless deer herd all will be lost. Starva-tion and lack of skins for winter clothing face natives who need reindeer more than ever, account low value and increased scarcity

The bands of gray wolves are rapidly destroying all the reindeer in Alaska and there is no way of protecting them. The reindeer have no means of protecting themselves. A dozen wolves can kill an entire herd of reindeer and there is now no way to protect them. The question is, What are you going to do about it? I have not the slightest interest in this matter any more than the rest of you. I have a letter from the President urging this appropriation, which I should like to insert at this point.

> THE WHITE HOUSE, Washington, July 19, 1939.

Hon. EDWARD T. TAYLOR,

Chairman, Committee on Appropriations, House of Representatives

My DEAR Mr. TAYLOR: On September 1, 1937, there was enacted

My Dear Mr. Taylor: On September 1, 1937, there was enacted into law a measure reasonably calculated to insure to the Eskimos and other natives of Alaska a food supply in perpetuity by eliminating all nonnative ownership of reindeer, by providing for the conservation of the range, and the protection of the herds.

Basic to the humanitarian purposes of the act is its authorization of an appropriation of $2,000,000 to purchase those herds now owned by nonatives. No appropriation has, however, been made, although the passage of the measure was preceded by prolonged consideration, and although the provisions of the act have been supported by investigations subsequent to its passage made under the immediate direction of the chairmen of the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations.

Committees on Appropriations.

I am deeply interested in the efforts of these people in their struggle to preserve for the future the only controlable food supply for which the tundra areas of Alaska are suitable. In the press of other matters, I hope the commitments of the Reindeer Act of 1937 may not be forgotten and that those who are dependent upon reindeer may be enabled by an adequate appropriation to recain may not be forgetten and that those who are dependent upon reindeer may be enabled by an adequate appropriation to regain full possession of the industry upon which their future depends, to protect their herds from the inroads of predators, to conserve the grazing areas, and otherwise to reap the full benefits of the reindeer

It must be remembered that reindeer were imported to Alaska at the close of the last century to replace in some measure the indigenous food supply of the natives, which had been depleted by the expansion of American commerce and industry, and it seems only logical that we now should take the steps called for by the Paindeer Act Reindeer Act

I trust this matter will receive the earnest consideration of your committee and of the Congress.

Very sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

I have been to Alaska twice and have examined this and other conditions in Alaska for a month each time, and I think I know the situation. I feel confident in saying that there is no one who has ever been to Alaska and who knows anything about conditions there who could oppose this measure. It is a humane proposition with which we are confronted. I very earnestly, on behalf of the Eskimos, ask that you reject the pending amendment. The Eskimos are a simple, kind-hearted people. I know you do not want them to starve. You remember that an Eskimo ran 15 miles to let the world know that the plane in which Will Rogers and Wiley Post were flying had collapsed. Otherwise we might not have known of the accident for a year. The Eskimos are wards of our Government. Let us preserve them from extinction.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Colmer].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Colmer) there were-ayes 72, noes 97.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were refused.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. RAYBURN] having assumed the chair, Mr. Cooper. Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that the Committee, having had under consideration the bill H. R. 7462, had come to no resolution thereon

AMENDMENT OF THE FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT OF 1938

Mr. SABATH, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following privileged resolution, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered printed:

House Resolution 289

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. R. 5435, a bill to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, and all points of order against said bill are hereby waived. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 3 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Labor, the bill shall be read, and after the reading of the first section of such bill it shall be in order to move to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert as a substitute the text of the bill H. R. 7349, and all points of order against such subout all after the enacting clause and insert as a substitute the text of the bill H. R. 7349, and all points of order against such substitute are hereby waived. It shall also be in order to consider without the intervention of any point of order the text of the bill H. R. 7133 as a substitute for the text of the substitute containing the language of the bill H. R. 7349. No amendments shall be in order to the two substitute amendments herein authorized except one amendment proposing to strike out the word "not" in line 20 on page 4 of the text of H. R. 7133. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill H. R. 5435 the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion, except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions. without instructions.

THIRD DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL, FISCAL YEAR 1939

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 7462) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 7462, with Mr. Cooper in the

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Colorado: Consolidated Ute (Ute Mountain), $38,000, including the purchase of land, the subjugation thereof, and the construc-tion of improvements thereon.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Robinson of Utah: On page 31, after line 7, insert the following:

"Oregon: Klamath; not to exceed $4,500 of the amount authorized in the Interior Department Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1940, for the support of the Klamath agency from tribal funds, shall be available for fees and expenses of an attorney or firm of attorneys selected by the tribe and employed under a contract approved by the Secretary of the Interior, in accordance with existing law."

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, the committee has no objection to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and empowered, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to establish rental rates for the lease of reserved lands of the United States situate within the exterior boundaries of Boulder City, Nev., and, without prior advertising, to enter into leases therefor at not less than rates so established and for periods not exceeding 53 years from the date of such leases: Provided, That all revenues which may accrue to the United States under the provisions of such leases that he deposited in the Treatment of the Colesses that he deposited in the Treatment of the Colesses and the colesses are the collections. shall be deposited in the Treasury and credited to the Colorado River Dam fund established by section 2 of the Boulder Canyon Project Act approved December 21, 1928 (45 Stat. 1057).

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against this amendment that it is legislation on an appropriation bill. However, in order that the gentleman from Nevada may make a statement regarding the provision, I reserve the point of order.

Mr. SCRUGHAM. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from New York for reserving the point of order.

The object of this provision is to permit the construction by private capital of a number of houses in Boulder City, Nev., where a serious housing shortage exists at this time. This provision involves no cost whatever to the Government. On the contrary, the money received from the leases permitted will be revenue to the Government. There is no other practical way of securing passage of legislation at this time which will permit this much-needed housing construction. I sincerely hope the gentleman from New York will not press his point of order. It is in the interest of building employment, and will certainly help in giving opportunity for safe investment of private capital.

Mr. TABER. If the gentleman will yield, I will say that the thing that bothers me about this proposition is that we have tried as far as possible to keep all legislation out of this bill. No hearings have been held by our committee or any other committee on this subject. I would much rather vote for a separate resolution than have such a provision as this in the bill. I feel that I must insist on the point of order.

Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Nevada concede the point of order?

Mr. SCRUGHAM. I concede the point of order, Mr. Chair-

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York makes the point of order against the paragraph, and the gentleman from Nevada concedes the point of order. The Chair, therefore sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

BUREAU OF MINES

Expenses, mining experiment stations: For an additional amount for maintenance and operation of mining experiment stations, fiscal year 1940, $15,000.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

"For the coal economists, $7,000."

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALTER. Gladly.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. As I understand, there was a Budget estimate for this item, and I further understand that the Interior Subcommittee, which formerly made an objection to it, has withdrawn its objection.

Mr. WALTER. They have withdrawn their objection because they were not properly informed at the time the matter was under consideration. Since that time they have agreed it should have been included in the Interior Department appropriation bill.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, the committee has no objection to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Investigation of domestic sources of mineral supply: For every penditure requisite for and incident to the work of the Bureau expenditure requisite for and incident to the work of the Bureau of Mines in performing the duties imposed upon it by section 7 of the act of June 7, 1939 (Public, No. 117, 76th Cong.); including the purchase of professional and scientific books; not to exceed $1,000 for printing and binding; not to exceed $15,000 for purchase, operation, maintenance, and repair of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles for official use in field work and in transporting employees between their homes and temporary locations they may be employed; purchase of goggles, gloves, rubber boots, miners' hats, aprons, and such other articles of personal wearing apparel or equipment as may be required for the protection of employees while engaged in their work; the construction, maintenance, and repair of necessary camp buildings and mining structures and appurtenances thereto; and including not to exceed $15,000 for personal services in the District of Columbia; fiscal year 1940, $350,000: Provided, That section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U. S. C. 5) shall not be construed to apply to any purchase or service rendered when the amount involved does not exceed the sum of $500.

Mr. KEE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment ollered by Mr. KEE: On page 31, after line 13, insere a new paragraph, as follows:

"War Minerals Relief Commission: The unexpended balance of the appropriation for payment of awards in accordance with the act approved May 18, 1936 (49 Stat. 1355), contained in the 'Second Deficiency Act, fiscal year 1937', is continued available for the same purpose until June 30, 1940."

Mr. KEE. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is simply for the purpose of making available an unexpended balance in an appropriation made for the payment of certain claims awarded and approved by the War Minerals Relief Commission

By an act approved May 18, 1936, Congress authorized the appropriation of $1,250,000 for payment to war-mineral claimants for interest losses of such claims as might be approved by the War Minerals Relief Commission.

The First Deficiency Appropriation Act for the fiscal year 1936 appropriated $500,000 in accordance with and under the authority of the authorization, all of which was expended in the settlement of claims.

The Second Deficiency Appropriation Act for the fiscal year 1937 appropriated $650,000 under the same authority. and also an additional $100,000 for war-minerals relief under the act approved June 30, 1936—these two appropriations making a total of $750,000 appropriated by the Deficiency Act of 1937 under the authorization theretofore made.

Out of this last appropriation of $750,000 there is now an unexpended remainder of $30,342.09, which should be available for application toward the adjustment and payment to claimants of awards already made to them, or which may currently be made by the War Minerals Relief Commission.

These approved awards, however, as well as those currently being made, cannot be paid out of this unexpended balance because of the fact that this balance is due to be covered back into the Treasury, as the original appropriation of which this balance is a part was to remain available only during the fiscal year of 1938—therefore, the necessity of this amendment in order to make this sum of $30,342.09 available for application to the purpose for which it was originally appropriated.

This unexpended balance has not been used for the payment of these claims for the reason that on June 30, 1938. the War Minerals Relief Commission suspended all activities because funds were not appropriated for the administrative expenses of the Commission for the fiscal year of 1939. I understand that funds have now been provided for 1940 and the Commission is now at work adjusting claims. Making this unexpended balance available for the purpose of payment of these claims, as this amendment will do, will enable claimants to have their claims adjusted at a much earlier date.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 2 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, the Committee knows nothing whatever about the matter set out in the amendment which the gentleman has offered. There has been no Budget estimate for it, no hearing, no request made to the committee, and it is a matter we are absolutely in the dark about except for the gentleman's statement. I would hate very much to see it go in the bill under these circumstances, and therefore I ask that the amendment be defeated. The question was taken and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Contingent expenses: For an additional amount for contingent and miscellaneous expenses of the offices and bureaus of the Department, including the same objects and under the same conditions specified in the Department of Labor Appropriation Act, 1940, $3,000.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, there are three amendments with respect to the wage and hour matter which is now under consideration, and I ask unanimous consent that the three amendments which I now offer may be reported and considered together.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendments offered by Mr. Woodrum of Virginia: On page 38, line 10, strike out "$3,000" and insert "$15,500"; on page 38, line 19, strike out "$2,000" and insert "$227,000"; on page 39, after line 25, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"WAGE AND HOUR DIVISION

"Salaries: For an additional amount for all personal services for the Wage and Hour Division in performing the duties imposed upon it by the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, fiscal year 1940, $762,500: Provided, That the limitation contained in the Department of Labor Appropriation Act of 1940 on the amount which may be expended for personal services in the District of Columbia is hereby increased to $1,260,600: Provided further, That the Secretary of Labor may allot or transfer, with the approval of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, funds from this appropriation to any bureau or office of the Department of Labor to enable such agency to perform services for the Wage and Hour Division."

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, the effect of this is to add $1,000,000 to the appropriation for the Fair Labor Standards Act, broken down proportionately as the $2,000,000 that was sent up by the Budget.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

The appropriation for contingent expenses, contained in the Department of Labor Appropriation Act, 1940, shall be available for the purchase and exchange, at a cost not to exceed $1,800, of one passenger-carrying automobile for the official use of the Secretary of Labor.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Hoffman: Page 38, line 14, after the word "exceed", strike out "$1,800."

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, the press advises us that the motor industry is tied up again with strikes, in which the C. I. O. insists that no one shall work in those plants until he has joined a particular organization. This paragraph calls for $1,800 for an automobile for the Secretary of Labor to ride around in. Inasmuch as a large portion of her time, a great deal of her time, or the time of her assistants, is taken up by going around where these strikes occur, and is used in an effort to help John L. Lewis and force all workers to join his union and contribute to his treasury so that he can again contribute something to the administration to which the Secretary of Labor belongs, by way of a campaign fund, it does seem that in fairness she ought to ride part of the time in a C. I. O. automobile. In Detroit there are Walter and Victor Reuther, good Communists, if there are such things-Communists, anyway-raising hell up there most of the time with the motor industry, keeping the workingmen away from factories. Why cannot these men from the Labor Department, when they go up there to help the C. I. O., inasmuch as they are aiding the C. I. O. in obtaining contracts with employers, ride in C. I. O. automobiles, instead of having the taxpayers buy Miss Perkins a new one? Further. is there any reason why we should buy an automobile made in a factory—if there be such a factory—where a man cannot work until he joins John's C. I. O.? If no one can work in the motor industry until he has joined that organization, it would seem as though the rest of us who cannot work in those factories, whose boys or friends cannot work there until they have paid tribute to John—it seems as though we might patronize some industry that does not yield to the demand that it employ only Lewis' men. Let John's men buy the automobiles made in a closed factory, and let John's men eat the products of the packing industry where only his men can work, and let John's men burn the coal they mine, and let the rest of us eat the meat that comes out of the open packing shop, buy the automobile that comes out of the open automobile shop, and burn oil to heat our homes and buildings instead of being forced to buy only the product of those who belong to John's organization. Why is it not a good thing to let the rule work both ways? If only John's men can work in an industry, let them buy the things they make, and let us patronize those industries, those miners, those mills that trade with all of us; that give employment to all who may apply as need for their services arises. Let us have a little of the good-neighbor policy in our domestic affairs.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes.

Mr. HAWKS. I think you have got something there.

Mr. HOFFMAN. I think if it were tried out here, Lewis and the C. I. O. might discover that we had something, and I think that some of these manufacturers who are yielding to John's demand that only his boys can work in their plants or mines would discover to their amazement that the tail had been wagging the dog, that Lewis does not represent labor. They should begin to think it over pretty soon, and they should give us some good reason why we should trade with them if they refuse to give employment only to members of one union. If my boy cannot work in a motor factory, why should I buy an automobile made there?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. In view of the fact that Lewis bought a mortgage on the Democratic Party for 500,000 pieces of silver, does not the gentleman think he ought to have a little payment back, because he will not have any after the 1940 election?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Lewis does not have a mortgage on the Democratic Party. If it be true that he has a mortgage on any political clique, it must be on the new dealers, and if that is true that is but another reason why Mme. Perkins should ride in John's automobile.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Would the gentleman want to carry his argument to a logical conclusion?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Oh, the new dealers do not carry anything to a logical conclusion, so far as that goes.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. I want to ask the gentleman a question about what he is advocating.

Mr. HOFFMAN. I am not advocating anything.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Instead of riding to Washington in trains, it might be a good thing if he would walk, because that is done by union men, too.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes; anyone may walk. John has not asked us to pay for that privilege. Most of the workingmen who pay dues to Lewis do walk, but John rides in his big car. I am not advocating anything. I am just stating that I do not believe in a boycott, either of labor or merchandise, but if John want a boycott, if he insists upon a boycott of all who do not choose to do his will and says that my boy cannot work in a factory until he pays him, I ask you why, in all fairness, should I buy an automobile made in that factory, and I am asking the gentleman if in Pennsylvania they are going to give work to anyone other than John's men? If you will not employ us, why should we buy your coal and use your steel?

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Oh, the gentleman is always critical. Why does he not advocate something?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Oh, yes; I do. I advocate the worship of the good Lord; I advocate the practice of decency and honesty, the living of an exemplary domestic life, all those things I just mentioned and which Jack Garner stands

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected. The Clerk read as follows:

For an additional amount for United States contributions to international commissions, congresses, and bureaus: For the contribution of the United States to the Inter-American Radio Office the Inter-American Radio Communications Convention concluded December 13, 1937, for the following fiscal years.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Cannon of Missouri: On page 46, Amendment offered by Mr. CANNON of Missouri: On page 46, after line 8, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"Restoration, capital impairment, Commodity Credit Corporation: To enable the Secretary of the Treasury, on behalf of the United States, to restore the amount of the capital impairment of the Commodity Credit Corporation as of March 31, 1939, by contribution to the Corporation, as provided by the act approved March 8, 1938 (Public, No. 442, 75th Cong.), fiscal year 1940, $119,599,918.05."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I wonder if we can agree on time for debate on this amendment? I would hope that 30 minutes would be sufficient.

I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto be confined to 30 minutes.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Reserving the right to object.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Only five gentlemen have stood up, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I would offer no objection to 40 minutes, provided no speaker be restricted to less than 5

The CHAIRMAN. Permit the Chair to state the following gentlemen have risen, indicating they desired recognition: Mr. Pace, Mr. Taber, Mr. Dirksen, Mr. O'Neal, Mr. Hobbs, Mr. Cannon of Missouri, Mr. Jones of Texas, and Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Not I, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. TABER. Will the Chair please put Mr. DITTER's name instead of mine?

Mr. GILCHRIST. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have time on this.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair now has eight names listed: Mr. Pace, Mr. Ditter, Mr. Dirksen, Mr. O'Neal, Mr. Hobbs, Mr. Cannon of Missouri, Mr. Jones of Texas, and Mr. Gil-CHRIST.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me 30 minutes on this amendment, when seven of these gentlemen are on the same side, should be sufficient. I ask unanimous consent that debate be limited to 30 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 30 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, I trust the gentleman will allow each of those who desire to speak at least 5 minutes.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Very well, Mr. Chairman. I will modify the request, that all time on this amendment and all amendments thereto be limited to 40 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia, as modified?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Can-NON] is recognized for 5 minutes in support of his amendment.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, it is impossible to emphasize too strongly the importance of this amendment. It is not merely a matter of keeping faith—not merely a matter of carrying out the solemn obligation the Government entered into with the farmer-but it is a matter of maintaining the already inadequate price of farm products, and through the maintenance of the farm income a continuance of the present upgrade in industry and employment.

The provision is one of the indispensable sections in the agricultural adjustment program. Farm prices have been largely stabilized by loans on dairy products, wheat, cotton, corn, fruits, and other farm staples. To realize the extent to which these loans have operated you have but to estimate the price at which they would be selling today without their support. What would dairy products be selling at today if the millions of dollars used in supporting the dairy market were not available? There are at this time 65,493,729 pounds of butter benefiting from commodity loans. Why deny the dairy industry further benefits from these loans? The price of corn is being maintained at 57 cents per bushel through loans on 257,000,000 bushels of corn. Can you imagine the price of corn if this supply had to be thrown on the open market and the new crop, now estimated at 2,500,000,000 bushels, marketed in the same month instead of being fed into the market in an orderly way as demand warranted? That is what will follow if this amendment is not agreed to and the Commodity Credit Corporation authorized to continue its operations as heretofore.

Even with the support of these loans farm prices have been falling steadily for the past year. Lard is today selling in Chicago at the lowest price in the history of the Chicago market. And as lard goes down cottonseed and butter go down with it. Unsealed corn is now being contracted as low as 32 cents, and the Department of Agriculture reports a carry-over in excess of 400,000,000 bushels, with a new crop prospect unequaled in size and quality. With this recordbreaking crop at hand there is no protection or support of any kind except these commodity loans. It is true we have provided for parity payments, but if loans are denied and prices collapse, even the parity payments will not equal present quotations and the entire amount appropriated for parity payments will be practically lost.

But the greatest losses will come through the depreciation of the collateral for loans already in force. At present prices the Government if it desired to liquidate its loan on a crib of corn would lose the difference between the 57 cents per bushel it has loaned and the spot price of 32 cents to 35 cents. But if further loan support is withdrawn, the resulting drop of corn on the market will leave the Government holding collateral worth approximately 15 cents per bushel instead of 32 cents per bushel, a total loss on all loans in comparison with which the appropriation asked in this amendment would be infinitesimal. Every principle of common sense as well as good business requires that these loans be continued and farm prices maintained at present levels at least. With loans simultaneously withdrawn on dairy products, wheat, cotton, peanuts, tobacco, fruit, corn, cotton and cottonseed, turpentine and rosin, wool and mohair, hops, figs, prunes, and so forth, as this bill proposes to do unless amended, there will be such a debacle of farm prices as the country has seldom seen.

But the question before us is no longer a matter of inquiry into the merits or demerits of this particular method of handling the agricultural problem. It is now a matter of carrying out the terms of the contract entered into by the Government with the farmer when he was invited to cooperate in the agricultural adjustment plan and was assured that in return for crop adjustment, soil conservation, acreage reduction, and so forth, on the part of the farmer, the Government would, among other things, supply loans under specified conditions in order to permit orderly marketing and preclude market gluts at harvest. Farmers all over the Nation have accepted the Government's proffer and have complied with their part of the agreement. It now remains for the Government to discharge its part of the obligation and carry out its part of the contract made on its own motion. I quote a letter from Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, bearing directly on this phase of the question:

AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION,

My Dear Congressman: I am writing to urge that the House Appropriations Committee approve an appropriation of $119,599,-918.05, approved by the Bureau of the Budget, for the purpose of restoring the estimated net impairment of the capital stock of the Commodity Credit Corporation, as determined by the appraisal of its assets and liabilities on March 31, 1939.

Restoration of this capital impairment is of vital importance to millions of farmers cooperating under the Agricultural Adjustment program. Unless this action is taken by Congress before adjournment, the Commodity Credit Corporation will be unable, under the statutory limitations governing its operations, to carry out the loan provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938. Farmers have cooperated with the Government in adjusting their acreeses to reduce the exceptions of farm commodities and Farmers have cooperated with the Government in adjusting their acreages to reduce the excessive surpluses of farm commodities, so as to bring about a balance of supplies with demand. They have done their part toward bringing about this readjustment. They have acted in good faith, believing that the Government would carry out its part in making available the commodity loans, as specifically provided and promised in the A. A. A. of 1938. In fairness to the farmers who have done their part, the Government should do its part by fulfilling its pledges to the farmers.

Much of the current maladjustment in supplies of basic farm commodities has been due to the inadequate control of supplies during the 2-year period following the invalidation of the original A. A. A. by the United States Supreme Court. The A. A. A. of 1938 has already demonstrated its effectiveness in adjusting downward supplies of our basic crops until the accumulated surpluses can be liquidated and at the same time maintain adequate reserve supplies for emergencies. Obviously, it will require a reasonable length of time to liquidate these accumulated surpluses.

This estimated capital impairment is primarily a bookkeeping loss and not an actual loss to the Corporation. It merely represents the difference between estimated assets and liabilities on March 31, based upon the prevailing prices of these commodities on that date. The continued effective operation of the A. A. A. of 1938, bringing supplies into balance with demand, should result in such ultimate improvement in prices of these commodities as of 1938, bringing supplies into balance with demand, should result in such ultimate improvement in prices of these commodities as to enable the Corporation to liquidate its holdings with comparatively little actual loss.

We respectfully urge your approval of this item. Failure to act at this time would be calamitous to millions of farmers.

Respectfully yours,

EDW. A. O'NEAL, President.

The farmers favor continuance of these loans; the farm organizations favor them; the Department of Agriculture favors them; the welfare of American agriculture, American industry, and American labor requires them. In fact, only one argument has been advanced against them, the suggestion that ample funds are already available to continue them until Congress is again in session in January. In support of this theory it is contended that the Corporation still has $157,000,000 on which to draw in maintenance of its loan program. In order to secure an authoritative statement on this contention and a detailed account of the funds available for the use of the Corporation, I requested a report from the Department of Agriculture, and am just in receipt of the following letter:

COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION, Washington, August 2, 1939.

Hon. CLARENCE CANNON.

Chairman, Appropriations Committee,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.
Dear Mr. Chairman: Secretary Wallace's office has requested me to furnish you with a current statement as to the amount of uncommitted funds Commodity Credit Corporation would have available for additional loans on agricultural commodities.

available for additional loans on agricultural commodities.

Commodity Credit Corporation has available funds uncommitted totaling $131,000,000. The 1939 wheat loan commitment is included at $50,000,000, the amount approved for these loans, in arriving at these figures. Present indications are that the 1939 wheat loans will total $150,000,000 so that it probably will be necessary to increase the commitment to that amount. In addition, the extension program for 1938 and 1938—39 corn loans and the delivery of cotton to England will further reduce the available funds. Estimating these amounts, the funds available would be as follows: as follows:

Total funds not committed_____ ___ $131,000,000

Additional wheat commitment $100,000,000 Funds for corn program 20,000,000 Delivery of cotton to England 2,000,000

Balance available_____ 9,000,000

If the $119,000,000 necessary to restore the capital of the Corporation to $100,000,000 is not appropriated by the Congress, funds will not be available for cotton or corn loans.

Since the average price of cotton on the 10 designated spot

Since the average price of cotton on the 10 designated spot markets is now somewhat in excess of the amount which would make a loan on cotton mandatory under the provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 and such cotton prices have tended to strengthen within recent weeks, it is possible that no loans will be required upon the 1939 cotton production.

Commodity Credit Corporation has approximately 250,000,000 bushels of corn, principally of the 1938 production, which is sealed on the farm and pledged as security to loans made at the rate of 57 cents per bushel. A program was recently announced whereby farmers were encouraged to reseal this corn and carry it in its present position for another 12 months, the Corporation making an additional allowance of 7 cents per bushel for storage during such additional period.

In view of the present level and trend in lard and livestock prices, together with a July estimate of the 1939 corn crop at approximately 2,600,000,000 bushels, we have concluded that it is of the utmost importance that the corn now under loan be held off the market, that corn acreage next year be reduced, and that corn prices this fall be protected by loans at the level required by the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

As indicated herein, we will not be in a position to meet the urgent need with respect to corn this fall unless the $119,000,000 is appropriated to restore the Corporation's capital. Otherwise, it may be necessary to discontinue loans on other commodities, including wheat and wool and mohair produced in 1939. Indi-including wheat and wool and mohair produced in 1939. Indications are that the original commitment of $50,000,000 made for 1939 wheat will be reached at an early date.

Very truly yours,

JOHN D. GOODLOE,

It will be observed that there is actually remaining $9,000,000 which means no loan program of any kind can be applied to the huge corn crop of 1939, money for which must be ready this fall, or to any other agricultural commodity, and that discontinuance of the loan program is inevitable unless this amendment is adopted. And, of course, that means that a panic in farm prices will follow and 1932 prices from which the farm program and commodity loans extricated agriculture will again bring bankruptcy to the farm and the Nation.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. FULMER. I would like to state to the gentleman that we had this matter up with the Secretary the other day, and he said that unless they were permitted to continue the loans and make additional corn loans, that corn would go to at least 15 cents a bushel, hogs and lard would go right on down to 3 or 4 cents a pound.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I am glad to have the information direct from the Secretary of Agriculture. The most dependable estimates we have been able to secure agree that discontinuance of the loan program will mean 3-cent hogs, 7-cent cotton, 20-cent butter, 15-cent corn, 30-cent wheat and all other agricultural products in proportion. Let me ask my friends from the industrial centers-and I know they oppose breaking this contract with the farmer-let me ask them how much manufactured products they can expect to be bought from such incomes and what wages they estimate the farmer can afford to pay for the products of labor on such returns from their own toil.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Is it not true that there is a Budget estimate for the amount proposed in the gentleman's amendment?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman is correct. The Bureau of the Budget submitted an estimate for the full amount to the President who transmitted it to the House among the first submitted for inclusion in the bill now under consideration. The estimate is in compliance with the law passed by the Congress after exhaustive study and consideration and is in conformity with the provisions of section 302 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938. It is endorsed by every farm agency, without exception, and on its faithful administration depends the prosperity of the farm, the factory, the labor union, and the country as a whole. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Pace] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Chairman, we are dealing merely with a book entry. Two years ago we passed a law requiring that on the 31st day of March each year an appraisal should be made of the assets of the Commodity Credit Corporation, and if there was any deficiency of assets and liabilities at that time the Congress should appropriate sufficient funds to take care of any deficit and leave the Corporation's capital stock unimpaired. It is no more nor less than a book entry, but will mean, if this amendment is not adopted, there could not be if needed any cotton loans, or any corn loans this year. What would be the effect of that? Follow me just a minute.

By one means and another we have raised the price of cotton to 9.25 cents per pound. That means that we will not need any cotton loans, thank goodness, if you will hold the line for us. Cotton would have to break to practically 8 cents before a loan would be authorized. But listen! If this Congress adjourns, Mr. Chairman, without ample borrowing power in the hands of the Commodity Credit Corporation and the trade should think that there is no support under cotton, that it can break to any figure and the Commodity Credit Corporation cannot come to its assistance, what will be the natural effect on the trade? It will try to depress the price and buy cotton as cheap as possible, and this will not only cause the cotton farmers a loss of millions and millions of dollars in the sale of their cotton, but it would require the Commodity Credit Corporation to make loans on millions and millions of bales of cotton as soon as the funds can be secured. So here, by a simple book entry-and that is all it is-the producers will be saved millions and the United States Treasury will be saved millions, because it will not be necessary to make any cotton loans this year. I am proud of it. I take no pride in the fact that my people have had to call upon the Government for over $500,000,000 in loans on their cotton, and I am just as anxious as any Member of the Congress to hold the price of cotton above the loan figure, so these loans will not be necessary. That is why I appeal to you now.

In addition to that, there are about 300,000,000 bushels of corn in the warehouses under loan today. There is a crop in the field of about 2,600,000,000 bushels—one of the greatest crops ever known in the history of the Nation. What is going to happen if they cannot get a loan? It not only means that corn will drop to 15 cents a bushel but it will mean that you will have an enormous hog crop next year to follow an enormous hog crop this year; and instead of lard dropping to 5 cents, as it is today, within a few months you will see lard at 2 and 3 cents per pound. And, of course, cottonseed oil will go down with it.

We are asking you by this amendment, by a simple book entry, to put support under cotton and corn and wheat. We are not asking you to spend one single dime. This appraisal was made on the 31st day of March, and I am sure that cotton has reacted sufficiently since then to wipe out most of the deficit shown by that appraisal, practically wipe it all out. We are simply here asking you, by an entry on the books of the Commodity Credit Corporation, to let the world know that if the farmers of this Nation need it, the Government is ready to step in and hold the market up; and I say to you it is my belief it may mean the difference between 9½-cent cotton and 7-cent cotton. If the price of cotton shall be forced down to 7 cents, it would mean that the Commodity Credit Corporation, in one way or another, would be forced to advance loans on another 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 bales or more.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PACE. I yield.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Always the gentleman speaks of it more or less as a routine book transaction, not calling for the exchange of any money. He would not, of course, undertake to leave the impression that this is not a direct appropriation of $119,000,000 out of the Treasury, which makes $400,000,000 and over when added to the $300,000,000 unbudgeted agricultural items.

Mr. PACE. The gentleman must understand that the act provides that if there is on this appraisal each year any deficit it shall be appropriated immediately so as to keep the capital unimpaired. Then if on the next appraisal, by reason of better prices, it appears that the value of the commodities covered by the loans is in excess of the amount of the loans then the Commodity Credit Corporation shall pay every penny of the excess immediately to the United States Treasury. How would that be done? Merely by the Treasury giving the Corporation credit on its books for the amount of the excess, while the amendment says, in strict language, that it is an appropriation, it is in effect only an authorization for such book transfer by the Treasury to the Corporation.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I hope every Member of the Committee will give diligent attention, because there is involved here $119,000,000. If open confession is good for the soul, let me say that when this matter appeared in the Appropriations Committee this morning I voted against the proposal to reincorporate the $119,000,000 in the bill. I did so on the representation which was made in the House, in good faith, that the Commodity Credit Corporation had $157,000,000 available between now and the first of the year to carry on its activities. I learned, however, from Mr. Goodlow, vice president, shortly after lunch, that there was available $131,000,000. Three and one-half million dollars have been committed for rye last week, $100,000,000 more will have to be committed for wheat out of a total of $150,-000,000, since wheat applications alone are coming in at the rate of 5,000,000 bushels per day. Two million dollars is committed to sending cotton to England, with the result there will not be $157,000,000 available but only $9,000,000. With that $9,000,000 it is anticipated that if any lending program shall be had for cotton and corn it must be with that very meager amount.

Mr. Chairman, it cannot be done. We had 250,000,000 bushels of corn under loan in the 1938 crop. There is a magnificent crop of corn maturing in the Corn Belt at the present time. Lard is being quoted in the District of Columbia at 7 cents a pound, which is the lowest price since General Grant sat in the White House. Under these circumstances there is only one thing that can be done. We have got to make loans.

These loans must be made in order to keep this corn off the market. If they are not, the whole corn price structure will crash, and the gentleman from Missouri was not speaking by card when he said there will be 20-cent corn. You express that amount against a corn crop of 2,600,000,000 bushels and you will see utter devastation in the Corn Belt of the country. We have to keep this corn under seal. If we do not they will send the hogs into the market. We have the largest crop of pigs in 16 years, according to the Department of Agriculture. You permit those heavy hogs to go into the market as a result of the forced feeding of corn, and the price of lard, in my judgment, will go down to 3 cents a pound. Then there will be ruination and there will be foreclosure.

Mr. Chairman, my record in this matter, I think, is clear. I resisted every cash appropriation, parity, and everything else on the floor of this House. I fought the rule when it came back from the Senate. I fought it because there was no Budget message for it. Neither the President nor the Secretary of Agriculture indicated they wanted this. But if we are going to save the price structure in the Corn Belt we have to restore the $119,000,000 to this bill. This being the case, I sincerely hope the House will be indulgent and put it back.

I am under no misapprehension about it. We are going to lose plenty of money next year. This $119,000,000 of impaired capital will be lost. There will be $19,000,000 of actual loss and $119,000,000 of a potential loss. Do not kid yourselves about that. It is lost money. But balanced against that, there may be five or six hundred million dollars in losses unless we keep corn under seal, keep it from going to market in the form of fat pork and have the price of ham. bacon, shoulders, lard, and corn for industrial purposes go down to a level with which 1932 will not be comparable. I admonish all of you from the Corn Belt that there is tied up with this $110,000,000, in my judgment, a portion of our salvation, and much as I hate to tax the Treasury, much as I hate to affront my own committee after having voted against this proposition earlier in the day, yet the representations that have been made since that time and the facts I have been able to obtain from the Commodity Credit Corporation indicate that the situation is different; that of $157,000,000 only $9,000,000 is available and we can make scarcely a dollar of corn loans and cotton loans between now and the first of the year, which must be done before we get back here in January.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hobbs].

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, it is indeed a pleasure to speak more or less unselfishly in behalf of this amendment. Cotton is not asking any loans at the present time, although the market may be broken to the point where we will be entitled to loans under the law. We all hope and pray that cotton will never again need loans. Today we are pleading the cause of corn primarily. Without the rehabilitation of the capital structure of the Commodity Credit Corporation provided in this amendment, corn is doomed.

This great committee has done this thing unwittingly. We must repair the damage before it is too late. Corn is one of the most vital of all of the products in our agricultural program. If we allow corn to come on the market this fall with 2,600,000,000 bushels and no "cushion" of this kind, a price crash is inevitable. Forced feeding of this unsealed corn to hogs will increase the weight of those hogs by at least 20 pounds each. Twenty-five million heads of hogs, 20 pounds to the hog, will mean 500,000,000 pounds of surplus lard on a market already depressed by a surplus. With this tremendous surplus piled on surplus, the price will go not only to 3 cents per pound but to less, and will carry with it every other fat and oil on the American market. So that it will mean disaster not only to the corn people but the rest of us.

In 1936 cottonseed sold for $60 a ton. That meant over and above the cost of picking and ginning $34 a ton going into the channels of trade. With 10,000,000 tons, in round figures, this meant $340,000,000 of free money going into the cash registers in the Cotton Belt. Then multiply that by circulation, augmented by the dammed-up demand, and we had $3,400,000,000 added to that year's income of American business by reason of a fair price for cottonseed. The next year cottonseed sold for as little as $10 a ton, less than half the cost of picking and ginning. As a result there was not a cash register ringing in the whole of the Cotton Belt. Our national income shrank by just about that total, $3,400,000,000. So I maintain that that proves this one comparatively small commodity in our agricultural economy—cottonseed—was solely responsible for our recession in 1937.

And you are going to do it on a tremendously larger scale in this good fall if you allow that corn crop to come on the market instead of sealing it on the farm. When you let corn prices go to 20 cents or less, hog prices inevitably fall, and lard prices approach the minus sign. Lard prices are already on the toboggan, lard selling wholesale today for 5 cents a pound. Yet you damn it and push it farther down in spite of legislative commandment, ordering the corn loan program, and in spite of a budget estimate for this appropriation. In the last analysis it is not expenditure, it is nothing more than the wise loan made on a commodity of absolute necessity, more valuable than gold. You cannot lose the whole amount, you can lose only the difference between the amount of the loan and the market price. To illustrate, today on the corn market 40 cents is the sale price and 57 cents the loan. But they would intimate, apparently, that the whole 57 cents is lost; when, in reality, were we to liquidate today, we would lose only 17 cents.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. I am delighted to yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. My friend is invoking in support of his argument for this item the fact that there is a Budget estimate. May I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that we have appropriated at this session of Congress nearly $400,000,000 to agriculture for which there was no Budget estimate, and $225,000,000 of which was against the specific wishes of the President of the United States.

Mr. HOBBS. The distinguished gentleman may be entirely correct, but that does not alter the correctness of my statement that you have a Budget estimate for this item which the committee has cut out of this bill. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GIL-CHRIST] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GILCHRIST. Mr. Chairman, there never has been a time in the history of the corn loan so far that the Government has lost a dollar. At the present time, unless corn loans are again made and the market supported, the Government will undoubtedly lose some money. In some parts of Iowa there are 50 percent of tenants because of the conditions that have arisen in the last few years whereby farmers have lost their farms and been driven into tenancy. These people cannot hold their corn. When this fall comes they must bring the corn to the local elevators and sell it and get some money upon which to live. Two billion six hundred million bushels of corn is the estimate of production this year. There are already under seal today 258,000,000 bushels. Where is the market going to go this fall when these people bring in their corn? What are these poor devils going to do if the Government makes them no commodity loan? Will they starve or will they dump their corn into the market? Will they be allowed to hold it under a Government loan, or will the speculators get it at ruinous and starvation prices? I have said before that when I call them that word I do it as a term of affection. Where is the market going to go?

Mr. LELAND M. FORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GILCHRIST. I yield to the gentleman from Cali-

Mr. LELAND M. FORD. Why do they not stop the importation of corn from the Argentine and other countries? Mr. GILCHRIST. They have nothing to do with that. Corn does not come in from the Argentine when the price is low; corn comes in from the Argentine when the price is high and corn farmers are getting good prices. It does not affect the present market in the least. Corn farmers are not responsible for that importation. It is negligible anyway. It is easy to get up here and say, "Oh, try something else, do this or do that, or do something else." Denouncing a negligible amount of importation—which is now stopped altogether anyway-will not help the situation.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GILCHRIST. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri. Mr. CANNON of Missouri. The gentleman is aware, I suppose, of the fact that the amount of corn imported is less than 1 percent of the amount consumed in the United States? It is imported for special purposes. It can have no possible effect on the price of corn in the United States.

Mr. GILCHRIST. However, that may be, the facts are as I state them. When this corn comes to market disaster will overtake that part of the country and it will overtake the rest of you throughout the whole country. It is an easy thing to predict where corn is going to go. What price? Fifteen cents. And when it goes to that price, what is going to become of those farmers that have raised corn this year?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GILCHRIST. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Do I correctly understand that in the gentleman's district farmers are now selling corn at about 27½ cents per bushel?

Mr. GILCHRIST. I showed the gentleman the other day a statement from the local paper showing where corn is. It has risen a little since the time I showed that market to the gentleman. I believe No. 2 White is selling for 30 to 32 cents.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Will the gentleman tell me if it is last year's corn they are now selling?

Mr. GILCHRIST. It must be. It is corn not under seal. Mr. CRAWFORD. Why was that corn, if the gentleman can tell us, not put under seal or into loan at the time?

Mr. GILCHRIST. A great many farmers did not want to go into the program. There was no compulsion about it. A great many of the landlords there did not permit their tenants to put corn under seal. They did not go into the program. The facts are, however, that as sure as the sun is in the heavens, if they do not give the farmers a chance to make loans on corn out there in the corn country there will be disaster. You have not lost anything yet. As the last speaker said, you are not losing. You may lose a penny, you may lose something, but whatever you lose, you will not lose as much as you would if you do not provide for this loan on these commodities.

This appropriation not alone provides for loans on corn, it provides for loans on dairy products, corn, tobacco, wheat, and all that sort of thing. As a member of the Committee on Agriculture, and as a Member on the floor here, I am proud to say that I have never failed to support every constitutional measure that would help agriculture no matter from what part of the country it came. I have always been pleased to support any measure I could to help the farmer if it were lawful, constitutional, and reasonable. [Applause.]

Jones] is recognized for 5 minutes. Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I cannot conceive of the Committee failing to adopt this amendment in the light of the facts that have been disclosed. The matter has been so thoroughly discussed and the facts brought to light in such a way that I am not going to repeat them.

It seems to me it would be an unthinkable thing to stop just at this point. The farmers were asked to come into a program under a promise that a loan would be made available. To stop in the middle of that program when the farmers have planted their crops in the light of that program and with that understanding and to say that we are going to welsh on that promise and that we are not going to carry it out, is something I do not believe my Government will do. [Applause.] Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. JONES of Texas. I am sorry I do not have the time. I only have 5 minutes.

This would be like sending an army to the front and then saying that because it costs so much to get them ammunition we are not going to give them sufficient ammunition to carry on the battle.

There is more than this from the standpoint of the farmer and the Government's obligations. There is still another angle to this proposition. The Government has tied up in these loans on these various commodities a certain amount of money. It has about 250,000,000 bushels of corn that are under loan. If you take the props from under, violate the agreement with the farmers, and dump the new crop on the market all en masse, it is not only going to cause a tremendous loss to these corn farmers, it is going to cause a tremendous loss to the Government in the money they already have tied up, and from the standpoint of pure, unadulterated, selfish business, from the standpoint of the Government, it would be foolish not to make this money available. I do not know whether it will be necessary. It may not be

I am not criticizing the committee. I have looked over the hearings and they have been compelled to do a great many things. They have been very busy and they took the facts as disclosed in March when the wheat loan was just starting, or rather before it had started, when there was $157,000,000 available, but as has been told you, there is only $9,000,000 available to take care of any possible loans on corn, cotton, and other commodities. Happily, it does not seem there will be any necessity for a cotton loan this year if the conditions keep up and no one rocks the boat; but if the boat is rocked, there is no telling what will be necessary. However, it is hoped that a loan will not be necessary on cotton. Apparently, there will be on corn, and that is just as much a part of the program as cotton or any other commodity. There is only $9,000,000 left uncommitted or not potentially committed in connection with this proposition, according to the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Now, Mr. Chairman, let us do the sensible thing. Let us not build a battleship and not put guns on it. Let us not do a job halfway and then not finish that job.

Mr. FULMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. JONES of Texas. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. FULMER. The gentleman from Virginia referred to the amount appropriated which the Budget Director had not agreed upon. Is it not true that if you fail to appropriate this money, because of destructive prices that money which has already been appropriated will be almost a total loss because of such prices?

Mr. JONES of Texas. There is very grave danger the loss will be much more. If the trade knows and everyone else begins to realize that there is no way to cushion the market or that there is no way to prevent this loss, then the buyer will stay out and say, "It is all going to be dumped on the market, we will not buy now, we will wait until it goes to the bottom," and you may be burning corn like you did in 1932. I do not believe you are going to do that.

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I yield to my friend.

Mr. BOLLES. I would like to know about this $119,000,000 which, as the gentleman has said, is for the dairy, and one other speaker said that it is for the dairy. I would like to know just what is in this for the dairy people.

Mr. JONES of Texas. On this particular proposition, there is $119,000,000 available for every farm commodity in America, if it is needed. There is not any limit whatever, I will say to the gentleman. [Applause.]

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, what has been said by our dear friends from the Southern Cotton States, and from the Northern Corn States, is a perfectly natural statement to have made under the present circumstances, and in view of the fact that this is public business which we are now discussing, and that it involves the funds of the Treasury, of the taxpayers of this country, the few observations which I shall make I think are also perfectly normal.

To save my life I cannot comprehend what ever led the Congress of the United States into such a program in the first place, and, in the second place, why it continues the procedure. Let us look at some of the statements which have been made here for a moment. It is my understanding, and if this is not correct, I hope someone from the Corn States, or the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Agriculture will correct me, that loans will not be made available for the coming crop of corn until perhaps October or November. If that is true, what is the farmer going to feed to the hogs in the meantime, and I am referring now to the remarks made by the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN]. What is the farmer going to feed to the hogs in the meantime except new corn, because considerable old corn crop is under seal.

Mr. GILCHRIST. Not all of it. Mr. CRAWFORD. They say not all of it is under seal. What percentage is not under seal?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Out of 400,000,000 bushels of carry-over old corn there are only 157,000,000 bushels under seal.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Only 157,000,000 bushels under seal. Can those farmers who did not comply in the previous crop year and who put the corn in the bins, not in the loan, get a loan now or at a later date on the old corn?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I wish to correct my figures. It should be 258,000,000 bushels.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, the Commodity Credit Corporation makes loans only on the current crop for which the loans are made.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Then we have the difference between those two figures. The corn in the crib at the present time which cannot be put under loan is going to move to the stomachs of the hog crop now in the feeding pens. If that is not correct I hope someone will take the time to answer that, but if it is correct, it sets off the argument presented by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Dirksen].

Mr. GILCHRIST. Why, the farmers feed green corn and snap corn out of the present crop, and it is never intended that corn should go into a loan or a crib at all, and no one can estimate how much that will be. They can carry their pigs over until they get this crop ready for husking.

Mr. CRAWFORD. That brings us to the point I want to develop, because you can now see that we are not going to get into the facts in this case on account of the limited time. What I would like to do is see this situation analyzed for the specific purpose of getting fixed in our own mind at this point some of the developments that we are up against. Here is a situation where we say to the world that we are going to make loans on these commodities in excess of their market price. That is, we will take these commodities, put them on the shelf, and keep them out of the channels of consumption, and thereby build greater stocks to be financed in the future and bear down on the market prices, whatever they may be. Let me take this thought, for instance. Suppose the coming crop does not go into the loan-and I am now referring to cotton. Suppose it does not go into the loan by reason of the lack of funds? The farmer sells his cotton. The Government does not have to sell its cotton. The Government is strongly financed. The cotton owned by the Government is in strong hands. The Government is not a distressed seller. Therefore, if the Government does not liquidate its inventories on the low price, the Government suffers no actual dollar loss until that stock is liquidated through sale. So the argument which has been made in that respect you may as well set aside.

Let us take another point. You can apply the same situation with reference to corn. Even if you put these stocks of cotton or corn or whatever it may be on the shelf, let me inform you that the purchasing agents of this country are wise, and they are well informed with reference to reserve stocks. They keep their eyes on reserve stocks, and it is the reserve stocks which influence the psychology of the man who does the buying. He knows that some day a Congress, a fickle-minded Congress, or a conservative-minded Congress, is going to reverse the policy, and that these inventories are going to be put into the channels of trade. Therefore he buys from hand to mouth, afraid to acquire ownership. Therefore you keep your markets disturbed You keep people unfriendly to the commodity. constantly. You keep them afraid to buy. You keep them afraid to carry inventories, because you have such great stocks concentrated in the hands of one holder—the Government and that means in the hands of politics, and that is dangerous to the primary growers or producers now and all the rest of the time. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, while millions of people go hungry and half ragged, why do we place goods out of their reach? Why do we not proceed on a basis that will get produced foodstuffs and goods into consumption? That is what they are produced for. Why do we go about, using every device that can be conceived to place goods out of the reach of those who would buy? We all know that is unsound. We all know these accumulated stocks as they pile up from season to season will further demoralize the markets. We all know that as the commodities are concentrated into the hands of government that the political temptation becomes stronger until there comes a collapse that ruins all who hold the goods. I pray that you will let the ownership be held by many people for that will add strength to the market, give confidence to the holders, and help all involved.

The Commodity Credit Corporation is not to be criticized for its actions. They have been authorized by the Congress. But the Congress is subject to criticism for some of its actions. For instance, the Commodity Credit Corporation could save probably as much as $10,000,000 annually on the storage of cotton alone if Congress would permit it to negotiate for better storage rates. But what do we do? Look up the record and see how Congress has protected the warehousemen, instead of the taxpayers. We could at least correct this bad situation, and thereby give the Corporation another $10,000,000 with which to operate.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. O'Neal] is recognized.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee, this is the third deficiency bill. All during the session the Appropriations Committee has struggled with the problems of appropriations. The Subcommittee on Agriculture has been working very strenuously on the important things in connection with agriculture. They did not report their bill until April 1 of this year. We then had the first deficiency bill. We had a second deficiency bill. We had an emergency deficiency bill, and here is the third deficiency bill; and until this day we have heard nothing in the way of dire prophecies as to what is going to happen if the Commodity Credit Corporation did not get this money.

It is always true that the proponents of an increased appropriation make conditions look just as terrible as possible, but is it not just a little strange that this thing about which they speak now suddenly appears so disastrous, and is the big issue in agriculture? It has become the outstanding feature, because the other appropriations have passed. Is it not remarkable that this has not been mentioned to us in the agricultural bill or in any of the emergency appropriations or deficiency appropriations bills this year? Why, gentlemen, you know that if this need could be as these gentlemen try to picture it today, we would have had all kinds of appeals made to us, and other bills would have included other huge sums.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. O'NEAL. I decline to yield until I finish my statement. Not only did these gentlemen not raise their voice before the committee, not only did they not come before us and ask for this before, but also the heads of the Department of Agriculture, who have some knowledge of what was going to happen to the farmer if this thing were not done, did not heretofore seek funds for this purpose. We did not have until this third deficiency a statement made about this proposition by the Department. Finally when they did appear before our committee and testified, there was not one word of dire prophecy as to what would happen to the farmer if they did not get it. We tried to get them to say just what would happen if the money were not put into this fund. The witnesses hesitated to make any statement. They showed no concern. They showed no fear. They showed no great interest in it. The result was that the committee could not get one word as to why this matter should not be deferred and taken up by the regular committee.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. O'NEAL. I decline to yield at present.

Now, ladies and gentlemen of the Committee, you will recall that we have had other agricultural appropriations here. I was led to believe that agriculture was to be assassinated by each of these other appropriations if they did not get them, according to the statements of the same gentlemen who have spoken today. I well recall the arguments on the parity payments and the arguments on the Farm Tenancy Act. Every one of them was the same type of speech and reflected the kind of argument exemplified by the famous speech that "grass would grow in the streets of Chicago." The fact remains that we have appropriated this year $1,206,000,000 plus for agriculture. I wish we had time to discuss this whole commodity-credit program. There are many things about it that this Committee should know. It is not a loan. It is almost a gift-I mean, a loan at a price higher than they could get on the market and without recourse.

The testimony before our committee was that in most cases if they would buy it outright the Government would be better off than under this loan feature.

Now, the figures that have been given are not correct. According to my information, just received from the Department, there is a balance available for loans today of $131,-000,000. It is true that there are commitments, but they run into the future. One hundred million dollars has been committed for wheat and $20,000,000 for corn. That leaves a balance of $9,000,000. What the committee says is that it is a matter that should be handled by a committee giving it study and going into it properly, and it can be done right after the first of the year. The committee believes that nobody will be hurt if we let the regular committee handle it in the regular way, and these frightening prophecies, I think, are a little exaggerated.

We hope you will support the committee. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired, all time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. O'NEAL) there were—ayes 95, noes 94.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed as tellers Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia and Mr. Cannon of Missouri.

The Committee again divided, and the tellers reported that there were-ayes 110, noes 116.

So the amendment was rejected. The Clerk read as follows:

Strategic and critical materials: For all necessary expenses for the acquisition, transportation, maintenance, storage, and rotation of strategic and critical materials in accordance with sections 1 to 6, inclusive, of the act of June 7, 1939 (Public, No. 117, 76th Cong.), including personal services and rental and maintenance of storage space in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; payment of part-time or intermittent employment in the District of Columbia of part-time or intermittent employment in the District of Columbia, or elsewhere, of such scientists and technicists as may be contracted for by the Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, at a rate of pay not exceeding $25 per diem for any person so employed; printing and binding; and traveling expenses; fiscal year 1940, to continue available until expended, $10,000,000: Provided, That when, in order to prevent deterioration, materials purchased with funds from this appropriation are issued to other departments and agencies of the Government, or sold, reimbursement therefor or the proceeds of such sale shall be credited to this appropriation.

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Faddis: On page 50, line 23, after the comma, strike out "$10,000,000" and insert "$25,000,000."

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Chairman, this item is in this appropriation bill because of an authorization bill reported by the Committee on Military Affairs and passed by the House about 3 months ago. The authorization bill provided for $100,-000,000 to be appropriated during the 4 years 1939 to 1943, inclusive, for the purchase of strategic materials. The reason this was not itemized year by year was because the officers of the Procurement Department of the Army and the Navy requested that the entire amount be made available during the 4 years because they thought situations might arise where it would be necessary to spend more than $25,000,000 in any one year.

It seems to me that the Committee on Appropriations has fallen for the same line of propaganda and the same lobbying activities of the American Manganese Producers' Association which has been evidenced in the past 5 years while this matter has been before the Congress. On the strength of the argument that domestic supply can be developed to take care of these materials they have cut this appropriation from $25,000,000 to $10,000,000. I particularly direct the attention of the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] to the fact that this appropriation has been cut down to $10,000,000.

Among the strategic materials are four of first priority: Tin, manganese, chromium, and tungsten. At the hearings before the Committee on Military Affairs upon this legislation, which were very exhaustive and reached into 4 weeks, no one appeared who claimed that by any stretch of the imagination could the United States produce enough tungsten, tin, or chromium to become self-sufficient in these materials. The American Manganese Producers' Association appeared there and made claims as to how much manganese they could produce, but in analyzing their claims we find that under their most optimistic statements they would not in 8 years' time be able to make us self-sufficient on manganese.

I wish to direct the attention of the gentleman from Virginia, and also the attention of the members of the committee here this afternoon, to the fact that this item of $10,-000,000 would purchase only one-seventh of the tin we annually consume. We consume about $70,000,000 worth of tin. We use about $22,000,000 worth of manganese. It would not, therefore, purchase half the manganese we consume in a year, to say nothing whatever about tungsten, chromium, and a great many other of these essential commodities which we do not produce.

All of the testimony before the Committee on Military Affairs regarding these items by members of the Army and Navy Munitions Board, by the Bureau of Mines, by the State Department, or by anyone else who has been paying attention to this matter since the World War was to the effect that we could not possibly hope to be self-sufficient through our domestic production. Throughout the whole matter every effort was made by the domestic producers to prostitute this legislation to their own ends, although they have proven by their own efforts time and time again that they are unable to produce manganese enough to begin to satisfy our domestic requirements. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 2 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, the Committee on Appropriations went into this matter very carefully, as will be disclosed in the hearings, and provided $10,000,000 for the purchase of these critical minerals and materials for the next fiscal year.

It was brought to our attention by the Bureau of Mines that there were possibilities of domestic development of manganese and other materials. Manganese is the No. 1 item in importance. The committee felt from statements made by the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, and the distinguished gentleman from Nevada [Mr. Scrugham], himself a mining engineer, that there were possibilities of domestic development, and that if a smaller amount were used for purchase in the immediate future it would be a greater encouragement for domestic development.

We feel that we have provided enough money for the purchase of these materials for the coming year in order to give domestic producers a chance to supply the demand.

I hope the Committee will leave the item just as the committee reported it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, earlier in the afternoon, on page 35, line 16, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Walter] offered an amendment inserting $7,000 in the bill which had been covered by a Budget estimate for an economic investigation into the coal industry for coal statistics. The gentleman's amendment was worded "For coal economists, $7,000." The Clerk has secured the correct language from the Budget estimate, and I ask unanimous consent that the proceedings had earlier, whereby the amendment was agreed to, be vacated and the consideration of an amendment which I now send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM]?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Woodrum of Virginia: In lieu of the amendment of Mr. Walter, page 35, after line 16, insert a new paragraph as follows: "Economics of mineral industries: For an additional amount for inquiries and investigations, etc., including the same objects specified under this head in the Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1940, for the fiscal year 1940, $7,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, a few days ago the House passed an authorization providing $40,000 for the United States Sesquicentennial Commission, winding up its proceedings. This authorization was for the purpose of printing the proceedings and the material which this Commission had collected for the purposes for which it was organized. The matter was not included in this bill because the authorization had not passed. The sum involved is $40,000, which winds up the so-called Sesquicentennial Commission.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to page 11, after line 23, to insert this item.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Woodrum]?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Woodrum of Virginia: On page 11, after line 23, insert a new paragraph as follows:

"UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION SESQUICENTENNIAL COMMISSION

"For compiling and publishing a history of the formation, the signing, the ratification, and the establishment of the Constitution, including such historical facts and data as the Commission may deem pertinent relative to the commencement of the First Congress of the United States under the Constitution; the proceedings and ceremonies in connection with the inauguration of George Washington as the first President of the United States under the Constitution; the adoption and ratification of the Bill of Rights, and the first meeting of the Supreme Court of the United States; including therein also a final report of the activities of the Commission during the Nation-wide observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the formation, ratification, and establishment of the Constitution, fiscal year 1940, $40,000."

The amendment was agreed to.
The Clerk read as follows:

Military posts: For an additional amount for construction and installation of buildings, flying fields, and appurtenances thereto, including the same objects specified under this head in the Supplemental Military Appropriation Act, 1940, $8,431,300, to remain available until expended, and, in addition, the Quartermaster General, when authorized by the Secretary of War, may enter into contracts prior to July 1, 1940, for the same purposes, to an amount not in excess of $8,500,000, and his action in so doing shall be deemed a contractual obligation of the Federal Government for the payment of the cost thereof.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Woodrum of Virginia: Page 51, line 15, after the word "until", strike out the word "expended" and insert "June 30, 1941."

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to make these funds available until the end of the fiscal year 1941, instead of making the funds available until expended.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KUNKEL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Kunkel: Page 51, line 21, insert: "Military posts: For the construction, rehabilitation, and installation at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., of a medical field-service school and such utilities, equipment, and appurtenances thereto as may be necessary, including all general administrative expenses in connection therewith, without reference to sections 1136 and 3734, Revised Statutes (10 U. S. C. 1339; 40 U. S. C., 267), fiscal year 1940, $375,000, to remain available until expended."

Mr. KUNKEL. Mr. Chairman, the United States Government has a field-service school for the medical department at Carlisle, Pa. Recently one of the buildings at that school was condemned as unsafe. Since that time the Army post there has not been able to use the building. Recently an authorization bill was passed providing $375,000 to be used for this purpose, which has been approved by the Bureau of the Budget.

As I understand it, the Appropriations Committee is not so much opposed to the appropriation as they are to the idea of including it in this deficiency appropriation bill. If the money is not provided at the present time, it will seriously handicap the Army station at Carlisle, because it will not have the use of its gymnasium next winter. The money eventually will be appropriated by this Congress, I am sure. If the amount is not carried in this bill, the post will be deprived of this building for a period of 7 months. The post will eventually get the building, and the construction will be made.

It seems to me the part of wisdom and economy to appropriate the money now, get the building started and therefore put the post in the position of being able to use the building next winter, at which time the gymnasium and the other facilities in the building will be very essential to the upkeep of the post. I dislike taking issue with the Committee on Appropriations, but it seems to me this should go into the pending bill.

Mr. PITTENGER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KUNKEL. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota. Mr. PITTENGER. As I understand it, the gymnasium is now being used for medical purposes and cannot be used next winter?

Mr. KUNKEL. None of the building can be used because it has been condemned as unsafe. As I said before, this item has been approved by the Bureau of the Budget. The War Department is very strongly in favor of it and has helped get approval by the Bureau of the Budget. I hope the Committee will see fit to put this item in the bill.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KUNKEL. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. This building which the gentleman wants to replace is the remains of the old Indian school at Carlisle?

Mr. KUNKEL. The present Army post there is on the site of the old Indian school, which was very famous in the past for its football attainments.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM]?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I want to say just one word and then I will yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER].

This item came up for consideration before the committee but after a thorough consideration of it it appeared to be an item that certainly should go to the subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee having to do with the War Department. It was not an emergency item or a deficiency item, but an item that the subcommittee handling the War Department appropriation bill should study. The distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania, who was chairman of that committee, is a member of the Deficiency Committee and felt that way about it. I am very glad to yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania to make such statement as he feels he should make.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, 2 years ago Senator Guffey put this same item in our War Department appropriation bill over in the Senate and in conference I had it cut out.

Two years have elapsed since then, during which time they could have brought this matter to the attention of my committee if they had elected so to do.

A second reason for my opposition to the amendment is that in fairness to all Army posts I believe we should not choose to allow this item. There are many Army posts which are up against it just the same as is this post. For us to select one Army post before the others is not fair. This post is in my State and I should like to see the item allowed, but as chairman of your subcommittee I do not choose to favor my State in preference to any other State or this Army post in preference to any other Army post. Therefore, I ask the Committee to vote down this amend-

Mr. KUNKEL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SNYDER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. KUNKEL. Two years ago this building had not been condemned as unsafe.

Mr. SNYDER. That may be true. Mr. KUNKEL. So there is now an emergency, whereas then there was not.

Mr. SNYDER. I may say further that I was at Fort Bragg when they were propping up a building with posts. They went out and cut trees and propped up a school building to protect the children. I have been at 50 of our Army posts throughout the United States and I have seen some of the conditions they have to bear there. I believe it would be unjust to allow this item at this particular time.

Mr. KUNKEL. Does the gentleman like to see conditions like that prevail?

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KUNKEL].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Kunkel) there were—ayes 57, noes 97.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Acquisition of land, Republic of Panama: So much of the appropriation for the acquisition of land in the Republic of Panama contained in the Supplemental Military Appropriation Act, 1940, and so much of the appropriation for Seacoast Defenses, Panama Canal, contained in the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal Canal, contained in the Second Denciency Appropriation Act, iscal year 1939, as may be required therefor, are hereby made available, in addition to the acquisition of fee simple title to lands, for leasehold or other interests therein, the temporary use thereof, or right pertaining thereto, without reference to section 3648, Revised Statutes (31 U. S. C. 529): Provided, That the Secretary of War is authorized to accept donations of such land, temporary use thereof, or other interest therein, or right pertaining thereto.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Andrews: On page 52, line 25, after the word "thereto" and the period, insert a new paragraph under the head "Finance Department," to read as follows:

"FINANCE DEPARTMENT

"Pay of the Army, 1939: Not to exceed $60,000 of the unexpended balance of the appropriation under this head in the Military Appropriation Act, 1939, is hereby made available until June 30, 1940, for the construction and installation of a sewage-treatment plant on the Fort Niagara Military Reservation, N. Y., as authorized by the act of June 20, 1939 (Public, No. 136, 76th Cong.)."

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I outlined this amendment at considerable length during the general debate. This amendment does not provide for an appropriation but takes advantage of an unexpended balance. It permits the War Department to construct and install a sewage-treatment plant for the use of the War Department and the adjoining town of Niagara. It would also be to the advantage of the War Department in that it would make possible the consummation of an agreement whereby the village of Youngstown next to this post would pay an annual fee to the Government as a part of its contribution for the use and maintenance of this sewage disposal plant.

If this provision is not in this bill, as it was in the subcommittee report, if it is not adopted at the present time, it will be impossible to complete this agreement and the War Department will be obliged to build this sewage-disposal plant next year without any revenue being derived from the adjoining town of Youngstown.

I hope the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], who indicated to me that he would accept the amendment, and the gentleman from New York feel so disposed at the present time.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 5

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, again I have to ask the Committee to vote down an amendment. First, may I say I did not know anything about this amendment until it came before the subcommittee. The gentleman who offered the amendment never spoke to me about it. However, that would not be so bad, but what I said about the amendment just offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Kunkel], with reference to the Carlisle Barracks, also applies to this case.

There are perhaps 10 to 15 Army posts, some of them outlying posts, that have poor water facilities and sewer facilities, and I believe it would be unjust and unfair to many of my colleagues whom we have turned down from time to time, because we did not have the money, to allow this item at this time. If we could provide all the Army posts with the proper kind of sewer systems, the proper kind of housing, the proper kind of hospitals, and the proper kind of gymnasiums, well and good; but inasmuch as if Congress had adjourned a month ago, when we perhaps should have adjourned, this would never have come up, so I am asking you to let the item go over until next year, when the committee can take it up and give it the consideration that should be given to this item along with other items of a similar nature.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SNYDER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. ANDREWS. Does the gentleman realize that the President of the United States and the Secretary of War have strongly recommended this installation, inasmuch as it is a part of the Niagara River and the international boundary stream, concerning which agreements have been reached with Canada, all other large cities on the river having completed sewage-treatment plants? The War Department will be obligated to build its own plant next year unless it goes in on this agreement, and in addition will get no income from that plant.

Mr. SNYDER. I know that the President and Secretary of War and the rest of them perhaps are in favor of this item but, under the conditions, I ask the Committee to vote down the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Andrews].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Andrews) there were-ayes 35, noes 73.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Investigation and survey of a canal and highway across the Republic of Nicaragua: For every expenditure requisite for and incident to an investigation and survey, with estimates of cost, for a barge canal and highway project across the Republic of Nicaragua, fiscal year 1940, to remain available until expended, $100,000.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TABER: On page 53, line 18, strike out the entire paragraph to and including line 23.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, this is an utterly useless expenditure of the people's money. It is only $100,000, but it means a start on a program that will run into a lot of money. It provides for a survey of a barge canal 10 to 12 feet deep, not deep enough or large enough to carry ships, across Nicaragua. It seems to me that this is one of the most foolish things we could embark upon at this time. It is entirely outside of our own country, in a place where we have no interests, and where we would be doing this as a favor entirely for the other country.

If we are going to do all the surveying for other countries and spend our money there, it seems to me we have come to the end of our rope. I hope this amendment will be adopted.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Did not this body yesterday afternoon authorize $277,000,000 for the expansion of the Panama

Mr. TABER. Yes; but that is in territory that is under our control absolutely.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 2

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, the Budget estimate for this item was $200,000. The committee cut it in half. The situation is that the President, upon the occasion of the recent visit to America of the President of Nicaragua, made some commitments as a gesture of friendship and good will toward that country with respect to securing the assistance of the Army engineers in simply making this survey for Nicaragua. The State Department is very much interested in having it done. It is a very small item and does not commit the Government to anything beyond the survey which is to be made by the Army engineers.

I hope the amendment will not be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Woodrum of Virginia) there were-ayes 82, noes 96.

So, the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read down to and including page 54, line 6.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, the balance of the bill is title II, made up entirely of judgments and authorized claims about which there is no controversy or amendments to be offered. I ask unanimous consent that the balance of the bill may be considered as read.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to, and that the bill as amended do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Cooper, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that the Committee having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 7462), the third deficiency appropriation bill, fiscal year 1939, had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill, as amended, do

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and all amendments to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment? If not the Chair will put them en gros. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill? Mr. TABER. I am.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. TABER moves to recommit the bill to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions to report the same back with an amendment striking out from line 18, page 53, to line 23, page 53.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit.

PACKERS AND STOCKYARDS ACT

Mr. DOXEY. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report upon the bill (H. R. 4998) to amend the Packers and Stockyards Act 1921, and ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi calls up a conference report and asks unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report. Is there objection?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Will the gentleman please explain this?

Mr. DOXEY. Mr. Speaker, we passed an amendment to the Packers and Stockyards Act, known as H. R. 4998. It included only uniform rate provisions. The bill went to the Senate and the Senate placed an amendment on the bill with reference to a certificate. A conference was asked. We have had the conference and the Senate has yielded and the amendment of the Senate has been eliminated. The conference report is exactly as the House passed the bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the statement of the conferees

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill H. R. 4998 submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The bill as it passed the House contained but one section, which would make it mandatory that marketing rates and charges pre-scribed by the Secretary of Agriculture as just and reasonable shall be observed as both the maximum and minimum to be charged and collected from livestock producers.

The bill as it passed the Senate contained an additional section, providing that no person not now conducting the business of a stockyard owner, market agency, or dealer shall conduct such business at any stockyards at which he is not now conducting such business, unless and until he has obtained a certificate from the Secretary that public convenience and necessity requires the conduct of such business.

The action of the conferees is to retain in the bill the first section, as approved by the House, and to eliminate the second section, added by the Senate.

WALL DOXEY,
R. M. KLEBERG,
CLIFFORD R. HOPE,
Managers on the part of the House.

REQUESTING THE PRESIDENT TO TRANSMIT INFORMATION TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, I submitted an adverse report on the resolution (H. Res. 232) requesting the President to transmit information to the House of Representatives, House Calendar No. 127, on July 5, 1939. On that date the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Martin] asked that the matter go over on account of the absence of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. Rogers].

I now call up the resolution and ask that it be tabled.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I decline to yield. I am sorry.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the President of the United States is hereby requested to transmit forthwith to the House of Representatives, if not incompatible with the public interest, such information as may be in his possession or in the files of the State Department which indicates that actual war is imminent between certain countries on the continent of Europe.

The SPEAKER. The Chair promised to recognize the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. Case] to make an annuarement.

THE LATE HON, ROYAL C. JOHNSON

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, it is with deep sorrow that I rise at this time to announce the death today of the Honorable Royal C. Johnson, for 18 years one of the distinguished Members of this House of Representatives, the longest service any South Dakotan has had in either body of the National Congress.

Royal Johnson was elected to the Sixty-fourth Congress and served continuously through the Seventy-second Congress, after which he retired voluntarily. He resumed the practice of law, establishing himself here in Washington, where he has been a valued friend and counselor to those of us who have come after him.

In the Sixty-fifth Congress Royal Johnson voted against the declaration of war, yet, loyal American that he was, he offered to give up his seat in this body to join those whom Congress sent to the colors. He enlisted as a private; he rose to a first lieutenancy as a line officer. He was wounded in action in the Meuse-Argonne. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and the Croix de Guerre with a star. He was really a great South Dakotan and a great American.

Royal Johnson was not an old man when he died, although he went through a world of physical suffering growing out of wounds and exposure. He covered all that with a smile and with a tireless activity. The world never knew; it only marveled at his ability to work and at his vision and at his interest in a wide range of affairs.

Last winter Royal was struck by a car and received injuries that confined him to a bed for weeks, but he never complained. To him disaster was only an impostor.

He was up here on the Hill a few weeks ago when his portrait was unveiled by the national commander of the American Legion and presented by friends to the rooms of the Veterans' Committee of which he was the first chairman. He was still on crutches from last winter's accident but he talked with characteristic courage of the things he was doing again and how soon he would "throw the sticks away." The Congressional Record of yesterday, the one that came this morning, by a strange coincidence, carries the account of those proceedings under the extension of remarks by the present committee chairman, the gentleman from Mississippi, the Honorable John E. Rankin, who is out of the city today.

Yesterday Royal was at his office downtown. Members here talked with him. This morning he suffered an unexpected heart attack and passed away. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery Friday, with services in the chapel at Fort Myer at 10 o'clock, conducted by the Reverend James Shera Montgomery, the Chaplain of the House.

He loved his country. He served his country in peace as well as in war. Those of us who knew him and knew his vigorous Americanism and the great service he gave as a statesman in time of peace, as a soldier in time of war, and as chairman of the House Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation will always honor his memory.

Members will be interested in a brief factual record of his life, which I will insert at this point:

Royal C. Johnson, Republican, of Aberdeen, was born in Cherokee, Iowa, October 3, 1882; removed to Highmore, S. Dak., March 19, 1883; attended public schools of Highmore and Pierre; Yankton Academy and College in 1901–1903; law degree from South Dakota University in 1906; deputy State's attorney of Hyde County, 1906–1908, and State's attorney, 1908–1909; attorney general of South Dakota in 1911–1914; removed to Aberdeen in May 1913; married Miss Florence Thode and has two sons, Everett Royal and Ensign Harlan Thode, United States Navy; was elected to the Sixty-fourth Congress to succeed Hon. C. H. Burke, who was not a candidate for reelection; enlisted in the Regular Army, January 4, 1918; assigned to Company K, Three Hundred and Thirteenth Infantry; assigned third officers' training camp, Camp Meade; sergeant, Company K, Three Hundred and Thirteenth Infantry, April 23, 1918; second lieutenant, June 1, 1918; assigned to Company D, Three Hundred and Thirteenth Infantry; embarked for France with Seventy-ninth Division, American Expeditionary Forces, July 6, 1918; first lieutenant, September 3, 1918; assigned to Company D, Three Hundred and Thirteenth Infantry; awarded Distinguished Service Cross and Croix de Guerre; returned, December 17, 1918; reelected to the Sixty-fifth, Sixty-sixth, Sixty-seventh, Sixty-eight, Sixty-ninth, Seventieth, Seventy-first, and Seventy-second Congresses; was not a candidate for reelection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. MUNDT].

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, it is with unfeigned grief that I learned of the sudden death of a distinguished and honored predecessor, Hon, Royal C. Johnson, who served in this House for 18 years with great distinction. He passed to his reward in this city this morning. His service covered the period from the Sixty-fourth to the Seventy-second Congresses, inclusive (March 4, 1915, to March 3, 1933), when he retired voluntarily. During the Sixty-fifth Congress our country entered the World War. Mr. Johnson was one of 51 Members of the House who courageously voted against the war declaration. Nevertheless, with typical sincerity of purpose, he enlisted in the military service of this Republic and went to the front in France. He resigned from this body that he might better serve his country in the Army, but his resignation was not accepted. He was successively promoted from private to first lieutenant, and for conspicious bravery was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and the Croix de Guerre. Lieutenant Johnson was severely wounded at the Meuse-Argonne and will carry many honorable scars to his grave.

Upon his return to this House he was received with acclaim. He became prominently identified with the American Legion and with other veterans' organizations. It was through his initiative and efforts that the Committee on World War Legislation was created, of which committee he was chairman until the end of the Seventy-first Congress. He originated much legislation beneficial to World War veterans and their dependents. His passing is a great loss to his comrades.

After 18 years of service he retired voluntarily from Congress to practice law in this city. Just a few weeks ago it was my pleasure, as it was also of many Members, to attend a ceremony in the rooms of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, at which time the portrait of Royal Johnson was hung there as the first of a series of what will undoubtedly become a long line of prominent chairmen. I want to take just a moment to quote a few words spoken by Royal Johnson at that time, which seemed to have an almost prophetic tinge:

This is an occasion which can never happen twice in the life of any man, and the expressions of the commander and the chairman of the committee concerning the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation, and my connection with that work between 1923 and 1931, savor much of the reading of one's own obituary. Perhaps it is much like a decoration awarded posthumously.

Mr. Speaker, it is by a most strange coincidence that these remarks of Royal C. Johnson appear in the Record which reached our desks this very day. I hope you will all read the entire proceedings of this unveiling ceremony, which appear as the extension of remarks of the Honorable John Rankin, present chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Committee, as they show clearly that those who knew Royal Johnson best did not wait until after his passing to laud his sterling qualities but were most sincere in their praise of this fine friend and splendid statesman while he was yet among us to receive this testimony.

Only 57 years old at the time of his death, Mr. Johnson has left his impress upon the records of Congress as a wise legislator, and upon his many friends as a lovable character. It may be truthfully said of him that as far as his widespread influence extended he left the world better than he found it as a result of the many kindly and patriotic deeds of the 57 busy years of his distinguished career which today came to such an untimely close.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker-

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Massachusetts.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I want to say just a word as the ranking Republican member of the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation. Had Mr. Johnson chosen to remain in Congress up until this morning he would have held the position I now hold on this committee. Under the Republican administration he served as chairman from January 18, 1924, Sixty-eighth Congress, until he retired from Congress.

Mr. Speaker, every Member of Congress who served with Royal C. Johnson in this House, and everybody who ever met or knew him is deeply shocked today by the news of his sudden passing. The veterans of the World War have lost a comrade who was a true friend and a stanch defender of their interests and rights. He was the first chairman of the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation when that committee was formed in 1924. Prior to that time legislation pertaining to veterans' affairs was considered by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. The World War veterans wanted a committee of their own because of the many other duties of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. The House leadership agreed to the formation of the committee with the understanding that Royal Johnson would become its head, because they knew of his courage, that he was a loyal fighter in the welfare of the veteran and that their interests would be in safe hands under his guidance. It was my great privilege to be appointed to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation when I came to Congress in 1925, and with the exception of the chairman of the committee, I am the only person who served under Royal Johnson's leadership still on the committee. I had been very active in veterans' matters during the war and the period after the Armistice. I had an opportunity to watch Royal Johnson's fine ability, his courage, and his understanding of the many and complex problems facing the veteran. Under his guidance many important pieces of legislation beneficial to the veterans were enacted into law-permanent total disability compensation was raised from $80 to $100 per month, the first big hospitalization program was started, in fact the very groundwork of our present-day veterans law was formulated under his direction.

After a group of World War veterans in Congress, headed by Hon. Royal C. Johnson, petitioned Congress to establish a committee to handle the affairs of World War veterans, and through his efforts the foundation for the present compensation system was established. This committee worked hand in hand with groups of service men on a nonpartisan basis and, through the efforts of the chairman, who, at all times had the veterans' interest at heart, was able to consolidate various veteran agencies under one head, which is now known as the Veterans' Administration.

During Mr. Johnson's chairmanship, the compensation laws were enacted, changing from the old pension system to the present system whereby World War veterans now suffering from service-connected disabilities receive compensation, based upon their pre-war occupational handicap. The far-sightedness in establishing a hospital program in 1925, which has endeavored to keep abreast of the ever-increasing load of veterans needing hospitalization, places this country in the lead so far as the treatment of veterans is concerned. Today, as a result of this far-sighted program, there are 84 hospitals throughout the United States with competent staffs who care for over 64,000 veterans annually.

Vocational-training laws were enacted during Mr. Johnson's chairmanship, disability-allowance laws, a portion of which have been repealed by the Economy Act, insurance laws benefiting veterans were liberalized, and a guardianship service was established, in order that those veterans mentally disabled could have adequate protection.

His active service during the war, in which he was wounded and for which he was decorated with the Distinguished Service Cross, gave him an understanding and sympathy for the problems of the men with whom he served. We shall miss him greatly, for his advice and counsel was invaluable. To his family goes the deep sympathy of all of his friends. A gallant soldier, a great fighter for every cause in which he believed, has gone to his rest.

Mrs. NORTON. May I say that I have been deeply shocked and grieved at the death of my good friend Royal Johnson. Having served with him on the Veterans' Committee when I first came to the Congress, I found him always to be a considerate, courageous, honorable gentleman, and he was largely responsible for many of the finest pieces of legislation to benefit the veterans that have ever been passed by the Congress of the United States.

I sympathize with his family, and I deplore his sudden death.

Mr. LEA. Mr. Speaker, as the only surviving member of the War Investigating Committee, I desire to join in the words of commendation that have been expressed here today for Mr. Royal Johnson. As I recall, Mr. Johnson was the eleventh man of the 15 members of that committee to pass away. I happen to be the only survivor in the House of the War Investigating Committee of 15. May I say that Mr. Johnson was a vigorous, upstanding, virile, 100-percent American citizen and he is worthy of everything that has been said of him today.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, it is with regret that words cannot properly express that I have heard of the death of our beloved friend and former colleague Hon. Royal C. Johnson. I join in the remarks that have been previously made by the gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. Rogers], the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. Norton], and the gentleman from California [Mr. Lea].

Royal Johnson, or "Royal," as we called him, was one of the finest characters that I have ever met or will ever meet. It was a few days ago that I saw him, at which time he appeared to be enjoying excellent health. His death is a shock to his many friends.

One of the first Members that I met when I first became a Member of this body was our late distinguished and beloved friend. From the outset, although of different political faith, he took a deep and personal interest in me. Between us a strong friendship developed, a friendship which I appreciated and valued. A constructive legislator, always fighting the cause of the weak, the memory of his sincerity, his loyalty, and devotion to his country and his friends will always remain with us who had the honor and the pleasure of knowing this fine, sterling character. He exemplified everything that was high and noble in life. Our deepest sympathy is extended to his wife and his children in their great loss and sorrow.

Mr. LUCE. Mr. Speaker, 15 years ago, when the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation was created, largely through the efforts of Royal C. Johnson, it was thought that there should be in its membership some men who had not served in the World War and would be likely to represent the point of view of the public at large. So Homer Snyder, of New York, and I were put on the committee. For the next 10 years I sat with Royal Johnson.

There were those who feared that however well intentioned he might be, his own service would bias him to the benefit of his comrades at the front and to the harm of the public welfare. That fear proved to have no basis whatever. He was preeminently fair. No suspicion of prejudice marred his record. He gave the veterans everything he believed to be their due. He opposed everything that seemed to him not called for by reasoned generosity. So he won the confidence of his committee associates and in turn that of the House.

He was not only a fair man. He was a wise man, a sincere man, a courageous man, a true patriot.

In the war itself and then several times afterward he learned the bitter lessons of pain. They did not harden his nature. They left him more kindly in his contacts with his fellows. So their admiration turned into affection. They regret his untimely death, but they grieve at the loss of a friend.

TRANSFER OF CERTAIN LANDS FROM SIERRA NATIONAL FOREST TO THE YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, CALIF.

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill (H. R. 4635) to transfer certain lands from the Sierra National Forest to the Yosemite National Park, in the State of California, and for other purposes, be recommitted to the Committee on the Public Lands.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. DEROUEN]?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I take this opportunity to ask the majority leader what the program will be for tomorrow, or the rest of the week and the following week?

Mr. RAYBURN. I may say to the gentleman that within the last few minutes it has been decided that tomorrow there will be a vote on the rule making in order the socalled housing bill, unless the plans are changed, and I do not think they will be.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. What will we take up after that?

Mr. RAYBURN. That is all I know of for tomorrow.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. After the rule is disposed of, there will be nothing further?

Mr. RAYBURN. There may be some conference reports and other matters.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. No other rule?

Mr. RAYBURN. No. The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. DEROUEN]?

There was no objection.

COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND CURRENCY

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Banking and Currency may have until 12 o'clock tonight to file a report on the so-called barter bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN]?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. Norton]?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what is that bill?

Mrs. NORTON. That is the telephone bill, so-called. It is a bill for the benefit of the rural telephones throughout the country.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Is it the purpose of the lady to bring that up tomorrow?

Mrs. NORTON. I hope to.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is that the bill which exempts Puerto Rico from the provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act?

Mrs. NORTON. No.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Will the gentlewoman tell us about the rest of the wage-hour legislation?

Mrs. NORTON. We have no legislation other than the bill that was reported by the committee, to be brought up under suspension of the rules. That is the only bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts, There are three bills around here.

Mrs. NORTON. I may say to the gentleman that the chairman of the committee has not asked for a rule on any

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The gentlewoman is not pressing for consideration of that rule?

Mrs. NORTON. Definitely not.
The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. Norton]?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 60 seconds.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I wish to speak with reference to House Resolution 232, which I introduced on June 23 and which has just been tabled. This resolution requested the President of the United States to transmit to the House of Representatives if not incompatible with the public interest such information as may be in the possession or in the files of the State Department which indicates that actual war is imminent between certain countries on the continent of Europe. We have been in session 7 months and the President and the State Department have not given us any real information regarding this subject. I have been in Washington since 1913 and in Congress since 1925. I was in a position before my election to Congress during the years spent in Washington, to learn a great deal regarding the action taken by the State Department and the Congress regarding our foreign affairs and for a number of years I have been a member of the great Foreign Affairs Committee. At no time has the Department of State given to members of the Foreign Affairs Committee so little of their valuable information regarding our foreign affairs. It shakes our confidence and it was of grave concern to me and I believe to all Members of the House when the President made veiled threats as to the imminence of war in foreign countries. And yet we have received from the administration no real details in their possession as to the imminence of any war between the countries on the continent of Europe. It is my belief that the Foreign Affairs Committee in particular should be kept in the confidence of the Department of State regarding matters that vitally affect all the people and the peace and the economic well-being of the United States.

Today the passing of Royal L. Johnson, the former chairman of the World War Veterans' Committee, a World War veteran, badly disabled by the war, gives us fresh cause to do our utmost to govern this country's international affairs wisely, to make every effort to keep this country out of entangling alliances, and to prevent our men from fighting on foreign soil again.

If this country were engaged in a great World War, the Congress would be in continuous session. We should stay in continuous session to guard against a repetition of 1917. If war is imminent in Europe we should stay in continuous session, and I introduced a resolution on June 23 for this purpose. Also we have many measures which Congress should consider in an effort to put our people back to work and to bring prosperity to our country. Wise legislation and the repeal of certain laws would help greatly in securing additional opportunities for the farmers, the workers, and the investors. The country today looks to Congress for help.

My concurrent resolution states concerning the report that the President of the United States said at a press conference on June 20, 1939:

If Congress goes home without enacting new neutrality legislation, and if a war broke out in the meantime, it would be difficult to pass any sort of measure without leaving the United States open to charges that it was favoring one side or another.

It is also reported that the President said:

Therefore it would be to Congress' own advantage to insure itself against getting into any such dilemma.

If the President was correctly reported, such remarks clearly indicate that in his opinion based upon information in his possession, but of which Congress and the American people are not apprised, that war in foreign countries is imminent and liable soon to break out. My concurrent resolution provides first that it is the sense of the Congress of the United States that, regardless of the enactment of any pending so-called neutrality legislation, the Congress ought to remain in continuous session in order to be in readiness to meet any eventuality that may arise that would require the exercise of its authority as representatives of the people, and second, the Congress ought to remain in continuous session to solve the unemployment problem and put people back to work, thus ending the business depression. I want the passage of my resolution.

AMENDMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT LOSSES IN SHIPMENT ACT

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 6614) to amend the Government Losses in Shipment Act, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 6, line 21, strike out all after "Board," down to and including "part," in line 25, and lines 1 to 4, inclusive, on page 7, and insert "including instruments issued by any corporation or other entity owned or controlled by the United States, the funds of which are deposited and covered into the Treasury of the United States or deposited with the Treasurer of the United States, but does not include money, coins, or currency of the United States; as used in subsection (d) of this section it means such an instrument drawn by a duly authorized officer or employee of the Post Office Department."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the Record with reference to the Senate amendment just concurred in.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, upon the recommendation of the Comptroller General of the United States, the Senate amended H. R. 6614 as it passed the House so that duplicate checks of the Government corporations and other entities owned or controlled by the United States will be controlled and approved in the same manner as is the issuance of duplicate checks of the United States. Under existing law a duplicate check of the United States, with certain minor exceptions, is issued only after the owner or holder of the lost check has given the United States a bond of indemnity to protect the United States from any possible loss, but the corporations are not required to receive such a bond of indemnity as a condition precedent to the issuance of duplicate checks. Duplicate checks of corporations are issued pursuant to the rules and regulations adopted by the boards of directors of the corporations. Since the funds of the majority of the Government corporations are either deposited and covered into the United States Treasury or deposited with the Treasurer of the United States, there would appear no reason why any distinction should be made in the class of checks for which indemnity is provided so long as such checks are drawn on and are payable by the Treasurer of the United States.

The Treasury Department, which will have the duty of administering the issuance of duplicate checks if the amendment is adopted, has no objection to the amendment.

UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES IN THE UNITED STATES

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, the deplorable condition in the United States with respect to un-American activities apparently has not been corrected by the Dies committee and conditions have been going from bad to worse day after day.

Mr. Dickstein asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks in the Record.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all those speaking in tribute of the late Royal C. Johnson today be permitted to extend and revise their remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

There was no objection.

Mr. Burdick asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks in the Record.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein a statement by Mr. Landry on the Philippine and Cuban sugar situation published in the Sugar Journal.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIMOND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend the remarks I made today in Committee of the Whole and to include therein a letter written by the President to the chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the Delegate from Alaska?

There was no objection.

Mr. Brewster and Mr. Smith of Ohio asked and were given permission to extend their remarks in the Record.

The SPEAKER. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Church] is recognized for 25 minutes.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein a resolution of one page which I have introduced today, and two letters I have written to the Chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, in connection with our consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill today, it is quite appropriate, I think, for me to call the attention of this House to the deficiencies and inefficiencies of one of the major agencies of the Government. Too much time is consumed in making additional money available to the departments, bureaus, and agencies and not enough time is given to determining how governmental losses in the operations of these agencies may be avoided.

I am today introducing a resolution to provide for an auditing of all accounts and an investigation of the operations of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

I ask unanimous consent to have a copy of this resolution incorporated in my remarks at this point.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The matter referred to follows:

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House of Representatives be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint a select committee to be composed of five Members of the House of Representatives, one of whom he shall designate as chairman, for the purpose of conducting an investigation of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

That said committee forthwith conduct an investigation into collected forth Endered Home Corporation.

That said committee forthwith conduct an investigation into all acts of said Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Home Owners' Loan Corporation, and Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, and all officials thereof, to determine and fix responsibility for any irregularities of administration and any acts of nonfeasance, misteasance, or malfeasance on the part of any official, employee, or agency thereof

That said committee shall cause to be made a complete audit of all accounts of the said Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Home Owners' Loan Corporation, and Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation to determine the extent to which (1) losses have been sustained and are likely to be sustained and reasons therefor, (2) moneys have been unlawfully diverted and expended, and (3) "nonadministrative" funds have been used for "administrative" purposes.

That said committee, or any subcommittee thereof, is hereby authorized to sit and act throughout the continuance of the Seventy-sixth Congress, at such times and places within the United States, whether or not the House is in session, has recessed, or adjourned, to hold such hearings, to require the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents by subpena or otherwise, and to take such testimony, as it deems necessary. Subpenas shall be issued under the signature of the chairman and shall be served by any person designated by him. The chairman of the committee or any member thereof may administer oaths to witnesses.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, it has been frequently indicated in the public press and stated on this floor that the officials of these Corporations and the Board have been guilty of dereliction of duties, irregularities, and misconduct. The time has long since arrived when we should make a complete investigation of all these charges and have some accounting of the vast expenditures made by the officials of these Corporations. All the information that has come to me forces me reluctantly to the conclusion that the taxpayers stand to lose hundreds of millions of dollars because of mismanagement and irregularities. I feel compelled to introduce a resolution for an investigation. It is the only means by which we can get all the facts. Until there is a thorough investigation, there will be alibis and alibiing propaganda to any criticism we make in Congress.

On June 19 I pointed out, from the records of the General Accounting Office, how officials of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation were traveling around the country for purely pleasure and personal business purposes, charging the Government for the transportation. Mr. Fallon, one of these officials, will no doubt have an elaborate alibit to my statement and General Accounting Office records.

Friends of mine, officials of savings and loan associations, have advised me that whenever any kind of a meeting or convention is held there are more Federal officials and employees present than any others. As a matter of fact, John H. Fahey, Chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board itself, probably spends more time away from Washington than at his office. At least, I have received any number of complaints from those having business with the Board Chairman to the effect that they rarely find him in Washington.

Incidentally, I know Mr. Fahey is an executor and trustee of the Edward A. Filene estate in Boston, and, presumably, his work in handling that estate of several million dollars accounts for the fact that he is invariably absent from Washington on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, and sometimes Monday and Tuesday. I do not know to what extent the taxpayers and H. O. L. C. borrowers are paying for his transportation, but I do know they are not getting the benefit of his full service. If that is the situation, it is quite understandable why millions of dollars of the people's money will be lost because of faulty and irregular practices.

Mr. Fahey, the Chairman of the Board, is either overlooking or deliberately ignoring chapter 522, section 17, of the act of July 22, 1932, which provides specifically as follows:

Each member shall devote his entire time to the business of the Board. Before entering upon his duties each of the members shall take an oath faithfully to discharge the duties of his office.

(See U. S. C., title 12, sec. 1437.)

I am making no complaint against the purpose of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. I recognize, as does every Member of Congress, that it has afforded relief to thousands of worthy citizens. At the same time, Mr. Speaker, I think the Congress and the people should know how politics entered into the administration of this law and the extent to which losses will be sustained because of mismanagement.

I am informed that untold amounts are now being spent to conceal the irregularities and mistakes, all in preparation for a possible investigation by Congress. It is thus imperative that we conduct this investigation without delay. The information I have is not mere rumor or hearsay. It comes from reliable sources, from those who are acquainted with every phase of the financial operations of the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation.

From time to time recommendations have been made within the H. O. L. C. organization to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board for improving the accounting methods to prevent any improper diversion of funds. Those recommendations have been entirely ignored. Failure to give consideration to them and the careless do-not-care, easygoing attitude of Chairman Fahey has permitted a continuance of the lax methods and the resultant squandering of millions of dollars.

The most outstanding example of mismanagement of the H. O. L. C. is to be found in what is known as the original New York region, comprising the States of New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut. In this region and the State of Massachusetts it has been estimated that the Government will lose approximately $100,000,000. This loss will be suffered for no other reason than that politics entered into the selection of the personnel and politics entered into the making of loans and appraisals. This loss of $100,000,000, unless perchance there should be a remarkable improvement in the real-estate market, is the direct result of excessive property appraisals by politicians.

I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD at this point a copy of a letter which I addressed to Hon. John H. Fahey, Chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

under date of July 26, 1939, and a copy of another letter to him under date of July 28, 1939.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection. The letters follow:

JULY 26, 1939.

Hon. John H. Fahey, Chairman, Federal Home Loan Bank Board,

Hon. John H. Fahey,

Chairman, Federal Home Loan Bank Board,

Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Fahey: Originating at sources which I believe to be reliable, certain assertions have been made to me indicating mismanagement of the H. O. L. C. under your administration which, unless successfully contradicted, deserve extensive investigation to verify and determine responsibility for such alleged irregularities.

(A) It is alleged that at the close of lending operations the national average of mortgage-refinancing loans was approximately $3,000 for each loan, whereas the individual loan in the States comprising the original New York region average about twice such amount, and the disparity is accentuated by elimination of the said region in computing the national average above referred to. Please furnish me at once with a statement reflecting the number and aggregate dollar value of loans refinanced by the H. O. L. C. in all States, exclusive of States comprising the original New York region, and for comparison the number and aggregate dollar value of loans refinanced in each of the States in the said region. Extension should be made to reflect the average per loan. Further, in this connection, please furnish corresponding information regarding the number and aggregate dollar value of loans refinanced in the State of Massachusetts for comparison with the national average, exclusive of States comprising the original New York region, together with the State of Massachusetts.

(B) It is alleged that the number of properties repossessed from owners under foreclosure proceedings in the States comprising the original New York region and in the State of Massachusetts are excessive in relation to the number of refinancing loans in such States at the close of lending operations, when compared with corresponding repossession ratios in all other States, exclusive of the particular States referred to. Please furnish me at once with a statement reflecting the number of loans refinanced in each of the States in the original New York number of loans refinanced and similar repossessions in all other States as of corresponding date.

(C) It is alleged that projected repossessions under foreclosure (C) It is alleged that projected repossessions under foreclosure proceedings because of prevailing delinquencies in the States comprising the original New Yerk region and in the State of Massachusetts accentuate the disparity in the completed or in process of foreclosure ratio comparison above referred to. Please furnish me at once with a statement reflecting the number of loans delinquent in respect to principal and/or interest for more than 1 year in each of the States comprising the original New York region and in the State of Massachusetts compared with corresponding delin-quencies in all other States at the end of a recent month.

in the State of Massachusetts compared with corresponding delinquencies in all other States at the end of a recent month.

(D) It is alleged that losses from disposition of the acquired properties in the States comprising the original New York region and in the State of Massachusetts are excessive in relation to corresponding losses in all other States. Please furnish me at once with a statement reflecting the number and aggregate ledger values of acquired properties (showing break-down between fore-closures completed and in process) in each of the States comprising the original New York region and in the State of Massachusetts, cumulative to the end of a recent month, together with the number of dispositions of such acquired properties and aggregate proceeds of sales prices (disregarding terms thereof) indicating aggregate and average losses sustained, cumulative to the end of corresponding recent month. In this connection, please advise me the basis of computing ledger values and indicate if losses sustained include all sales commissions to brokers.

(E) It is alleged that the number of personnel employed in the original New York regional office and in each of the State offices (comprising that region) from the inception of lending operations all through November 30, 1936, was disproportionately large in comparison with corresponding personnel in other regional and State offices after taking into consideration incidents of work load differentials. Please furnish me at once with a statement reflecting the number of personnel employed in the State offices comprising the original New York region together with the recommendation.

load differentials. Please furnish me at once with a statement reflecting the number of personnel employed in the State offices comprising the original New York region, together with the regional office at the end of each month during the calendar year 1936, compared with the number of personnel employed in the Illinois and Michigan State offices and in the Chicago and Detroit regional offices for the corresponding periods. It is not necessary to show break-down by departments of these various offices. Further in this connection please show for comparison the number ther, in this connection, please show for comparison the number of personnel in each of the above offices as of March 31, 1937, of personnel in each of the above offices as of mater of, 1801, following the election.

If my requests for these statements are subject to more than one interpretation, please prepare and submit at once statements giving effect to both interpretations. If exact figures are not available, statements reflecting approximations will fit my require-

Should this communication be received at your office during your absence, I will appreciate the issuance of instructions for immediate compliance.

RALPH E. CHURCH.

JULY 28, 1939.

Hon. John H. Fahey, Chairman, Federal Home Loan Bank Board,

Dear Mr. Fahey: Supplementing my letter of July 26, reference is made to paragraph "(D)" and it is noted that I omitted to request similar data relating to acquisition of properties and dispositions thereof in States other than the original New York region and the State of Massachusetts, for comparison.

This supplemental request is being transmitted to your office by messenger and I will appreciate your immediate attention thereto coincident with my letter of July 26.

Sincerely yours,

RALPH E. CHURCH.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHURCH. I yield briefly to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The gentleman from Illinois made some very pertinent remarks on the floor of the House sometime ago, and I ask him if he knows that some of the so-called executives, if you please, or, to use the common vernacular, the "big shots" of the H. O. L. C. and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, have said that there is nothing to fear from this, that there will be no investigation, and that this matter will blow over? They are in effect laughing at the Congress of the United States. Does the gentleman from Illinois understand that?

Mr. CHURCH. I think that is a fair statement.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Does the gentleman realize the significance of their statement, that is, that they have contempt for the gentleman from Illinois and every other Member of Congress, and that they will pursue their own game in their own way and that they do not care for interference?

Mr. CHURCH. That is the point that I am trying to

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Has the gentleman from Illinois any idea as to the number of board meetings the chairman has attended?

Mr. CHURCH. I understand they are very few, but it is difficult to obtain that information. Only an investigation will bring those things out.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I would suggest to the gentleman who has shown such an interest in this, which is a good thing for American Government, to secure that information.

Mr. CHURCH. I will say that thorough investigation by this Congress will get that information.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The gentleman believes that investigation is necessary?

Mr. CHURCH. I am positive. So are many Members of the House.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I agree with the gentleman.

Mr. CHURCH. The distinguished gentleman from Tennessee established a fine record of service over a period of 5 years as general counsel for the H. O. L. C. for his State of Tennessee and I thank him for his contribution. Let me say to the gentleman and to the Members of the House that this matter should be pursued at this session and during the vacation period. There should be no let up and if necessary at the next session of this Congress, when it meets in January, it should be followed up. The delay is costly. A thorough investigation must finally be had—the sooner the better. Again I say that there must be no let up.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHURCH. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin. Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Has the gentleman any hope that we will have an investigation until after the 1940 election?

Mr. CHURCH. This resolution will enable an investigation of these matters now, and if they do not investigate, of course we will in 1940. There should be a nonpartisan, thorough investigation now.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. After 1941 we will have to have a housing program to put additions to the penitentiaries at Leavenworth and other places.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I would like to say for myself, as well as for certain other members of my party, that there are certain of us in this body who invite an investigation into the activities of this Board. So that the gentleman from Illinois speaks not only for his party, but for certain of us in our party, as to the necessity and advisability of an investigation into the activities of this Board. [Applause.]

Mr. CHURCH. I thank the gentleman for his contribution. [Applause.]

At the moment I do not have a reply to these letters. Today is Wednesday, however, and I suppose Mr. Fahey has not yet returned from another week end in Boston. But even before I get the reply I can tell you what the figures will show. I have thoroughly reliable information on the subject, and it was on a basis of this information that the inquiry to the Chairman of the Board was written.

The true picture can best be presented by comparing the loans, foreclosures, and losses per property in the New York region with that of other States. It has been estimated that the national average of loss per property by the H. O. L. C. will be $800. But in the New York region alone the estimated loss per property is placed at $2,000. If we take the New York region out of the national average, the average loss per property outside of New York goes down to $500. That means, Mr. Speaker, that the average loss per property in the New York region will be four times what it will be outside of that area.

I understand that at the present time the H. O. L. C. in the New York region has something like 37,000 properties on hand to sell. If we take the acquired properties in that region, plus those so delinquent in payments that there is every reason to believe they will go to foreclosure, it will be found that 50 percent of all the loans made in the region will represent a loss. That aggregate loss will total around $100,000,000.

Why this $100,000,000 loss in the New York region? Why will the average loss per property be $2,000 as compared with $500 outside that area? The answer simply is that the appraisals were excessive; that politics and gross mismanagement played a large part in the appraisals and making of loans.

During the period from 1933 to 1936 a Mr. Vincent Dailey served as H. O. L. C. State manager for New York. Mr. Dailey was also vice chairman of the Democratic State organization. He is a close personal friend of Mr. Farley. And, as the manager in Massachusetts, incidentally, was none other than Dan Le Hand, brother of Marguerite A. Le Hand, personal secretary to the President of the United States, obviously these men, Vincent Dailey and Dan Le Hand, were selected for political reasons and not for their exceptional knowledge of the real-estate business and executive ability. They were the political bigwigs. Both Vincent Dailey and Dan Le Hand, politicians par excellence, allowed property to be appraised on a basis of the vote value rather than on a basis of real-estate values. Mr. Fahey, chairman of the Board, was their political inferior, and he no doubt took that fact in consideration whenever his attention was called to the H. O. L. C. loan situation in the New York region and the State of Massachusetts. The unfortunate part of it all is that the taxpayers will ultimately pay the losses.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, the original New York region of the H. O. L. C. and the State of Massachusetts constitute an outstanding example of politics in the H. O. L. C., waste and extravagance. It thus results that the Government is estimated to lose $100,000,000 on the H. O. L. C. loans in that area, to lose $2,000 per property as compared with an average loss of $500 per property outside of New York.

We do not know how many millions of dollars have been squandered by the H. O. L. C.—money which should have gone to relieve the distressed but wasted by the officials. There has been no accounting. We do not know to what extent nonadministrative funds have been diverted into administrative so as to evade the limitation placed by Congress on administrative costs.

Mr. Speaker, I know something like $100,000,000 will be lost in the New York region because of gross mismanagement. That in itself warrants an investigation. If this administration refuses to bring the facts to light, it will have to bear full responsibility for what will be revealed when the Republican Party makes an investigation in 1941.

Mr. LUCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the Record at that point, with other remarks about Mr. Royal C. Johnson, some that I will make.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Dickstein). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

SELECTION OF STATE EMPLOYEES IN CONNECTION WITH GOVERNMENT PROGRAMS

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, from the Committee on Civil Service, I report the bill (S. 282) to provide that State employees employed in connection with programs carried on with the assistance of the Federal Government be selected in accordance with a nonpolitical civil-service plan—with various amendments and the recommendation that, as amended, the bill be passed.

Mr. President, this measure, in effect, proposes a "Hatch law" for State employees. It contains teeth capable of masticating almost every species of pernicious political activity of which statehouse machines have been notoriously guilty in the past and, in the absence of Federal restraint, will undoubtedly continue to be guilty in the future.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be received and placed on the calendar.

UNLAWFUL USE OF THE BADGE, MEDAL, ETC., OF VETERANS' ORGANIZATIONS

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, on the last call of the calendar when Senate bill 2365 for the protection against unlawful use of the badge, medal, emblem, or other insignia of veterans' organizations incorporated by act of Congress, and providing penalties for the violation thereof, was before the Senate it was, without objection, passed. I happen to be the author of the bill, which was amended in the Committee on the Judiciary. About the time that bill was passed there was received from the House of Representatives House bill 5982, which is comparable in all respects except for the amendments which were reported to the Senate bill by the Judiciary Committee. The suggestion is made-and I am following the suggestion of the Parliamentarian—that the Senate ask for the return of House bill 5982 from the House, so that the record of the bill may be straightened out.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the House will be requested to return the

ANNA H. ROSA

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1448) for the relief of Anna H. Rosa, which was, on page 1, line 9, to strike out all after the word "Provided", down to and including "$1,000", in line 9, page 2, and insert "That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

Mr. BARKLEY. On behalf of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

MINIMUM AGE (SEA) CONVENTION (REVISED)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Commerce:

To the Congress of the United States of America:

To fulfill the obligations of this Government under the Minimum Age (Sea) Convention (Revised), 1936, I transmit herewith for the favorable consideration of the Congress the enclosed report from the Secretary of State and the accompanying draft bill to implement the convention.

This bill was prepared by an interdepartmental committee after careful consideration of the questions involved. The purpose of the proposed bill is to establish minimum standards for the employment of minors on American vessels comparable to the standards heretofore adopted by the Congress for the purpose of eliminating interstate traffic in the products of child labor. These standards consist in a basic minimum age of 16 years for employment on small vessels and a minimum age of 18 years for employment on large vessels and in certain other maritime employments considered to be particularly hazardous or detrimental to the health and well-being of minors of such ages.

I heartily recommend enactment of this proposed legislation for it will extend still further our frontiers of social progress by erecting additional safeguards against the employment of the youth of our Nation at immature ages.

Inasmuch as the convention heretofore ratified by the Government of the United States will become effective for the United States on October 29, 1939, it is a matter of great importance that legislation be enacted at this session of the Congress.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, August 3, 1939.

MUNICIPAL BANKRUPTCY

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lucasl yesterday gave notice that he hoped to obtain the floor this morning for the purpose of making some remarks. The Chair observes that statement in the RECORD, so the Chair recognizes the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. LUCAS. I do.

Mr. PEPPER. I ask unanimous consent that without the Senator from Illinois being taken off his feet, and without displacing the pending business, the Senate may now proceed to the consideration of House bill 6505, Calendar No. 928, a bill relating to the amendment of the existing municipal bankruptcy law. I will say that I think it will not take more than a few minutes to dispose of the bill, and I have assured the Senator from Illinois that if it does I shall be glad to withdraw the bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. KING. Are there any amendments to the bill?

Mr. PEPPER. There are no amendments except the ones which were passeed upon by the Senate committee.

Mr. KING. There are no changes in the measure as considered by the Judiciary Committee—the subcommittee as well as the full committee?

Mr. PEPPER. Those are all the changes.

Mr. REED. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair state the parliamentary situation. The Chair presumes the Senator from Illinois has yielded for this purpose without yielding the

The Senator from Florida asked unanimous consent that the Senate at this time proceed to the consideration of House bill 6505, the title of which will be stated by the clerk.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 6505) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Florida asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill without taking the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Lucas] off the floor, and without displacing the business before the Senate in charge of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES]. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill H. R. 6505, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary, with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 2, page 2, line 19, after the words "provisions of", to strike out "this act" and insert "the foregoing section", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. The provisions of the foregoing section shall be deemed to be additional and cumulative and not in diminution of any of the powers conferred by the act hereby amended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the end of the bill, to insert a new section, as follows:

SEC. 3. (a) Section 81 of the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States approved July 1, 1898, as amended and supplemented, is amended by striking out so much of such section as reads as follows: "(6) any city, town, village, borough, township, or other municipality" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "(6) any county or parish or any city, town, village, borough, township, or other municipality."

(b) Section 84 of such act, as amended and supplemented, is amended to read as follows:

amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 84. Jurisdiction conferred on any court by section 81 shall not be exercised by such court after June 30, 1942, except in respect of any proceeding initiated by filing a petition under section 83 (a) on or prior to June 30, 1942."

(c) Subsection (j) of section 83 of such act, as amended and supplemented, is amended by inserting at the end thereof before the period a colon and the following: "Provided, That proof of the delivery of such securities for evidences of indebtedness covered by the plan shall be deemed to constitute such written consent." by the plan shall be deemed to constitute such written consent."

(d) Subsection (j) of section 83 of such act, as amended and supplemented, is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The confirmation of any such plan of composition shall not be denied on the ground that the plan submitted for confirmation is at variance with the original plan, which is partially completed or executed, if the terms of the plan submitted for confirmation are not less favorable to the creditors submitted for commation are not less favorable to the creditors than the terms of such original plan, nor on the ground that partial completion of such original plan has made it possible for the petitioner to meet its debts as they mature: Provided, That such inability to meet its debts existed prior to the time such original plan was partially completed."

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, before this amendment is acted upon I should like to inquire about a certain part of it. so that the Record may show what the Senator from Florida claims for it.

In subsection (d), beginning on page 3, the following phrase is used:

Has made it possible for the petitioner to meet its debts as they

I ask the Senator from Florida to explain the meaning of that phrase in this subsection. Does it mean, among other things, that the plan may contemplate payment in full instead of payment of a dividend?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I appreciate the interest of the Senator from Vermont, and I am glad to attempt to answer the question.

What is attempted by this language is to fix the time with respect to which the ability of the political subdivision to pay its debts shall be established not after a great many of the creditors had received refunding bonds and agreed to a plan of composition which reduced the amount of the outstanding debt, the effect of which would be to leave some of the original creditors in such a position that they could claim 100 percent, while the more generous and more fair-minded creditors had agreed to receive a lesser percentage. In order to avoid the injustice which would be suffered by creditors who had agreed to the plan of composition as it had partially been put into effect, which would have been the case if the time of filing the application in the Federal court under this bill were the time with respect to which the date of payment were determined, the time was fixed as of the time when the original plan of composition was agreed upon and put into effect.

Do I make the matter plain?

Mr. AUSTIN. I do not quite follow the Senator. This is what is troubling me about that part of the amendment: Under this clause of the amendment, will it be possible to prefer certain creditors over other creditors with respect to the amount of money to be paid to them?

Mr. PEPPER. Oh, no; on the contrary, Mr. President, let me state the matter in this way:

Let us suppose that at a given time a certain political subdivision owes a million dollars, evidenced by outstanding bonds. Let us suppose that that subdivision, determining that it cannot pay the whole million dollars, arrives at a refunding bond plan, we will say, which contemplates the payment of 75 cents on the dollar of the then outstanding indebtedness. Let us suppose that 75 percent of the outstanding bondholders agree to the plan of refunding or the plan of composition and accept a refunding bond upon that basis. That leaves 25 percent, we may say, of the original bondholders, holding the original bonds. Under the Municipal Bankruptcy Act no political subdivision can get the benefit of the proposed law unless they are unable to meet their obligations, unless the Federal court acts, after full consideration of the case, and after 51 percent of the creditors have applied to the court for a settlement of the outstanding indebtedness by composition, and after two-thirds of all the bondholders have agreed to a particular plan of composition.

With respect to what time must a court find a political subdivision unable to meet its debts? If we take the time when the petition is filed in court, after three-fourths of the creditors have already taken a reduction in their debts. they might be able to pay. It is ability to pay, however, gained at the expense of three-fourths of the creditors who were willing to accept the plan of composition. So, in order to be fair to all the creditors, and so that all of them may be treated alike, it is provided that the time with respect to which the political subdivision must have been found unable to meet its debts was in the original situation, and not after some of the creditors had been generous and tried to be helpful.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for his explanation.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. KING. Does the bill apply solely and exclusively to the situation in Florida?

Mr. PEPPER. Oh, no, indeed; it applies to a great many of the States. It is Nation-wide in its application, and a great many States have already availed themselves of the benefits of the act.

Mr. KING. Is it an act which is to continue indefinitely? Mr. PEPPER. On the contrary, it extends the municipal bankruptcy law only an additional emergency period of 2 years.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee proposing to insert a new section at the end of the bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

EFFECT OF RECIPROCAL-TRADE AGREEMENTS ON AGRICULTURE

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, in June of 1934 the trade agreements program was launched under the direction and leadership of the Honorable Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, with the fundamental purpose of restoring our foreign trade. This program as conceived and executed by the administration is genuinely in the interest of agriculture, of industry, of labor, and, consequently, of the entire Nation.

This program was designed to stimulate and increase the sale of American agricultural and industrial surpluses, as well as to safeguard American exports from discrimination abroad. That was the crucial problem that this administration faced when it came into power in 1933. And these conditions were found to exist primarily because of a measure passed under a previous Republican administration known as the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act, of which I shall speak at some length in the course of these remarks.

TRADE AGREEMENTS PROGRAM FUNDAMENTALLY SOUND

The Senator from Illinois is convinced that the principles underlying the trade agreements program and the methods involved in its administration are fundamentally sound. The act directs the President of the United States to continue the traditional policy of the United States to treat all nations alike on a basis of equality and nondiscrimination, in other words, the policy of the most-favored-nation treatment, and I submit that this is most important.

Francis Sayre, in his new book, entitled "The Way Forward," says that the four underlying objectives of the act which must guide the President in seeking to increase American exports through reciprocal-trade agreements are: First, to restore the American standard of living to predepression levels; second, to increase domestic employment; third, to increase American purchasing power; and, fourth, to maintain a sound relationship between various groups of American producers.

Before the agreements are finally negotiated every interested party is given full opportunity to present evidence in support of his views, and all of this evidence is carefully considered by the trade-agreements organization before a decision is reached on any given item. All of the available resources of the Government in the way of factual information and expert analysis are employed in checking and rechecking every phase of the problem.

CONTRAST WITH LOGROLLING TARIFFS

Can anyone honestly doubt that these objectives and methods represent a great advance over the old logrolling methods of tariff making with which we are so familiar? If there is a Senator in the Chamber who has any misgivings as to what happened in those good old logrolling tariff days, I respectfully urge him to ponder well what our esteemed colleague, Senator Capper, said on the subject on the floor of the Senate in 1934, during the debate on the adoption of the Trade Agreement Act:

As a matter of fact, if the job is only to revise the tariff schedules, if bargaining with other nations is left out of the picture, our experience in writing tariff legislation, particularly in the post-war era, has been discouraging. Trading between groups and sections is inevitable. Logrolling is inevitable, and in its most pernicious form. We do not write a national tariff law. We jam together, through various unholy alliances and combinations, a potpourri or hodgepodge of sectional and local tariff rates, which often add to our troubles and increase world misery. For myself, I see no reason to believe that another attempt would result in a more happy ending.

Mr. President, in my endorsement of the fundamental principle of our present tariff policy I should like to have it distinctly understood that I do not necessarily agree with every detailed decision on every individual item in the trade agreements thus far negotiated. There may well be some individual cases where my judgment would differ from that of the persons who were responsible for the particular action taken. And when such is the case, I shall have no hesitancy in challenging the efficacy of the agreement affecting such commodity.

NO QUARREL WITH HONEST DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

I also appreciate that there are learned and sincere men in and out of Congress who oppose the present tariff policy. It should be understood that I do not cavil at any honestly held difference of opinion, however strongly I may be convinced that it may be mistaken. I am happy to believe that this group of men is genuinely interested in a successful foreign trade policy, irrespective of what party may be in power. That group will agree with me that the trade policy with foreign nations does not in the slightest hinge upon partisan politics. There can be no disagreement upon the plain, unvarnished truth that our economic life is inextricably bound up with that of the rest of the world. That is especially true if we hope to maintain our high standard of living which leads that of every other nation of the world.

THE SAME OLD SHELL GAME; STIRRING OF FALSE ALARMS ABOUT FARM IMPORTS

Mr. President, what I shall complain about in the discussion of these trade treaties and our foreign policy is the questionable methods employed by a small but vociferous group of people in this country in their efforts to stir up public opposition against the trade-agreements program without giving to the people all of the facts. Seldom a day goes by that one cannot see the Congressional Record well garnished, if not laden, with speeches and exhibits that fail to present all of the facts from which an honest opinion of our foreign economic policy could be formed. It is not a violent presumption to say that such speeches and exhibits, when devoid of important facts, are intended to spread false alarm among the farm people that all is not well with our foreign trade. Is it a fair presumption to say that those who use tactics of filling the RECORD with bobtailed, half-baked statistical tables about imports of farm products are doing that for political reasons rather than trying to inform the American farmer honestly? A casual investigation reveals that most of these critics are the heirs of the old embargo tariff crowd which did so much to bring agriculture to the sorry mess it was in when the present administration came into office in March 1933.

EMBARGO TARIFFS TO THE RESCUE—SHADES OF SMOOT-HAWLEYISM

Many are now wondering, just who are these individuals who criticize this trade policy for apparent political reasons? Bear with me for a brief review of our trade policy following the war, which, through lack of vision and economic world-wide understanding, brought this Nation to an economic collapse. It is generally understood that following the war infant industries in competition with American industries were established in nearly every country and there was a vast expansion in the production of many agricultural commodities in competition with American producers. While this process was going on American statesmanship stood idly by and followed a policy of drift. There was apparently little thought given to the fact that overnight we had changed from a debtor to a creditor nation, which should have instantly notified wide-awake governmental officials interested in our foreign trade that important trade readjustments with other nations were indispensable. Instead of facing the facts, we tried to maintain exports above imports by loaning to foreign governments money with which to buy our goods. That policy proved costly in the end, as everyone knows. From 1925 to 1929 this country loaned over a billion dollars a year in foreign lands, and yet at the same time we were championing a policy of continuous and progressive tariffs until the crash of 1929 came and chased all nations, with America in the lead, to economic nationalism.

The campaign promises of the Republican Party of 1928 bore fruit in the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act. Against the advice of a thousand economists the party in power raised the tariff to unprecedented heights. Nations finding it impossible to sell anything in America over the tariff wall retaliated with similar barriers, and thus was precipitated price deflation and fluctuation of currencies. Economic security was a thing of the past. Confidence was destroyed, and in the wake followed the twin goblins of fear and disaster, all of which brought on a world-wide economic collapse which hurled us into the most severe depression which the world has ever experienced.

This, my colleagues, is a portrayal of world conditions in 1932 when this administration came into power and to which these embargo-tariff advocates would apparently have us return. I seriously ask the people of the Nation if they want to follow a leadership which yearns to return to the good old tariff days. What does the record of these tariff-barrier advocates show?

FARM INCOME IN 1938-39 AS COMPARED WITH 1932

It shows that in 1932, the last year in which they were in control of the Nation's tariff policy, gross farm income in this country amounted to $5,600,000,000. By 1937 it was up to practically $10,000,000,000, not including benefit payments, and, although it declined in 1938, it was still nearly $9,000,000,000. In other words, gross farm income in 1937 and 1938 was some 60 to 80 percent higher than in 1932. Department of Agriculture figures show that, after deducting certain business expenditures, farmers had an income available for living amounting to $5,200,000,000 in 1938, as compared with $1,800,000,000 in 1932—nearly three times as much in 1938 as in 1932. In 1932, agricultural income constituted only 6.6 percent of our grossly depleted national income. By 1938, our national income having meanwhile greatly increased, agricultural income had increased to about 9.5 percent of the national income. In 1936 and 1937 it was about 10 percent.

During the first 4 months of 1939 there was some decline in farm income as compared with a year ago. This was due chiefly to a smaller amount of cotton being sold or placed under loan at a price level about the same as last year. Nevertheless farm cash income for the 4 months of 1939 was $1,960,000,000 as compared with $2,060,000,000 a year ago.

Including benefit payments it was actually higher than for the same period last year—$2,240,000,000 as against $2,230,000,000. Compare these figures with 1932, when, for the same months, farm cash income was $1,530,000,000. Excluding Government payments, farm cash income for the first 4 months of this year was 28 percent higher than in 1932.

For the crop year 1932–33 farmers in this country got an average of 38 cents a bushel for their wheat. In 1938 they got 55 cents. In 1932 they got 31.9 cents a bushel for corn, as against 50 cents in 1938; for oats, 15.7 cents in 1932 and 22 cents in 1938. In 1932 they received $3.44 a hundred pounds for hogs, as against $7.74 a hundred in 1938; and $4.07 a hundred for cattle in 1932 as against $6.53 a hundred in 1938. In 1932 the cotton farmer got an average of 6.5 cents a pound for his cotton as against 8.6 cents in 1933. In 1932 butterfat prices averaged 17.9 cents per pound; in 1938, 26.3 cents. And let me add that these various prices for 1938 do not include the additional income received by some of these producer groups in the way of benefit payments.

In spite of a decline in many farm prices during the current year, I notice they still compare very favorably with prices in 1932. As of June 15, 1939, farmers in this country were getting on the average 62.5 cents a bushel for wheat as compared with 37.3 cents on the same date in 1932; for compared with 37.3 cents on the same date in 1932; for conts, 29.9 cents a bushel as against 28 cents in June 1932; for oats, 29.9 cents as against 19.8; for hogs, $5.96 a hundred as against $2.82; for beef cattle, $6.81 a hundred as against $3.81; for cotton, 8.7 cents a pound as against 4.6, and for butterfat, 22.2 cents a pound as against 14.6.

There you have a truthful and honest comparison of how the farm situation stood in 1938 and stands today as compared with the agricultural wreck that this administration had to begin salvaging when, by overwhelming demand of the voters, the devotees of embargo tariffs finally, by request, relinquished control of our national affairs back in 1932. Even the shortest of memories will be painfully jogged by these facts.

Now then, in calling attention to these figures, I do not imply that farm prices and farm income today are all that we want them to be. Not only can I read the market quotations in the daily papers, but I own farm lands myself and I live among farm people. We have a long way to go. But I think every farmer will do well to ask himself sincerely and honestly if, in view of the advances which have been made under the present program, he would wish once more to entrust himself to the loving and tender care of the embargo tariff devotees whose record is one of total collapse in their final days of unstable and tottering power.

THEY WISH THEY HAD NEVER HEARD OF 1932

They, themselves, are a little embarrassed when the farmers of the Nation raise such questions, for I observe that they make a strenuous effort to divert our attention from 1932. Their comparisons, I note, are always with conditions of today as contrasted with the conditions in the twenties. In fact, tables of this general type are, from time to time, inserted in the Congressional Record; comparisons of farm prices are made, not with 1932, but with the twenties, or with average prices computed during the long and difficult upward pull since 1932.

In their tender solicitude for the farmers they ask that we simply blot from our memory the dire happenings which occurred between 1929 and 1932. This, of course, is an insult to American intelligence. It is too transparent. We are asked to ignore experience.

SEDUCING THE FARMER WITH PLAUSIBLE NONSENSE

And yet, in the face of that experience, there is no end to the meaningless babble about farm imports. Unceasing is their cry of "the American market for the American farmer." Who disagrees with them? And what American farmer do they mean? The cotton farmer? The wheat farmer? The corn farmer? The tobacco farmer? The fruit grower?

What nonsense.

Is there anyone in this country with a modicum of farm intelligence who does not know that in ordinary years these great branches of agriculture already command all of the American market. Certainly everyone knows that here and there will be found some particular type or grade of product which must be imported. Obviously, it cannot be a question of getting or keeping the American market for the American farmers listed above, for they already have it. What they need is foreign markets for the surpluses they cannot sell at home.

Take the case of corn hogs, in which my own State is particularly interested. There was a great deal of talk in the campaign last fall out in my country, following the droughts of 1934 and 1936, about imports of corn. In the year beginning July 1, 1934, with a billion-bushel shortage in the corn crop of 1934, imports of corn increased to a little over 20,000,000 bushels. In 1935–36, 31,000,000 bushels came in. And in 1936–37, with another billion-bushel shortage in the 1936 crop, 78,000,000 bushels were imported. Compare these import figures with a normal domestic crop of around two and a quarter billion bushels. Do such figures indicate that the corn farmer can be made prosperous by shutting out imports? Would the blocking of every single crack and crevice in an attempt to preserve the American market for the corn farmer do the trick? Of course not. The figures speak for themselves.

The increased imports during this period made up in only a small degree for the severe and unusual domestic shortage, and the imports were badly needed in our country. They came in over the full tariff rate, because rising domestic prices drew them in over the tariff. In 1937-38 they fell to 34,000,000 bushels, and, for the 11 months ending May 30, 1939, they amounted to only about 300,000 bushels, an amount which could be produced in any one of the many corn counties in Illinois. Even at their peak, these imports were equivalent to only about 3 percent of the average production of corn in the United States.

When comparisons are made by these political opportunists to corn imports, then, and only then, do they find it expedient to recall that there was such a year as 1932. That is the only time Senators will ever hear them discuss the agricultural problems of that year. Of course, there were extremely small imports of corn in 1932, because out in my section of Illinois the domestic price was never as much as the tariff rate of 25 cents a bushel. Can any reasonable human being imagine any person in the Argentine, or in any other corn-producing country, being so foolish as to ship corn to this country in 1932, paying 25 cents for tariff and then disposing of their produce on the American market at a price substantially lower than 25 cents a bushel?

The simple fact is that under normal weather conditions the corn industry, or, better still, the corn-hog industry, is on a net-export basis by a distinct margin. Before the world depression we were exporting about 40 percent of our total lard production. Under normal conditions of production we still are exporting between a fourth and a third of our total production of lard. We also export substantial quantities of pork and other hog products. Imports of these products are insignificant. Net exports of corn are likewise substantial. Last year, under the impetus of the trade agreements, this country exported more than 100,000,000 bushels of corn, which is, I believe, the second largest annual export on record.

The real problem of the corn-hog farmer is how to get rid of the surpluses which cannot be profitably absorbed in the domestic market. That cannot be done through piling on high tariffs and inviting retaliatory high tariffs by customer nations. It means, on the contrary, that we must follow a tariff policy designed both to reopen foreign outlets and to make the domestic market more prosperous.

This corn-hog case is an apt illustration of what I meant a few minutes ago when I said that this talk about "the American market for the American farmer" is in reality a meaningless babble so far as concerns the farmer who exports. But what about those branches of agriculture which do not produce enough, even under high tariffs, to meet our domestic requirements? Why not reserve every small fraction of the domestic market for these deficit branches of our farming industry?

This can be done if we want to pay the price. But what is the price? It means that for every additional acre we put to work in such fashion we shall lose probably 4 acres now devoted to the production of export crops.

On this point I wish to quote from an address made by Secretary Wallace at Lincoln, Nebr., on May 4, 1936:

By all means let us make the most of the home market. But I want you to think seriously about the fact that farmers have more to lose through nationalistic policies than any other group. In the present year—1936—farmers are cultivating probably thirty-five to forty-five million acres that are going to produce things which will be sold abroad. The most additional land they could use by cutting out imports would be perhaps 10,000,000 acres. It just wouldn't be good sense to risk having to leave 35,000,000 acres. It don't think farmers are foolish enough to trade dollars for quarters, no matter how strong the pressure may be by those who are busy grinding their own axes.

There we have the nub of the whole situation. The fact is that the whole idea of solving our farm-surplus problem by simply putting embargo tariffs on everything that has the same agricultural name as something produced in this country is a snare and a delusion. In my humble opinion, instead of solving the surplus problem such an extreme tariff policy can only aggravate it. What results is a vicious circle of embargo protectionism all around and greatly reduced foreign market outlets for our exportable surpluses of farm and other products. In this vicious circle of trade annihilation the home market also will shrink. In consequence the very industries that think they are benefiting when they squeeze out the last pound of imports that are assumed to be competitive will find, in most cases, that they have succeeded only in making themselves the exclusive possessors of a poorer market.

The truth is that this embargo tariff game is an extremely costly one, no matter how we look at it. We cannot preserve the American market by that method. We can only destroy it. We found that out in 1930. Of all the phases of our national life it is costliest to agriculture because of agriculture's great dependence upon export outlets.

Does this encounter with bald facts discourage the disciples of embargo tariffs? Indeed, it does not. On the contrary, they go on piling up propaganda by the ton about farm imports—propaganda that is wholly unsound in its premises, wholly misleading in its inferences, and basically opposed to the real interests both of the farmer and of the Nation. They have shown beyond question their willingness to play upon the prejudices of any among our farming population who can be influenced by the dissemination of statistical or other material veneered with pious fraud. True, there is no law against it if they can get away with it, but it would appear to be a mighty poor way to protect the interests of the American farmer and the American people.

Mr. President, I cite to the Senate as one classical example what occurred last year in my campaign for the United States Senate. My opponent was so bold and brazen in the quotation of incorrect figures upon this question that he attracted the attention of Robert Vanderpoel, financial editor of the Chicago Evening American, and one of the outstanding financial editors of the Nation. Vanderpoel, who ordinarily shuns politics, was so outraged with this type of propaganda that he stepped away from the field of finance long enough to advise his readers in the following words:

This candidate certainly must know that if international trade is to exist it must be two-way trade. He must know that the goods produced in this country and shipped abroad provided jobs. He probably did not know, it is true, that, as a whole, the industries successful in export markets pay higher wages than those industries which complain of foreign markets. This being true, it must be obvious to those with open minds that the American standard of living is higher than it would be if foreign goods were barred from this country and, as would necessarily have to be the case—the United States ceased shipping its goods abroad.

The amazing part of it is that this candidate, of whom the impartial financial expert said, "the intellectual standard of his talk could not have been lower if he had been running for the smallest ward office," is now running up and down the State as an announced candidate for high office in 1940, mouthing the same vicious, incorrect, and unwarranted propaganda to which he gave utterance in 1938. Surely intelligent farmers and those interested in the trade agreements will not be deceived by such demagogic tactics.

THE FARM IMPORT BOGEY-STATISTICAL HOCUS-POCUS DELUXE

To be sure, the method of stirring up fictitious alarm about farm imports follows the same pattern wherever it appears. It all is based upon a line of statistical hocuspocus embedded in the false premise, already mentioned, that all imports of agricultural products other than perhaps a few things like rubber, coffee, tea, silk, cocoa, perhaps, and bananas, are bad for the farmer, and the more of them the worse it is. So these so-called friends of the farmer, with their sophomoric statistics, busy themselves in fixing up tables showing imports of agricultural products in whatever way the figures can be assembled to make it appear that something terrible is happening to the farmer.

Let there be an increase from 500 to 5,000 pounds in imports of some item that bears an agricultural connotation, and an increase of 900 percent is played up in the RECORD and dangled before the farmer as if it were the final measure of catastrophe visited upon him by a perverse and unsympathetic Government. Sometimes the tables give actual percentages. At other times this is left to the unsuspecting victim of such propaganda to compute for himself.

That the domestic production and consumption of some article which bears the same name runs into millions of pounds, perhaps even billions of pounds, is never mentioned. To what extent the imports are competitive, if at all, is never mentioned. Never a word is there, either, as to whether the imports increased because of domestic crop failure or some other temporary or special condition; nor is any word mentioned about agricultural prices or income, if, meanwhile, these have also been rising. Only a loud silence is bestowed upon such pertinent factors by the devotees of embargo tariffs.

HOW 1937 FARM IMPORT FIGURES WERE USED FOR POLITICAL DECEPTION

Such shameful misuse of trade figures reached the most extravagant heights in dealing with statistics of 1937 and 1938, following the drought of 1936. Due in large part to effects of the drought, and also to a marked economic recovery in 1937 which resulted in greatly increased imports of agricultural raw materials, there was in 1937, as we all know, a large increase in the import of agricultural produce. At the same time there was a decided falling off of exports in some important types of farm products affected by the drought. In some cases there was even a temporary domestic shortage, and a reversal of the normal flow of trade.

This was too tempting a situation for the proponents of embargo tariffs to resist. Because imports of agricultural products had increased from around $1,070,000,000 in 1935 to $1,240,000,000 in 1936 and then to $1,580,000,000 in 1937, it was easy to get up gruesome tables about such imports for the delusion of the unsuspecting. Since exports of many farm products fell off sharply or disappeared during the crop year 1936–37, it also was easy to pretend that little was being accomplished through trade agreements toward restoring foreign-market outlets for our farm surpluses. So the country was flooded with figures intended to stir up fear and alarm about increased imports, or figures which belittled the progress which most certainly had been made in reopening export channels.

WHAT THE 1937 AGRICULTURAL IMPORTS CONSISTED OF, AND WHY THEY INCREASED

This whole performance was a colossal hoax. The fact of the matter was that of the $1,580,000,000 worth of agricultural products we imported in 1937, well up toward half-$711,000,000, or 45 percent—consisted of major types of agricultural products of a kind not even produced in the United States, such as coffee, tea, rubber, carpet wool, and so forth. Another $161,000,000 worth, or 10.2 percent, consisted of products imported chiefly because of the drought, such as corn, wheat and wheat flour, meat products, barley malt, tallow, and butter. A further $166,000,000 worth, or 10.5 percent, consisted of sugar, a product on which we not only had a high tariff but also highly restrictive quantitative limitations on imports under our sugar quota legislation. A further $447,000,000 worth, or 28.3 percent, consisted of major types of products which we normally do not produce in large enough quantities for our own needs, even though we levy high tariff duties on most of them, such as dutiable types of wool, flaxseed and certain other oilseeds, sausage casings, olives, and so forth. There was a residual item of some $95,000,000-6 percent-consisting of minor items similar in nature to the items included in these various categories of major items and properly falling within one or the other category.

A CONSPIRACY OF SILENCE CONCERNING THE RISE OF FARM INCOME IN 1937

These attacks contained no hint that, excluding sugar (imports of which were under quota control), only about 4 percent of all of our agricultural imports in the crop year 1936–37, following the 1936 drought, consisted of trade-agreement items.

Obviously, therefore, trade agreements could have had little bearing on the increase in imports. They failed to state that duty reductions made on farm products in the various trade agreements were a negligible factor in the whole situation. They failed to state that in 1929 our agricultural imports amounted to $2,220,000,000, as against the subsequent peak figure of $1,580,000,000 in 1937. They failed to state that in the very year 1937, which is generally used as the basis for a great deal of hullabaloo, farm cash income went up to $8,600,000,000, as compared with $8,000,000,000 in 1936 and $4,600,000,000 in 1932.

And yet in 1932 farm imports had descended to a rockbottom level of $668,000,000. Concerning these things there has been only a loud and significant silence from the deceptive propagandists.

Now, every reasonable and informed person should know that the cumulative effects of the droughts of 1934 and 1936 were a highly abnormal element in the trade picture, resulting in greatly increased imports and greatly reduced exports of drought-affected items. It was likewise obvious that rapidly improving economic conditions during the latter part of 1936 and throughout most of 1937 had resulted in large increases in imports of various agricultural raw materials; and I do not think anybody had any reason to complain about that. It was pointed out repeatedly by responsible officials of the Government and by many others that, once the effects of the drought wore off, imports would recede and exports of grain and livestock products and of other items affected by the drought would recover. With the harvesting of the new crops in 1937, that is exactly what happened.

THE LARGE INCREASE OF AGRICULTURAL EXPORTS IN 1938

In 1938 our exports of agricultural products reached the highest point since 1930, namely, $828,000,000. This level was attained, moreover, in spite of a 38-percent decline in exports of raw cotton, from $369,000,000 in 1937 to $229,000,-000 in 1938-a decline which was due partly to shrinking foreign industrial activity, partly to increased foreign competition in cotton production, but more especially to the fact that our cotton was pegged above world levels for cotton. Our exports of farm products other than cotton increased by $171,000,000, or 40 percent, as compared with 1937. The biggest increase was in grains and grain preparations-distinctly drought-affected items—namely, from $94,000,000 in 1937 to $223,000,000 in 1938. There was some increase in pork and lard exports-from $29,000,000 to $36,000,000-but the lagging effects of the drought still were felt in connection with this item. Exports of unmanufactured tobacco increased from $135,000,000 to $156,000,000; exports of fruits and fruit preparations from $80,000,000 to $96,000,000.

AGRICULTURAL EXPORTS DURING THE PRESENT YEAR, 1938-39

The figures I have just quoted relate to the calendar year 1938. Recently figures have been given out by the Department of Agriculture for the first 10 months of the fiscal year 1938–39, including the last 6 months of 1938 and the first 4 months of 1939. These figures show a decline in the value of our agricultural exports during this 10-month period as compared with the corresponding months of 1937–38, a decline from $777,000,000 to $613,000,000, or 21 percent.

In connection with a program of this kind I do not mind giving the honest facts as they exist. One of the reasons why I am giving the particular decline of agricultural exports during the last 10 months of this year is that I want the American people to know the facts in connection with these reciprocal-trade agreements.

This decline was chiefly due to the continued low levels of cotton exports during 1939, but also partly due to other causes. As stated above, American cotton, normally our leading agricultural export commodity, was priced well above competitive levels in world markets and a large part of our better-grade cotton was tied up in loans. This situation, together with discouraging world conditions, caused our cotton exports to fall to about 57 percent of 1937–38 levels.

Shipments of American agricultural products into foreign markets in the last half of 1938 and early months of 1939 were hampered by adverse world economic conditions. World industrial activity was at a low ebb. Foreign markets were unsettled by international tension. Furthermore, foreign production of a number of commodities which compete with leading American farm exports increased greatly. In Argentina, for example, the 1938–39 wheat crop was almost twice that of last year, and the rye crop more than tripled.

As a matter of fact, considering the unfavorable world situation, exports of agricultural products other than cotton held up very well during the 10-month period between July 1938 through April 1939. In terms of quantity, as measured by an index, they actually increased about 8 percent over the high 1937-38 level. Lower prices, however, caused about an 8-percent decline in terms of value. Shipments of American tobacco, fruits, grains and grain products, meat, and lard to foreign markets were all greater in terms of quantity than for the same period last year. Improved access to foreign markets obtained through trade agreements unquestionably helped to sustain exports of these products.

Even in value terms, and even when cotton is included, our agricultural exports this year are much larger than in 1932–33. The value of our exports of all agricultural commodities in the 10-month period from July 1932 to April 1933 was estimated at about $503,000,000. For the same months in 1938–39 such exports were valued at $613,000,000, an increase of about 22 percent. Inclusion of cotton, however, greatly distorts the comparison, and minimizes the gains registered on other products. When cotton is excluded, the value of our agricultural exports increased by more than 91 percent as compared with 1932–33.

THE SHARP DECLINE IN AGRICULTURAL IMPORTS IN 1938 AND 1939

Turning now to the import side of the picture, the figures show, as had been forecast, that agricultural imports declined very sharply during the calendar year 1938 and early 1939. From $1,580,000,000 in 1937 they dropped to nine hundred and fifty-six millions in 1938, a decline of six hundred and twentyfour millions, or nearly 40 percent. Again the two factors already mentioned-general business conditions and the 1936 drought-were, in their reverse aspects, the chief influences governing the trend of our agricultural trade. Primarily because of the business and industrial recession there was a sharp decline-from $711,000,000 to $479,000,000-in the imports of agricultural products of a kind not produced in the United States, such as rubber, silk, carpet wool, coffee, tea, spices, and various fibers-nearly half the decline being accounted for by rubber alone. But the business recession was also an important contributing cause of the sharp decline in imports of other items, such as hides and skins, clothing wool, and vegetable oils. The passing of the effects of the drought contributed to the reduction in imports of vegetable oils and flaxseed, and was the chief cause of the sharp decline in imports of corn, wheat, fodder, and feeds.

For the most part, the 1938 trends have continued into 1939. The decline was sharper in imports of agricultural commodities more or less similar to kinds produced in the United States than it was in those types not produced at all in commercial quantities in this country. The value of imports of agricultural products into the United States during the first 10 months of the current fiscal year—July 1938—April 1939—was 19 percent lower than during the corresponding months of last year. Actual quantities imported also fell. Particularly great declines took place in quantities of imports of corn, 99 percent; barley malt, 49 percent; barley grain, 99.9 percent; hogs, 99 percent; butter, 60 percent; and dried eggs, 80 percent.

WHAT OUR AGRICULTURAL IMPORTS CONSISTED OF IN 1938

By 1938 the drought factor was practically eliminated as a disturbing element in the trade picture, except as regards livestock products, as to which there was still some lagging effect. Let us look more closely at the 1938 import figures, therefore, and see just what it is, of an agricultural character, that we normally import into this country.

Of our total agricultural imports of $956,000,000 in 1938, it appears that $479,000,000-50 percent-were of a type not even produced in the United States. A total of $9,600,000-1 percent-consisted of items such as grains, feedstuffs, and so forth, that we do not import in quantity except in years of great domestic shortage. The recession of the drought influence is revealed in the decline of this item from $116,700,000 in 1937, when it accounted for 7.4 percent of our total agricultural imports. Of the remaining $467,000,000, $402,000,000 consisted of products regularly required to maintain American standards of consumption. For the most part, these were imported over high tariffs. Of this $402,000,000, $130,000,000 consisted of sugar, of which imports are rigidly controlled under our sugar quota legislation. Other items in this category included hides and skins, clothing wool, certain varieties of tobacco, certain vegetable oils and oil seeds, certain special types of raw cotton, dates, olives, various nuts, and so forth. There remains, out of the $467,000,000 mentioned above, a residual item of $66,000,000, composed of a large number of small items falling into one or another of the foregoing

There, in a nutshell, is an indication of the kinds of agricultural products we normally import. As I said a moment ago, we could entirely shut out some or all of these classes of imports if we wanted to do so. In fact, if I thought such a course would solve, or help to solve, the Nation's farm problem, I should be the first to urge its adoption. But every thinking man knows that the only possible outcome would be just the reverse.

TRADE AGREEMENTS AS A FACTOR IN THE TRADE PICTURE

In the whole foreign-trade situation as it pertains to agricultural products the part played by the trade-agreements program has been fundamentally constructive. Opponents of the program, as I have said, have made every effort to make matters appear otherwise, but in support of their claims they have offered little more than a noisy repetition of statements that are entirely without foundation.

Claims to the effect that trade agreements are responsible for large and damaging increases in imports of farm products of one sort and another are the chief reliance of these critics. The temptation to advance such claims was especially great in 1937, when agricultural imports, for reasons already noted, were increasing. Actually, however, trade agreements had very little to do with these increased imports, and they are still distinctly a minor element in the agricultural import situation. Most of the increases in imports which took place in 1937-increases which were heralded throughout the country by the embargo tariff crowd as being attributable in large measure to the trade agreements-were really on products that had never been touched in any trade agreement. The truth is that, while tariff reductions have been made on a number of agricultural items, these reductions have thus far been very moderate and, where necessary. have been carefully safeguarded by quota limitations on the amounts that may be imported at the reduced rates.

EXAGGERATED AND FALSE CLAIMS OF INJURY FROM DUTY REDUCTIONS ON FARM PRODUCTS

It is, of course, impossible at this time to take up each and every agricultural item in this connection and to go into detail concerning the results of duty reductions wherever any have been made; but I will say that in every case which has come to my attention in which charges have been made that this or that branch of agriculture was "sold down the river" a little investigating of the actual facts soon disclosed that the charge was—to put it mildly—greatly exaggerated.

When, for example, the first trade agreement was signed with Canada there were statements galore about how the domestic market was going to be swamped with Canadian cattle, dairy products, and so forth. It never happened. Increases did occur in the imports of some of these items. That was to be expected; but any unbiased analysis of the facts will promptly disclose to any reasonable person that the increased importations of farm products resulting from duty reductions have been far too small in relation to our domestic production and supply to have any appreciable effect upon domestic prices. I challenge any person who takes exception to this statement to submit the issue to any properly qualified group of economic and market analysts. What he will surely be told, because it is the truth, is that the facts do not support such irresponsible and exaggerated claims.

If such an inquiry as I have suggested is broadened out, as it should be, to include the effects of the trade-agreements program as a whole, it will be found that the program actually operates in the fundamental interest of the dairyman, the cattleman, and of the others who, according to the claims of the embargo tariff crowd, have been hurt. Some of these producers may think they are better off when their industry has absolutely 100 percent of the home market than they are when it shares a small percentage of the home market with the foreigner, but in jumping at any such conclusion they are overlooking an extremely vital point.

If, in order to get every small fraction of the home market, cattlemen, dairymen, and others in similar status enter into political trading with every other industry that is demanding the same air-tight monopoly of the home market-and that is what inevitably happens when the tariff-logrolling process gets under way—then the only possible outcome is an embargo tariff policy all around. That, I insist, is a sure-fire way to ruin the home market for the cattleman, the dairyman, and everybody else. When our great exporting industries, both in agriculture and in manufacture, are flat on their backs because they cannot sell their surpluses at a profit, it is useless for the cattleman or the dairyman to think that tariffs are going to save him, because under such conditions his home market is going to be a poor one. This, as I said earlier, was proved without a question of a doubt under the operation of the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act.

The farmer or the stockman who fastens his gaze exclusively upon the relatively trifling imports of some product which is alleged to be in competition with his own, but who fails to see that in demanding an embargo tariff he may be spoiling his own market, is not doing himself or anybody else any good. Together with the rest of the American public which follows such a theory, he is the victim of his own short-sightedness.

We shall never have a stable basis for domestic prosperity until trade channels throughout the world are unclogged and international trade gets back to a more normal and healthier basis. That is the objective of the trade-agreements program; and, insofar as present disturbed conditions in the world will permit, that objective is being achieved.

CORNED BEEF

Well-meaning and ordinarily sensible people can often be goaded by self-seeking interests into taking an extreme and unreasonable attitude toward something that really is trivial. Sometimes, in an excess of zeal, they can even be stampeded into positions definitely contrary to their own welfare. Each of us knows this. If an illustration were required, what could better demonstrate the truth of this assertion than the recent "tempest in a teapot" over the proposal of the Navy Department to purchase 48,000 pounds of canned corned beef from Argentina? There is not a Senator in this body who is more anxious than I am to see the American cattleman prosper. Nor is there any who will state more emphatically that American beef cattle cannot be surpassed in quality by those of any nation on the globe. Nevertheless, I honestly believe that the rumpus which was stirred up over this matter was not well advised from the standpoint either of the cattleman or of the national interest.

Trying to keep out of this country 48,900 pounds of imported corned beef in order to increase domestic cattle prices is about like trying to change the level of the ocean with an eyedropper. When we broaden the issue to include all future Government purchases of canned corned beef it is merely a case of substituting a garden hose for the eyedropper.

It was an unusual position for the Congress of the United States to take when they denied the sailors of our Navy who man our ships in peace and in war the right to eat corned beef made in South America, when on that very day the Senators were enjoying choice morsels of corned beef produced in South America and served on the menu of the Senate restaurant.

But all that is a minor phase of the corned-beef story. The significant part concerns our trade relations with one of our leading neighbors to the South. This whole episode was a new source of irritation to a country with which our highly profitable trade relations had already begun to suffer badly—irritation engendered at a time, moreover, when we were striving to strengthen our good-neighbor policy. The lucrative business that we have heretofore enjoyed with Argentina has meant jobs for thousands of American workingmen, and hence a better demand in our cities for beef and other products consumed by workers. Even if we ignore the broader advantages of the good-neighbor policy, what profit accrues to the American cattleman by failing to recognize these facts?

A MODERATE TARIFF POLICY IS IN THE GENUINE INTEREST OF ALL GROUPS

Get the buying power of the American people up to where it ought to be and can be—I think the Senator from California [Mr. Downey] will agree to that statement—and neither the cattle industry, the dairy industry, nor any other industry need worry over a slight sharing of the home market with the foreigner. I insist that if we are going to get buying power up and keep it there, one of the things we must do is to reopen the channels of foreign trade. We must be sane and reasonable about the tariff. We cannot shut ourselves up like hermits and expect to have adequate market outlets for the great surplus-producing capacity to which both agriculture and industry in this country now are geared. If we are going to utilize this capacity, we must preserve and extend our export outlets. And we cannot possibly do this unless we increase our imports.

We can increase imports without seriously injuring any efficient domestic industry, and that is exactly what we are doing under the trade-agreements program. There is a wide range of products which we import, or could import, which are not directly in competition with domestic production, if competitive at all—such things as specialities, seasonal products, and so forth. These are imports which can be brought in with little or no damage to any domestic interest. Under the authority of the Trade Agreements Act we are admitting more and more of these products, as we should, and we are getting well paid in the bargain, because, at the same time, we are getting thousands of tariff concessions from other countries giving us better access to their markets.

DIRECT BENEFITS TO THE FARMER—BETTER ACCESS TO FOREIGN MARKETS

In the trade agreements thus far negotiated, hundreds of concessions have been obtained for the purpose of securing guaranteed or improved access to foreign markets for American farm products. I will not burden my colleagues with a detailed description of them. However, I will direct your attention to a detailed tabulation of the more important of these concessions in a table which appears on pages 139–150 (table 2) of the hearings before the Senate Committee on Finance, on proposed amendments to H. R. 3790 (taxes on fats and oils), on March 6 to 9, 1939.

This table, which includes also certain fish products, covers 11 highly condensed, fine-print pages. No one who takes the trouble to read it could fail to be impressed by the range, variety, and extent of the concessions obtained. It shows emphatically that agriculture has been anything but neglected in the course of these trade negotiations.

CONCESSIONS RECEIVED ON FARM PRODUCTS HIGHLY VALUABLE IN SAFE-GUARDING AND INCREASING FARM EXPORTS

Let me emphasize in passing that the impression which seems to prevail in some quarters that the bindings of free entry or of otherwise favorable trade treatment are valueless is a very mistaken impression. Many of these commitments have a value even greater than appears. During a period of rising trade barriers and discriminations throughout the world, it is absolutely necessary to obtain such guaranties on many products in order to make sure that satisfactory trade treatment will continue. Through the bindings obtained on free and other items, and through the guaranties obtained under the most-favored-nation clause against trade discrimination, as well as through actual reductions in tariffs and other barriers, the trade-agreements program has safeguarded an enormous volume of agricultural and other export trade that would otherwise have been wiped out by rapidly increasing barriers and discriminations against our commerce.

ATTEMPTS TO CONFUSE THE CASE AND MINIMIZE THE BENEFITS

These hundreds of concessions on farm products are, taken as a whole, highly beneficial to our farmers, and do not let anybody tell you anything different. Such a truth should be obvious to anyone who bothers to make even a superficial examination of the facts. Yet there are today persons in positions of public responsibility who not only deny this truth but even go so far as to distort it for their own selfish or partisan ends.

The way in which these people attempt to support their campaign against the trade agreements is an affront to ordinary intelligence. If in a particular year there is a decline in exports of certain agricultural products or agricultural produce as a whole, they hasten to tell us that the concessions we have obtained have done us no good. Some critics, ascending to the dizziest heights of emotionalism, even go so far as to intimate that the concessions were the cause of the decline. On the other hand, if exports increase, then we are told that the increase was due wholly to other causes. Factors other than trade-agreement concessions are said to be terribly important when the trade picture looks good, but are conveniently ignored when the picture is less favorable.

Now, the simple truth of this matter is that there are a great many factors that influence the course of foreign trade from year to year. This applies both to our total trade and our trade with particular nations. Shifting political and economic conditions in particular countries or regions of the world, internal social disorders, weather conditions in various parts of the world, insect or other pest blights, man-made barriers to commerce—these are illustrations of but a few of the many things which govern or influence international commerce. With all of these influences and others affecting the flow of trade, it obviously is impossible to separate out one single fact, such as reduced trade barriers, and to say exactly how much of the trade which actually did take place was due to that one factor.

The essential and fundamental fact remains, however, that, as a result of the hundreds of concessions obtained on farm products, there exist today vastly improved export opportunities for our farm surpluses which otherwise we would not have had. If, because of other causes, exports do not fully respond in all cases to the opportunities thus presented, this is scarcely chargeable to the trade agreements.

PERCENT INCREASE OF FARM EXPORTS GREATER TO TRADE-TREATY COUNTRIES THAN TO OTHERS

As a matter of fact, the available figures strongly support the logical presumption that the concessions received have greatly assisted in the export of our farm surpluses. For example, a study made of the results of the first 16 trade agreements shows that our exports of farm produce to these 16 countries increased by $102,000,000, or 55 percent, between the fiscal year 1935–36—when few trade agreements were in effect—and the fiscal year 1937–38. On the other hand, our exports of farm products to nonagreement countries increased by only $20,000,000, or 3 percent, during the same period. Excluding cotton, the increase was 108 percent to the trade-agreement countries and 38 percent to the non-agreement countries.

The percentage increases in farm exports to the trade agreement countries were generally greater on concession items than on those receiving no concessions. Even when a trade-agreement country imported less of a given concession item from the United States, our share of the total imports of that item into such country usually increased.

Despite such evidence of benefit, I note that attempts are made from time to time to draw grossly unfair inferences from our current agricultural export figures, whenever they lend themselves to such misrepresentation. This has been happening in connection with the decline of agricultural exports during the present year, and I want, therefore, to deal with it at this point.

RECENT DECLINE IN AGRICULTURAL EXPORTS DUE CHIEFLY TO COTTON

As I pointed out earlier, in terms of value, our total exports of agricultural products, during the first 10 months of the present crop year, July 1938 to April 1939, inclusive, fell off. The decline was particularly marked when cotton was included, but, disregarding cotton, there still was a decline. Would this mean that the trade-agreement concessions obtained on our farm products are doing us no good? My answer is emphatically in the negative.

All in the world such figures indicate is that a number of factors such as I have already described have, in combination, more than offset the good effects of the trade concessions. Those who wish to sabotage the program tell us not a thing as to what the situation would have been without the concessions. And they utterly fail to mention the important fact that, as long as the trade agreements remain intact, the improved access to foreign markets which they provide opens the way for further expansion of our export shipments if, as, and when other conditions permit.

DECLINE IN COTTON EXPORTS DUE CHIEFLY TO CAUSES BEYOND THE REACH OF TRADE AGREEMENTS

There has been a great deal of talk in recent months about the heavy decline in our cotton exports, and I have observed, in certain quarters, an inclination to seize upon this fact as an indication that trade agreements are not helpful to the cotton farmer. I have even noticed a statement in the Congressional Record to the effect that the trade-agreement program was the cause of the decline in cotton exports. I insist that that is carrying a good thing too far.

How can any sensible person believe such rubbish? Cotton exports have, indeed, diminished greatly. Certainly. But why? If someone will tell me how the trade-agreement program is going to enable us to sell our cotton abroad at a pegged price level of 8 or 9 cents a pound while foreign cotton sells on a world basis, I shall be greatly obliged to him. Even if the general political and economic situation abroad were more favorable, it still would be well-nigh impossible to get over a hurdle like that.

This amazing performance of heaping coals of fire upon the trade-agreements program for something it has nothing in the world to do with is the height of asininity. It may fool some people, but it is not fooling the cotton farmers. Cotton farmers are practically unanimous for the trade-agreements program, as well they should be.

TRADE-AGREEMENTS PROGRAM BASICALLY HELPFUL TO THE COTTON GROWER

In the first place, the program, insofar as its influence can extend under the difficult conditions now prevailing in the world, is definitely a constructive force in the direction of economic disarmament and the restoration of stable world prosperity. This is an extremely important matter for all of us, and among those to whom it is most important are the cotton farmers. For studies are available which show definitely that the world demand for cotton is greatly affected by prosperity or the lack of prosperity throughout the world.

Again, while there are not many tariff duties on cotton in foreign countries, there are, in some parts of the world, other obstacles to cotton trade which would be greatly lessened by a general relaxation of trade barriers. Policies of national economic self-sufficiency and the measures associated with it would still greatly obstruct our cotton exports to some countries even if cotton were offered on a world-price basis.

Trade agreements help to increase our imports of things we can profitably import into this Nation, and when we increase such imports, naturally we enhance foreign buying power for our cotton and for our other surpluses.

INDIRECT BENEFITS OF TRADE PACTS TO THE FARMER—A BETTER HOME MARKET

Then, too, the trade agreements, by reopening channels of foreign trade, make for greater prosperity and employment in the United States than would otherwise prevail. Thus there is a close relationship between the general prosperity of our Nation and the domestic demand for cotton as governed by cotton-mill activity.

Finally, the cotton grower is benefited, as a consumer, by the reduction of excessive tariffs on things he buys, or things he would buy if his income, in terms of purchasing power, were increased. No group in this Nation has been more specifically the victim of our late and little-lamented embargo tariff policy than the cotton farmers.

Consequently, those who seek to blame trade agreements for the present plight of cotton had best look elsewhere. True, trade agreements cannot be a controlling factor in the cotton situation in view of the other factors which are operative. Nevertheless, to attack them for not solving the cotton problem or as an actual hindrance to its solution is unfair in the extreme.

A moment ago, in discussing the cotton situation, I pointed out that all the benefits of the trade-agreements program are not direct. The increased demand for farm products in the home markets, by reason of greater production and employment provided in our nonagricultural export industries, is equally applicable to all agricultural commodities as well as to cotton.

A very large portion of the manufacturing industry of this Nation depends upon export outlets for the sale of substantial portions of its production. Run the gamut of our great manufacturing industries and you will be surprised to observe how numerous and important are the branches which are engaged in export trade. Greater employment and wage income in our cities for workers in these industries mean a greater demand for most farm products, and particularly for things like meat, dairy products, fruit, and vegetables.

The Honorable Francis Sayre, in his book, The Way Forward, presents an illuminating commentary upon this situation. After publishing a table showing the value of some of our more important agricultural and industrial commodity exports and the ratios of exports to production, Mr. Sayre says:

Figures such as these reveal how specious is the argument that our export trade is unimportant because it comprises not more than 10 percent of our total production. This general ratio, reached by comparing our total exports of all commodities with our total production, is misleading. In many of our most important industries and occupations the surpluses which we must sell abroad greatly exceed 10 percent. Even in industries exporting only 10 percent of their output, loss of exports does not mean that the remaining 90 percent of the business remains in a prosperous condition. The 10-percent margin of exports even in such cases may make all the difference between profit and loss for the entire industry.

Of far more vital consequence is the effect of unsalable surpluses on domestic prices. Unsold surpluses, by glutting home markets, demoralize the prices received for that part of the output or crop sold at home, and thereby spread havoc and cause economic dislocation throughout the industry or occupation. The resulting repercussions are Nation-wide and affect producers who themselves do not sell abroad.

The beneficial effect of trade agreements on our exports as a whole is indicated by numerous studies that have been made. One shows, for example, that, in the 2-year period, 1937–38, our total exports to trade-agreement countries were 61 percent greater than in the 2 preagreement years, 1934–35; whereas our total exports to nonagreement countries increased by only 38 percent. This indirect benefit of the program to the American farmer can be appreciated still further when it is observed, for example, that our exports to Canada alone, chiefly nonagricultural, fell from $948,000,000 in 1929 to less than $250,000,000 in 1932. In the first 3 years of the agreement with Canada, our exports to that country showed an annual average increase of $141,000,000, or 45 percent, over the average exports during the 2 preagreement years, 1934 and 1935.

FURTHER INDIRECT BENEFITS: THE FARMER AS A CONSUMER

Another type of benefit to agriculture from the tradeagreements program is the benefit which the farmer gets as a consumer. Generally speaking, farmers in this country buy in a protected market and sell in the world market. All farmers must benefit, as consumers, from the removal of excessive duties in our tariff-rate structure. Such tariff reductions not only increase foreign buying power for our farm and other surpluses, but they increase the buying power of the American farmer for the things he wants to consume.

WORLD POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC STABILITY PAYS THE FARMER

Finally, the trade-agreements program works in the direction of more orderly political and economic conditions throughout the world, and the American farmer—every American citizen, for that matter—has a big stake in that situation. I want, however, to inject here a few pertinent observations. No one could overlook the fact that the world situation has not been improving during the last year or so. To the contrary, it has grown steadily worse. That, however, does not subtract from the merits of the trade-agreements program. Rather, it serves to emphasize the need for a wider application of the broad policy envisaged by that program.

The pertinent and undeniable fact is that the trade-agreements program is absolutely sound and fundamental in the sphere in which it operates. A restoration of more orderly economic and general relations between nations, including the removal of excessive barriers to trade, is absolutely essential if the world ever is to get back to a condition of healthy prosperity. That is the direction in which the trade agreements take us, and that is the direction toward which the other nations of the world must move, too, if they ever expect to get out of the morass into which they now are rapidly sinking.

So, I repeat, my appeal transcends partisan politics for it is not my purpose to seek to fend off political attacks. As I said at the beginning of this address, an honest difference of opinion may reasonably exist as to the merits of the trade-agreements program, and such a difference of opinion, honorably held and boldly stated, will command respect no matter where it is uttered.

But there reposes in this program an inherent and potential lodestar of reason and logic which may lead modern civilization along a pathway of peace and common sense. Its principles reflect the true concepts of humanity, and, when its objectives are understood, the program will, I am hopeful, gain international adherence.

It is upon this premise that I base my appeal to the opposition for a moratorium, not upon criticism of the program, but upon innuendo and half truths and fabrication and misinformation, because there is too much at stake to jeopardize the economic well-being of many peoples for the sake of political gain.

Therefore, if attacks are to be made on the trade-agreements program, I implore the spokesmen of the opposition to make them on a basis of fairness and sincerity, not through stealthy sabotage. If these spokesmen would have this country return to the folly of embargo tariffs, where every nation erects an impenetrable and insurmountable wall against its neighbors, let them so state. And if the American people, in the light of their unfortunate experience with it in the past, desire to return to that sort of a program, ours is a land where the will of the majority prevails.

Since the adoption of the trade-agreements program our exports have reached a new high level, our imports have receded.

No trade treaty has ever been negotiated without providing for ample and adequate hearings for any person or group of persons in America who might be affected by that treaty.

In the face of disturbed and chaotic international conditions, both political and economic, our total exports to tradeagreement nations have shown a sustained increase over our exports to nations with which we do not have trade treaties, indicating that the trade agreements were a constructive factor in our international relations.

Despite the strenuous efforts of propagandists to prove the trade agreements harmful to American agriculture, the agricultural income of our Nation has risen steadily since the adoption of the trade-agreement program.

It has been proved beyond a question of a doubt that imports increase only when our national prosperity and domestic prices are at such a level that it is profitable to foreign producers to ship commodities to the United States over the tariff walls which have been established.

The deliberate falsehood that the trade-agreements program "surrenders" our rich home market to foreign producers has been definitely and finally exploded by fact and statistics

In my opinion, the trade-agreements program has, and will continue to have, the support of a vast majority of the American people

Regardless of that fact, the stentorian voices of politicians soon will be ringing throughout the Nation, and prominent in that rising clamor will be the voices of the noisy nucleus of embargo-tariff devotees singing their siren song of special privilege. I do sincerely wish that these few pungent, pertinent, unchallengable facts which I just related could be foremost in the minds of those who desire to know the truth.

The trade-agreements program was designed by patriotic, sincere, and able men who, with the best interests of our Nation at heart, sought a way to restore our foreign trade so that American agriculture, labor, and industry might profit therefrom

Every iota of evidence points toward the fact that those charged with administering the program have ever had the interests of America and of Americans uppermost in their hearts

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. LUCAS. I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator has made a very able presentation of his point of view in respect to the reciprocal-trade treaties, but he has rather left the inference that the only opposition to the treaties is a captious, insincere sort of opposition.

Mr. LUCAS. If the Senator feels that I left such an inference, I suggest that perhaps the Senator did not hear all of my speech. The Senator realizes that there are some fundamental differences of opinion, and I so stated in the early part of my speech, and I also stated that I respect the views of anyone who has honest, sincere differences with me on the question of trade treaties.

Mr. VANDENBERG. And it is upon that basis that I wish to ask the Senator one or two questions, if he will permit, simply for the purpose of further illuminating the subject. Does the Senator desert the principle that American labor and industry should be protected by a tariff which represents the difference between cost of production at home and abroad?

Mr. LUCAS. I do not desert that principle, and I do not think the trade-agreements program deserts that principle, although that factor is undoubtedly taken into consideration along with a great many other pertinent factors.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator does not claim, does he, that the State Department fixes tariffs on the basis of the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad?

Mr. LUCAS. I do not.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Would the Senator be willing to amend the Trade Agreements Act to require that in making concessions to foreigners the State Department at least shall not go below the difference in cost of production?

Mr. LUCAS. I would not make that kind of agreement at all. I believe in that principle; but I think that in connection with trade agreements, with all their ramifications, no definite policy of that kind could be laid down as a matter of law. In my opinion, that is a matter which will have to be left solely in the hands and the discretion of the Secretary of State, and I think that up to this time no specific charge can be laid against the President that he has failed to take into account the cost factors with all other pertinent factors in the negotiation of these trade agreements.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Let us see whether or not that is entirely true. Let us come down from the general to the specific. Does the Senator endorse the action of the State Department in reducing the tariff on sugar, and contemplating a further reduction in the tariff which protects domestic sugar, in the face of a report from the Tariff Commission which clearly indicates that the existing tariff protection is not sufficient in view of the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad?

Mr. LUCAS. I will say to the Senator that, as a member of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, I have given a tremendous amount of study to the sugar question. I have studied it both as a member of the House Committee on Agriculture and as a member of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry of the Senate.

I wish to say that just so long as we are bound to protect Cuba and other sugar-producing areas which are tied up with us the way they are at the present time, the sugar question will always be filled with great difficulty. I sat in a meeting of the House committee and heard all the questions with respect to sugar discussed. I heard former Senator Wadsworth, who is now a Member of the House, make a very forceful speech against sugar quotas. Yet I will say to the Senator from Michigan that there was not a single producer of sugar, whether he was a beet grower, whether he was a cane grower, whether he represented the Hawaiian interests, the Cuban interests, or the Philippine interests, or other interests in places where sugar is grown, there was not a refiner, there was not a producer, there was not a single individual connected with sugar who appeared before that committee who did not insist that the committee place those quotas just as it did place them, for, as those representatives said, unless the committee did so the sugar industry would be ruined both from the standpoint of the sugar refiners and the growers.

That is the best answer I can give to the Senator from Michigan on the question of sugar.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, the quota system is somewhat related to the general tariff protection based on the difference between cost of production at home and abroad.

Mr. LUCAS. Yes. I will say to the Senator it is all related.

Mr. VANDENBERG. They are tied together. But we cannot substitute the quota system for the system of adequate tariff protection of the industry. I say to the Senator that when the Tariff Commission itself demonstrates that the existing tariff, the purpose of which is to give protection to 16 beet-sugar- and 2 cane-producing States, is in adequate, for instance, to cover the difference between cost of production at home and abroad, then the exercise of the power in the State Department further to reduce that protection is not a sound use of power.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator, of course, is entitled to his opinion. I respect his opinion, and I will further answer the Senator by saying to him that the sugar question is somewhat like the complicated and hair-line questions which used to be presented in the law school that I attended. We had a very pious, very learned old professor-

Mr. VANDENBERG. I do not catch the analogy up to this point. [Laughter.]

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator will if he will follow me. This professor frequently, when in trouble with respect to a legal example which could be interpreted either way, would look to the ceiling and say, "You know, young gentlemen, there is much to be said on both sides of that question." there is much to be said on both sides of the sugar question, I will say to the Senator from Michigan. We could probably agree on some of the fundamental principles, but I have seen the sugar representatives themselves have the most difficult time trying to agree upon any program. And I have seen that same thing in a good many other American industries where legislation is made, the idea being that because honest, sincere, and learned men in the United States Senate and the House; because all the experts along the line of sugar or cotton or corn or wheat, or other products, cannot agree among themselves as to the best policy to follow—that demonstrates to my mind the real difficulty which exists in working out anything from the standpoint of legislation which will be beneficial for the greatest number, and that is what the Senator from Illinois is always vitally interested in and concerned with.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I think the Senator's observations are justified in respect to the unfortunateness of the disagreements among those who are interested in sugar in the United States, but I am citing this example solely as being illustrative of a fundamental principle.

Mr. LUCAS. I appreciate that.

Mr. VANDENBERG. What I am trying to suggest to the Senator is that since he asserts his continuing belief that tariffs should represent the difference in cost of production at home and abroad, I fail to understand how he can support a theory of government which permits the State Department to fix tariffs regardless of the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad, and I give him sugar as simply an illustration of the fact that the State Department officials are totally oblivious to the difference between cost of production at home and abroad, and that they have not the slightest intention of consulting the welfare of the domestic industry when they trade these

Mr. LUCAS. I will say to the Senator from Michigan that so long as the domestic industry holds such a difference of opinion as to what should be done, and if there cannot be a concentrated effort and a united front on the part of those who are interested in the great sugar question. I am not so sure that the Government officials are not justified in doing the best they can. I take it that the State Department officials are compelled to do the best they can under all the circumstances.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In order to keep the record straight I will say to the Senator that there is no difference of opinion among the domestic sugar producers that the Cuban tariffs should not be reduced as a result of State Department negotiations. I should say that there is unanimous agreement that that situation is an almost insufferable hazard to the beet industry in 16 States and the cane industry in 2 States.

Mr. LUCAS. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Certainly.

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator has interrogated me along the line of the philosophy of the reciprocal-trade agreements. I should like to ask him a question. I take it the Senator is honestly and sincerely opposed to the reciprocal-trade agreements. I ask him if he would suggest that we return to the good old embargo-tariff days, such as we had under the Smoot-Hawley Act of 1932.

Mr. VANDENBERG. If I had my way about it, I would return to a basis which would emphasize the importance of the United States Tariff Commission, to the ultimate result that, as nearly as possible under our constitutional system, we should have tariffs which from time to time actually represent the difference between the cost of production at home and that abroad. I am not interested in any superlative tariffs, if that is a correct definition of them. I am interested in a continuation of protection against low foreign costs which crucify our labor, our industry, and our agriculture.

Mr. LUCAS. I do not agree that they crucify agriculture or labor or industry.

Mr. VANDENBERG. By the time we shall have reached 1948 and shall have put a total of 9 percent new socialsecurity taxes upon American industry, thus increasing the cost of production in the United States arbitrarily and automatically 9 percent on everything, we shall confront an absolute necessity for increased protection rather than decreased protection. It is in the face of that contemplation, as well as in the face of the existing facts, that I renew my suggestion that if reciprocal-trade treaties are to be safe in any degree they must be written in the purview of the rule that our tariffs should represent the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I do not want to have the RECORD show that I agree with the Senator that the reciprocal-trade agreements at the present time are literally destroying labor, agriculture, or any other industry in this country. The Senator did not hear all of my speech. I think the facts I have given, if he will analyze them in some of his spare moments, if he has any, will demonstrate beyond any question that the reciprocal-trade agreements have been successful, so far as American agriculture is concerned. I have delivered this address on the basis of how trade agreements affect the agricultural program of my section of the country, as well as all others.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I thank the Senator for his courtesy. Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LUCAS. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. I merely wish to congratulate the Senator from Illinois and thank him for the very able address he has delivered on this subject. It is a subject about which there is much confusion and misinformation. The Senator has made a real contribution to the situation which he has so ably discussed, and I am under obligation to him for it.

Mr. LUCAS. I thank the Senator.

CHARLES L. KEE

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Schwartz in the chair) laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 821) for the relief of Charles L. Kee, which was, in line 11, after "demonstration", to insert "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000." Mr. BYRD. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment. The motion was agreed to.

SALE OF SURPLUS AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (S. 2904) to provide for the sale under certain conditions of agricultural commodities held by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I desire to make a statement with reference to the bill which is pending. Its consideration has been making such rapid progress thus far since vesterday morning that I am moved to make a statement with reference to it. I know that we are approaching the end of the session; and that the Senate can do nothing unless it is done practically by unanimous consent. I am advised that the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. George], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Bailey], and several Senators on the other side of the aisle are opposed to the bill and desire to discuss it and express their views.

It is apparent to me that that being true, it would be exceedingly difficult to obtain a vote on the bill between now and the time of adjournment.

If the bill were passed by the Senate it would then have to go to the House; and inasmuch as it has not received consideration in the House, it would be referred to a committee. As a practical matter there does not seem to me to be any chance to secure favorable consideration at this time.

I do not believe in wasting my time or asking the Senate to waste its time in the consideration of something which cannot be done. Though I am greatly interested in the sale of the 175,000 bales of cotton, inasmuch as it is not possible to obtain consideration by the Senate in time for the bill to be considered in the House, there is no practical reason for insisting upon further consideration of the bill at this time, and I withdraw the request for consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina withdraws his request for consideration of the bill. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the request is withdrawn.

DOROTHY CLAIR, G. F. ALLEN, AND EARL WOOLDRIDGE

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, yesterday a message was received from the House announcing an amendment of the House to Senate bill 2239, an Indian bill. The amendment was to add an apostrophe and an "s" to the word "boy", making the word "boy's." On yesterday I moved to disagree to the House amendment. The motion was agreed to. I now desire to move to reconsider the vote by which the Senate disagreed to the House amendment to Senate bill 2239.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas] that the vote by which the Senate disagreed to the House amendment to Senate bill 2239 be reconsidered.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, what is the bill? I wish to identify it.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It is Senate bill 2239, for the relief of Dorothy Clair, G. F. Allen, and Earl Wooldridge. As I stated, the House amended the bill by adding an apostrophe and the letter "s" to the word "boy", making it read "boy's." Yesterday I moved that the Senate disagree to the House amendment, which motion was agreed to. I now move to reconsider the vote by which the Senate disagreed to the House amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Oklahoma.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I now ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to Senate bill 2239.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2239) for the relief of Dorothy Clair, G. F. Allen, and Earl Wooldridge, which was, in line 5, to strike out "Boy" and insert "Boy's."

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

REIMBURSEMENT OF COTTON COOPERATIVE ASSOCIATIONS FOR LOSSES UNDER FEDERAL FARM BOARD

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, it was understood that the bill to follow the bill in which the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes] was interested would be Senate bill 2585, Calendar 802, a bill introduced by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead] to reimburse the cotton cooperatives associations for losses occasioned by the Federal Farm Board's stabilization operations, and for other purposes.

I desire to make a statement with respect to that bill similar to the statement made by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes] in respect to the bill in which he was interested.

The bill is controversial. It proposes to adjust a business transaction between the Federal Government and cotton cooperatives in some 12 cotton-producing States. The bill proposes to authorize an appropriation of $1,200,000,000 to make such adjustment. I understand that if the bill is made a special order the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Mc-Kellar] desires to discuss the bill and the amendments. Personally, I should be very g'ad, indeed, to hear the Senator discuss any measure, and especially this one; but I think in the closing hours of this session it would be asking too much to try to make a bill of this kind the unfinished business, because it would occasion considerable discussion.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for making that statement. In addition to other matters, a number of errors would necessarily have to be corrected, which would require a long time. I hope the Senator will allow the matter to go over until the session next January, when we can discuss it and have the Senate pass the bill.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, may I inquire of the Senator from Oklahoma whether or not the bill to which he refers is the one to which he referred the other day? As I understand, there are two similar bills.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The bill to which I refer is the one making an adjustment with the cotton cooperatives, paying them the amount of their losses in dealing with the Federal Farm Board under a previous administration.

Mr. SMITH. Does the bill have reference to the 16-cent loan?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. That is correct.

Mr. McKELLAR. The 16-cent loan, dating back to 1929 and 1930.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I am glad that those who favor this measure have seen fit to postpone it until the Senate can be advised of all the facts. I wish to state that I am heartily in favor of the adjustment. I think the cooperatives are entitled to the adjustment; and when we shall meet in January, if I am fortunate enough to be then alive, I shall take such time as may be necessary to try to convince my colleagues that the object of the bill is a righteous one.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I have an hour and a half set aside in which I am quite sure I can convince my good and splendid friend from South Carolina, who is always willing to hear facts, that he should not vote for the bill.

Mr. SMITH. I have 2 hours in which I am going to set my friends from Tennessee right.

Mr. BARKLEY. If I understand the colloquy, there will be convincing arguments on both sides.

Mr. SMITH. There will be a paramount convincing one coming from South Carolina.

Mr. McKELLAR. Then, as I understand, the bill goes over.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator from Kentucky if this bill is not to be taken up for consideration now; does the Senator from Kentucky see any reason why it could not be made the unfinished business for early in the session when the Congress shall reconvene in January?

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not, but I will say to the Senator that I do not think it is wise at this session to make any bill the unfinished business for the next session, because we cannot tell what the situation will be when the Congress reassembles. I should not like that to be done; but I can assure the Senator that I know of no reason why early in the next session the matter should not be taken up and discussed fully.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. As I think we all know, there is not much business to transact in the first few days of a new session, and, if it will be agreeable, I will not move to make this bill the unfinished business but will defer that motion until some time early in the next session of Congress.

EXCHANGE OF SURPLUS AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES FOR FOREIGN RESERVE STOCKS OF STRATEGIC AND CRITICAL MATERIALS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. BYRNES submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (S. 2697) to facilitate the execution of arrangements for the exchange of surplus agricultural commodities produced in the United States for reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials produced abroad, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend, and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"The Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized and directed to transfer to warehouses in or near cotton manufacturing centers in New England not to exceed 300,000 bales of cotton, to which it now has title or many hereafter acquire title, having regard for the grades and staples customarily required by manufacturers in that area: Provided, That all necessary costs in connection with such transfer will not result in additional net cost to the Corporation.

"In determining specific cotton to be exchanged under this act, the determination shall be made by sampling and selection at the place where the cotton is stored on the date of ratification of a treaty providing for such exchange, and no cotton shall be exchanged under such treaty which, after such date, is transported to another place and there sampled and selected."

And the House agree to the same.

JAMES F. BYRNES, J. H. BANKHEAD, PRENTISS M. BROWN, JOHN G. TOWNSEND, Jr., Managers on the part of the Senate. HENRY B. STEAGALL, CLYDE WILLIAMS, BRENT SPENCE, JESSE P. WOLCOTT, CHARLES L. GIFFORD, Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, what is the net result of the conference?

Mr. BYRNES. There was only one amendment on the part of the House, which applied only to the question of where the cotton to be delivered under the treaty should be sampled first. The amendment which was agreed to in conference provided that the cotton to be delivered should be sampled at the place where it is now stored, according to the House provision.

There was also a provision that not to exceed 300,000 bales should be transported to warehouses in the New England area. The conference report provides for the transportation of 300,000 bales, with the net result that there is no increased expense to the Corporation. The conference report is a complete agreement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] to lay on the table the motion of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes] to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to.

The motion was agreed to.

CONSIDERATION OF UNOBJECTED-TO HOUSE BILLS

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, on the call of the calendar day before yesterday a number of House bills or, at any rate, some House bills were passed over, and since that call a number of House bills have been placed on the calendar. Some of them, in fact, most of them, are noncontroversial; they merely involve the construction of bridges and other routine matters. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the call of House bills on the calendar to the consideration of which there is no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Kentucky indicate about how many of such bills there are on the calendar?

Mr. BARKLEY. I cannot give the number, but there are not very many.

I will say to the Senator from Florida and also to other Senators that during the next day or two we shall have coming over probably every few minutes from the House House bills to which the Senate probably will want to make no amendment. I have no desire, and other Senators, I am sure, have no desire, to delay those bills if they can be passed before adjournment; and it may be necessary from time to time during the next 2 or 3 days to call up such House bills. I do not desire to exclude Senate bills, but I think, from the looks of things, we are going to have sufficient time to consider most of the bills on the calendar by calling them. I do not think it will take long to dispose now of the House bills that have come over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am not going to object to the request of the Senator from Kentucky to call the calendar for unobjected-to House bills, but I do wish to give notice at this time that at the very first opportunity—and the only reason I do not make the motion now is because I am tied up in the Appropriations Committee on a matter which is going to take more time-I shall move to take up Calendar No. 227, Senate bill 1681.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is the bill, as I understand, to which the Senator referred yesterday, which went over on the call of the calendar?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. So far as I am concerned, at any time the Senator is prepared to take that bill up it would be agreeable to me to do so.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, let me observe that that bill is still in committee, although it appears that the bill is on the calendar. The RECORD ought to show that it was understood that the bill should not be proceeded with until the Judiciary Committee heard new evidence and reported after having heard the new evidence. They have heard the testimony of the Senator from Tennessee and his colleague, but the committee have not completed their hearings. At the request of the Senator an adjournment of the committee was taken, but the hearings by that committee, I repeat, are not concluded. Therefore, I think there is no possibility of the Senate, unless it discharges the committee, considering this bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, no.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Vermont how a bill of this character or any other character could appear on the calendar unless the committee had reported it?

Mr. AUSTIN. The bill was placed on the calendar in due form. Promptly upon its being called when reached on the calendar. I rose and started to ask to have it recommitted to the committee for the consideration of further evidence. Thereupon, the Senator from Tennessee made the suggestion that the same purpose could be accomplished by allowing the bill to remain where it was on the calendar and hold hearings in the committee and take the new evidence. In order to accommodate the Senator, I assented to that method of procedure.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I think the Senator is mistaken.

Mr. AUSTIN. The committee has proceeded up to a certain point but has not finished its work.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, my recollection is not like that of the Senator from Vermont. The Senator objected to the bill on the ground that certain Senators on the Judiciary Committee that have been appointed to investigate such bills as this wanted to investigate it further. I did not object to that at all, and I went before that committee, but the bill was never recommitted to the committee or rereferred to the subcommittee. It was reported by the subcommittee, as I recall, but there was no agreement that this bill was not to be called when it was reached, and the only reason it went over was because the Senator from Vermont objected to it the other day, as, of course, he had a right to do.

I did not agree at all that it might be referred to some other subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee. It is still on the calendar, and if members of the Judiciary Committee are opposed to it they have a right to fight it; that would be all right; but I want a hearing for the bill; I want the hearing at this session, and I am going to make every effort humanly possible to have the measure passed. The Senate has already passed a bill almost exactly similar to it, creating such a district as this bill proposes to create. At that time it was objected to by the Department but the Department has since withdrawn its objection.

Mr. AUSTIN. Oh, no.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes, it has. I have a letter from the Department and the committee has a letter from the Department withdrawing its objection and favoring this bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, you will observe that there is a grave question of fact in issue. On this matter of veracity I will not be heard to say another word; I will not be put in that position by any Senator. All I have to say is that when an effort is made to make order of business No. 227, Senate bill 1681, the pending business, I shall oppose it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes, that would be entirely proper, and I would have no objection to that being done.

Mr. BARKLEY. I renew my request that the calendar be called for the consideration only of House bills to which there is no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, before the request of the Senator from Kentucky is agreed to——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. KING. I desire to inquire whether or not when a bill is called objection could be interposed?

Mr. BARKLEY. I asked for the consideration of House bills to which there was no objection.

Mr. KING. I did not understand that portion of the

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I should like to have the request include a number of House bills which have been reported by committees and are now on the desk but have not been printed and placed on the calendar.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Kentucky when he contemplates adjournment?

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the Senator mean final adjournment?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. I cannot tell the Senator. Very much depends upon what the House may do and when it does it. So far as the Senate is concerned, except for the deficiency bill, I think we could adjourn tonight or at any other time; but the House still has some matters which it has to dispose of. The deficiency bill is now before the Appropriations Committee of the Senate, and I do not know when it will be reported, and its passage will depend upon the number and character of amendments that are put on the bill when it is before the Senate. I doubt very seriously, I will say to the Senator, whether we can adjourn before Saturday night, and I am not absolutely certain we may be able to do that.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. But we can put that as the reasonable limit.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think so.

I inquire, Mr. President, if my request has been acted on? The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky that unobjected-to House bills on the calendar be considered? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. KING obtained the floor.

FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK SYSTEM AND HOME OWNERS' LOAN CORPORATION

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah yield?

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. During the debate a few days ago on the so-called lending bill, the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Byrn] made some observations with respect to various Government corporations, including the Home Loan Bank System. I have a letter from Mr. T. D. Webb, the vice chairman of the Home Loan Bank Board, calling attention to the Senator's observations and making some corrections in them. I ask unanimouse consent that the letter be printed in the Record.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I shall make no objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky, but will say that as soon as it can be prepared I shall present for inclusion in the Record some information which I think will show that the statement I made on the floor of the Senate was accurate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky? The Chair hears none.

The letter referred to is as follows:

JULY 28, 1939.

Hon. ALBEN W. BARKLEY,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: There has come to my attention that portion of the debate on the program for financing recoverable expenditures in which you reply to Senator Byrn's allegations of the losses which the Federal Government would sustain as a result of its capital investment in the Federal Home Loan Bank System and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. For your convenience I herewith quote the statement made by Senator Byrn, which appears on page 10010 of the Congressional Record for Wednesday, July 26, 1939:

July 26, 1939:

"Mr. Byrd. For example, $100,000,000 has been invested in the capital stock of the Commodities Credit Corporation, which, by the statement of the President, as directed to the Congress, is valueless. Twice have appropriations been made to make good the stock of the Commodities Credit Corporation. There are quite a number of other such stock purchases; for example, the Federal homeloan bank, and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, with $325,000,000, is included in the list of alleged assets, and anyone who is familiar with the Home Owners' Loan Corporation operations knows that the losses have greatly exceeded $325,000,000. As a matter of fact, up to June 30, 1938, there were 152,262 foreclosures authorized, and, actually, something like 65,805 homes have been repossessed which are now rented and 9,322 which are not rented."

The form of this statement and its sequence of facts are very repossessed which are now rented and 9,322 which are not rented."

The form of this statement and its sequence of facts are very misleading. The $325,000,000 figure used represents the Government capital investment in both the Federal Home Loan Bank System and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. This may be broken down to show that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has invested for the Secretary of the Treasury in the regional Federal home-loan banks a sum amounting to $124,741,000. The Secretary of the Treasury holds the entire $200,000,000 of capital stock in the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. May I for your general information outline certain pertinent facts concerning the Government stake in each of these investments.

From October 15, 1932, to June 30, 1939, the 12 Federal Home

From October 15, 1932, to June 30, 1939, the 12 Federal Home Loan Banks have declared and paid dividends of $9,849,146.10 on the Government's investment of $124,741,000. The sound financial position of the Federal Home Loan Bank System is indicated by the fact that during this same period it has paid $2,600,000 in dividends to members, has accumulated undivided profits and reserves for contingencies amounting to $4,500,000, has provided for reserves required under section 16 of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act of $4,300,000, and has advanced to its members a total of $523,023,390.54, upon which no loss has been sustained.

$523,023,390.54, upon which no loss has been sustained.

Senator Byrn has given the impression in the above-quoted statement that the Federal Home Loan Bank System belongs in the category of a temporary agency such as the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. This is, of course, not the case. During the almost 7 years of the System's operation, it has definitely established itself as a reserve system in the field of home-mortgage finance, comparable to that of the Federal Reserve System in the field of commercial banking. The Bank System at the end of the last fiscal year had total assets of almost $300,000,000, and there is no question of its continued growth. I think you will agree that the record proves the Bank System to be a sound dividend-paying financial organization, and that the investment of the Government, far from being a risky one, is sound and profitable.

When, in the summer of 1933, Congress created the Home Owners' Loan Corporation as an emergency relief agency for the benefit of home owners, it provided $200,000,000 of capital for the use of the Corporation. The purpose of the Corporation was essentially one of relief; it was not established as a profit-making institution. In fact, at the time of its creation heavy losses were forecast, and anticinated forecast and anticipated.

The statement that, "the losses have greatly exceeded $325,-000,000" is inaccurate. From the beginning of its operations until June 30, 1939, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation has set aside over $146,000,000 as reserves for losses to be sustained in the liquidation of its loans. During that time about $56,000,000 has been charged against this reserve for losses. The impairment of capital therefore at the close of the fiscal year was just under $60,000,000 after providing for the above-mentioned reserves, which, as indicated, now stand at approximately $90,000,000.

It must be remembered that the Corporation took over more than 1,000,000 distressed home mortgages to an amount in excess of $3,000,000,000, which private agencies were either unable or unwilling to carry. As a matter of fact, from the standpoint of risk, the mortgage obligations financed by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation were considered as the poorest type of risk in the home financing field. That the losses on the risks assumed by the Corporation have been low is a tribute to the integrity of the American people and their determination to meet their obligations to the extent of their ability to do so.

I have volunteered this information in an effort to correct any

I have volunteered this information in an effort to correct any misunderstanding that may have grown out of Senator Byrn's statement about the losses of the Bank System and the Home

Owners' Loan Corporation. Sincerely yours,

T. D. WEBB, Vice Chairman.

AMENDMENT OF PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE ACT

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I think the request I am about to make of the Senator from Utah will take about half a minute.

Mr. KING. I yield, with the expression that the Senator may have a minute instead of half a minute.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is very kind.

I ask that the House bill dealing with the Philippine Islands be laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the bill from the House of Representatives (H. R. 7096) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the complete independence of the Philippine Islands, to provide for the adoption of a constitution and a form of government for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes," which was read twice by its title.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, some time ago the Senate passed a bill dealing with this subject. The House, however, did not act on the Senate bill, but passed its own bill, because it was thought that under our Constitution the revenue measures contained in the Senate bill would have to be initiated in the House of Representatives. However, there is very little fundamental difference between the House bill and the Senate bill. Senators who may be interested have seen the House bill, and, so far as I know, there is no objection to it.

I therefore ask that the House bill be put upon its third reading and final passage.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I yield.

Mr. WHITE. Have the members of the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs been consulted about this matter?

Mr. TYDINGS. All of those that I know have any interest in it have been consulted, as well as the Senators from sugar-producing States who have an interest in the bill, and almost all other Senators I can think of who might be interested in it.

Mr. WHITE. Has the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin], who is acting as minority leader, been conferred with about it?

Mr. TYDINGS. I think the Senator from Vermont would be satisfied with whatever the Senator from Michigan [Mr. Vandenberg] would be satisfied with on the measure. However, if there is any objection later on, I shall ask a reconsideration.

EFFECT ON DOMESTIC SUGAR

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. TYDINGS. I yield to the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Am I to understand that this bill as it was passed in the House is substantially the same, with respect to its provisions regarding sugar, as the bill which passed the Senate?

Mr. TYDINGS. To the best of my knowledge there is no substantial difference between the House bill and the Senate bill in regard to sugar.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. There is no change in the sugar quota?

Mr. TYDINGS. None at all.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. So that in permitting the passage of this bill at this time we shall not be changing the action of the Senate?

Mr. TYDINGS. Not a bit.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Although it is a different bill that comes before us?

Mr. TYDINGS. That is correct, except that there is in it a revenue provision which ought to originate in the House of Representatives to come clearly within the purview of the Constitution.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, when the Senator from Maryland advised me yesterday that he was about to ask that this bill be acted upon, I was considerably concerned, not only because I wanted to be sure that the House bill did not modify any of the provisions of the Senate bill with respect to Philippine sugar, but also because reports were being published in the newspapers and circulated through certain financial letters that it was the purpose of the State Department to await the adjournment of Congress, and then to announce a reduction of 15 points in the tariff upon Cuban sugar. It seemed to me to be almost unbelievable that there could be any basis for that charge; but it was made openly in the columns of the press, and it had been circulated for several months.

For example, yesterday morning in the Journal of Commerce and Commercial of New York, Wednesday, August 2, there was a story on sugar prices which contained this paragraph:

Domestic sugar futures continued to mark time yesterday, apparently waiting for adjournment of Congress, since it is widely believed that action on the Cuban sugar duty will be taken immediately following that event.

Mr. President, at the beginning of this session I was one of those who offered a resolution, which went to the Committee on Finance, having to do with this proposed modification of the reciprocal-trade agreement with Cuba intended to make a further reduction of the tariff upon sugar. That matter was considered at an open, public hearing. It was and is a question of great importance to the sugar-producing States in the United States, and to all domestic sugar areas, whether or not it is proposed to grant additional concessions to Cuban sugar interests.

Much concern has been felt throughout the United States because of the apprehension that it might indeed be the intention of the State Department to announce a modification of the trade agreement immediately after the adjournment of Congress.

In the letter issued by Farr & Co., brokers in raw and refined sugar, on Wednesday, July 19, I found, for example, this statement:

Today the market for Cuban sugar is stimulated by a report that the Cuban Ambassador is leaving for Washington to speed negotiations for revision of the reciprocity treaty and that the Cuban Government has virtually accepted proposals made by our State Department paving the way for the ratification of this much-discussed proposition. Many of those best informed have been of the opinion that a final agreement on this question would be held back until the American Congress adjourned and as this is now expected within 2 weeks, the prospects for the 15-point tariff reduction to be made effective appear to be more favorable than at any previous time.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am very glad to yield.

Mr. KING. I have examined the bill, and it seems to me that it is not susceptible of any interpretation which might affect the sugar interests of the United States. Indeed, it does not deal with sugar; it deals with a few unimportant commodities with which there is no particular competition in the United States Certainly, as a member of the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, which considered this matter, I would not consent to the passage of any measure which would injuriously affect, or affect at all, our sugar interests.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I am satisfied that the bill as it comes to the floor of the Senate now does not change the situation with respect to sugar, but I wanted to take advantage of this opportunity to emphasize my view with respect to the right of Congress to have the most complete information regarding the negotiation of reciprocaltrade agreements. I wanted, also, to eliminate if possible whatever basis there may have been for the allegation that it was the purpose of the State Department, immediately Congress went into adjournment, to take action which the State Department knows would be opposed by a substantial number of Members of this body and of the House of Representatives. So I am very happy to send to the desk this morning a letter from the Honorable Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, which I shall ask that the clerk read.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. KING. It seems to me that the Senator desires to warn the Secretary of State not to negotiate any treaty with Cuba-and I am in sympathy with that view-which will be injurious to the sugar interests of the United States. This is an admonition to the State Department to keep within legitimate bounds.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am not one to admonish anyone.

Mr. KING. I differ with the Senator.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE DISAVOWS REPORT

Mr. O'MAHONEY. But I should like to have the letter read, and then I shall be very happy to have the Senator from Maryland make comment upon it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE Washington, August 2, 1939.

The Honorable Joseph C. O'MAHONEY,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: With reference to our telephone conversation of this afternoon regarding the statement which you stated recently appeared in the press to the effect that the State Department is only awaiting the adjournment of Congress before cutting the tariff only awalting the adjournment of Congress before cutting the tariff duties on Cuban sugar, I should like positively to deny the statement. As a matter of fact, negotiations with the Cuban Government have been in progress ever since last November. These negotiations have had their ups and their downs. For a time it looked as though announcement would have to be made of the break-down of the negotiations. At the present moment it is impossible to say whether the negotiations will be successful and an agreement can be reached or not. Many grave obstacles stand in the way of agreement. It can be positively asserted that no immediate action is in prospect. is in prospect.
Sincerely yours,

FRANCIS B. SAYRE.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Ellender] I know is likewise concerned about sugar, and I should be glad to answer any question he might desire to ask.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I do not desire to ask the Senator from Maryland a question, but a few minutes ago he made the statement that all Senators interested in sugar were consulted, and I wish to say that, although I represent a sugar-producing State, I was not consulted. I take the Senator's word to the effect that there is nothing in the bill which changes the tariff on sugar or, in fact, the present sugar set-up.

Mr. TYDINGS. No change was made in the sugar set-up: and because the Senators from Colorado and Wyoming, who are keenly interested in the subject, had examined the bill, I took the liberty, as no change was made, of making the broad statement I did make.

I ask that the bill be put on its passage.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I ask the Senator whether he has any comment to make upon the letter just

Mr. TYDINGS. I learned from Mr. Sayre this morning that the report published in the press, to which the Senator adverted, was without foundation, and that it was neither the intention of Mr. Sayre nor of the State Department to promulgate the line of policy indicated in the newspaper comment to which the Senator referred.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I understand how important it is to the executive branch of the Government to secure action upon this bill, and in view of the fact that there is now to be a change in the high commissionership, and Secretary Sayre is about to go to the Philippine Islands. I should not want to take advantage of the opportunity which is presented at this late day in the session to prevent the passage of the bill, or even to offer an amendment with respect to the Cuban tariff, although I desire to call attention to the fact that the Senate of the United States months ago passed a bill amending the present sugar act, and sent it to the House of Representatives, where it has been pigeonholed in the Committee on Agriculture because the executive arm of the Government, including the State Department, has been unwilling to have it considered. I want the RECORD to show that I am not following, with respect to Philippine legislation, the example that was set to me with respect to sugar legislation.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, the Record will show what the Senator has just stated, and the letter, and I may say that the Record will likewise show that Wyoming has a wideawake Senator, who looks after its interests, in the person of the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY].

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Wyoming how he interprets the letter which he has had read at the desk.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I will ask that the letter be handed back to me.

Mr. VANDENBERG. There is some consolation and comfort in the letter from the viewpoint of those who think American farmers are entitled to priority over Cuban farmers.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, if I may answer for the Senator, or supplement what he would say with something of which he did not have first-hand knowledge, this morning I talked with Mr. Sayre about this matter, and he told me that I could state emphatically on the floor that no action of the kind indicated in the newspaper article was contemplated, and that no action of that kind would be taken by the State Department.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, may I interpret that to this extent, that there will be no action by the State Department in a further reduction of Cuban tariffs on sugar pending the reassembling of Congress next January?

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator can interpret only what I have myself heard Mr. Sayre say; namely, that the State Department contemplated no action; secondly, that the State Department would take no action touching the matter indicated by the Senator from Wyoming. I cannot interpret any better than by making those two statements. However, from those two propositions I would assume that between now and January, if certainly not for a longer period, no action of the kind mentioned by the Senator from Wyoming will be undertaken by the State Department.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, if I may answer the Senator from Michigan, now that I have the letter back in my hand, I will say that I would not wish to interpret it as a broad assertion that the State Department is absolutely and completely foreclosing itself from the right to complete negotiations. I take this as a practical matter, however. The concluding sentences read as follows:

At the present moment it is impossible to say whether the negotiations will be successful and an agreement can be reached or not. Many grave obstacles stand in the way of agreement. It can be positively asserted that no immediate action is in prospect.

We all know that the language of diplomacy is traditionally involved and circuitous, but as a matter of practical interpretation, since this is the 3d of August, and Congress will be back in session in January, if no special session shall be called, I think that for all practical purposes we may rest assured that there will be no reduction of the tariff on Cuban sugar while Congress is not in session. I think that, in all the circumstances, since those of us who represent the sugargrowing States are waiving any objection we may have to this bill at this time, we may look forward to careful consideration by the State Department of the right of those of us who represent the sugar-producing States to be heard further upon the matter of any modification of the Cuban reciprocal-trade agreement before any negotiations are concluded.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I wish to observe that the question about the relations between the United States and Cuba is not germane to the pending bill. The bill does not deal at all with sugar.

Mr. TYDINGS. Of course not.

Mr. KING. It has no relation whatever to the relations between the United States and Cuba.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, it does deal with sugar. I can read the language of the bill, if the Senator insists. It does deal with sugar.

Mr. KING. The Senator is in error; it does not deal with the question of sugar in the Philippine Islands. Its primary purpose is to deal with the importation into the United States of a few commodities which are not in competition with United States products.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I want to assert myself as in precisely the same attitude as that taken by the Senator from Wyoming. We who speak on this floor for the domestic sugar industry do have an opportunity at this moment to strike a blow for the adequate protection of this industry in connection with the pending bill, and when we forego that opportunity on the basis of the letter submitted by the able Senator from Wyoming, I hope that our attitude of generosity in connection with it will be emulated by the State Department and reciprocated when the proper time comes.

Merely to complete the Record so that it may show precisely what it is the letter the Senator from Wyoming refers to, I desire to put into the Record the statement from the New York Journal of Commerce of August 2 one sentence reading as follows:

Domestic sugar futures continued to mark time yesterday, apparently waiting for adjournment of Congress, since it is widely believed that action on the Cuban sugar duty will be taken immediately following that event.

And also a sentence from the Lamborn Sugar-Market Reports, which says:

Offsetting the disappointing A. A. A. delivery figures for June was a renewed rumor that the proposed reduction in the duty on Cuban sugar was again under consideration, with strong intimations of such reduction being made shortly after the adjournment of Congress.

Those two reports are specifically refuted by the State Department in the letter submitted by the able Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], and I hope our reliance upon the State Department's reply may be as complete as is indicated by the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I appreciate the courtesy of the Senate in helping us get this bill through, even though the opportunity exists here for bringing in subjects which are indirectly related to it. I also appreciate the great courtesy of the Senator from Utah in yielding the floor.

I hope I may not be considered captious when I suggest that in view of the fact that I have interrupted the speech of the Senator from Utah in order to get the bill considered, Senators will accommodate the courtesy of the action by at least making their future remarks as short as possible, so that all of us may not transgress on his courtesy.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for just one moment more?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. This has to do with the statement of the Senator from Utah that there is nothing about sugar in this bill. I read from page 4, beginning in line 16:

The United States duty shall be levied, collected, and paid, in the United States, upon all Philippine sugars, which are entered, or withdrawn from warehouse, for consumption in any calendar year after 1939, in excess of 850,000 long tons, of which not more than 50,000 long tons may be refined sugars.

That very provision was the subject of long debate upon the floor of the Senate when the Senate bill was under consideration in the first place.

Mr. TYDINGS. Not in this bill, I may say to the Senator. That is in existing law.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes; but there was a question as to whether or not there would be a difference of opinion in the interpretation of direct consumption of sugar, and I find that also in this bill. As a matter of fact, Mr. President, it was because of my desire to be certain that the provisions protecting the sugar industry which we wrote into the Senate bill were contained in this bill, that I asked for the delay in order that I might have the opportunity to examine it. And I may say I am satisfied.

Mr. TYDINGS. So long as we are all in agreement I should like very much to have a vote on the bill.

Mr. ELLENDER. I hope the interpretation placed on the Sayre letter by the Senator from Wyoming will prevail. However, during the past several weeks reports have been brought to my attention that the sugar trade in New York had serious reasons for anticipating that another 15 cents per 100 pounds would be lopped off the tariff on Cuban sugar. When these reports were brought to my attention, I immediately took up the matter with the State Department and I could at no time get the State Department officials to say that they would not take action at some time in the near future on the reduction of the tariff. I expressed to them my sincere hope that the State Department would see fit to take no action until we shall consider the sugar bill next year.

Mr. President, it is well known to the Senate that in 1940 the Sugar Act of 1937 must be extended or a new sugar bill considered. The Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act will also expire in 1940 and the Congress will have to consider whether to extend the powers granted and whether such powers, shall be subjected to reasonable restrictions by the Congress. There is a direct relationship between the reciprocal-trade policies of the United States Government and the Sugar Act of 1937. There is likewise a direct relationship between these two laws and the Philippine Independence Act, which makes definite provisions with respect to sugar. Since these problems are so closely related would it not be wise to consider them together?

At the beginning of this session, I introduced a resolution, the purpose of which was to avoid the plowing up of sugarcane in Louisiana and Florida and make it possible for the sugarcane growers of those States to conduct the normal progress of their industry. When the matter came before the Senate I readily accepted the amendments which Senators from beet-sugar-producing States proposed for the benefit of their beet growers. Although my resolution passed the Senate without a dissenting vote recorded, there has been no further action and the reason given has been that the Sugar Act must be considered in all of its provisions at the 1940 session of Congress.

In like manner, when the reports from Cuba came to the attention of the Senate that commitments had been made by the United States Government to grant Cuba an additional reduction in the tariff on sugar, despite the fact that the tariff had been reduced since 1933 from 2 cents per pound to nine-tenths of a cent per pound, I joined with other Senators in introducing a resolution asking for a full explanation of such commitment. Upon reassurances being given by the Secretary of State that no such commitment had been officially made, it was assumed that the whole subject of sugar tariff would be postponed until the Sugar Act, the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, and the Philippine Independence Act could be further considered in a coordinated manner at the same session of Congress. Recently persistent reports from Cuba and statements coming from persons engaged in the sugar trade at New York, have created the general impression that the expected changes in the Cuban trade agreement are awaiting the adjournment of Congress. Newspaper reports daily and trade reports alike for the past 3 or 4 weeks have repeated this expectation so often that I have become convinced that these reporters actually believe that there is in prospect a reduction in the tariff on Cuban sugar immediately after Congress adjourns. All trade reports indicate that Cuban sugars in large volume are being imported, but not entered in the customs of the United States, in anticipation of a reduction in the Cuban tariff, which would mean a saving of 15 cents per 100 pounds of sugar imported into this country.

Mr. President, I realize that it is neither practical nor desirable to legislate on sugar every year and I can see why the administration and its leaders in Congress might want to postpone action so that the whole subject can be considered at one time. I submit that it is entirely inconsistent to postpone action to afford relief to the sugarcane growers and the sugar-beet growers of the United States, and at the same time take action for the benefit of the Cuban industry, most of which will flow into Wall Street rather than into the pockets of the sugarcane growers and laborers of Cuba. To be consistent and to do a fair job for everybody concerned, all of these matters should be considered by Congress at the same time so as to have coordination. If the Cubans are given special relief in advance of the next session of Congress, will they not be in a preferred position when the sugar bill is considered in 1940? The situation is not at all involved. It may become confused if Congress takes action with reference to the Philippines that might act as an obstacle to a full and free consideration of the whole sugar problem next year. It will certainly become confused if the State Department chooses to give advanced preferential treatment to Cuba in the matter of tariff. It is my sincere hope that the State Department, having delayed action on amending the Cuban trade agreement while Congress is in session, will wait until the next session of Congress to further consider the matter.

Mr. President, I wish to point out one important reason for objecting to any change in the tariff on Cuban sugar during this session of Congress or at any time in the near future. As I pointed out a few minutes ago, the President has already reduced the tariff on Cuban sugar in the amount of 60 cents per 100 pounds. When the Sugar Act of 1937 was passed the amount of the benefit payment to the sugarcane and sugar-beet growers was fixed at 60 cents per 100 pounds, so that the growers would be reimbursed a sum equal to the reduced protection accorded their industry.

Necessarily if the rate of duty on Cuban sugar is to be further reduced, the rate of the benefit payments to our sugar producers should be increased correspondingly, otherwise the growers of sugarcane and sugar beets in the United States would be the victims. It should be the desire of those of us who have the interest of the American farmers at heart to make sure that at no time will any change in our Government's policy be made at their expense.

Mr. President, I desire to thank the distinguished Senator from Utah [Mr. King] for his indulgence.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I want to thank the Senator from Utah for his courtesy.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, just one observation. I repeat what I said a moment ago, that this bill does not affect our dealings with the Philippines, and the relations between the Philippines and the United States in regard to sugar. It deals with other matters quite foreign to the sugar question. The sugar bill which is now upon the statute books fully protects the United States in its relations with the Philippines, and I am sure there is no Senator who desires to change that relation so far as the present is concerned.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, before we take our final departure, in regard to the bill we have been discussing in the last few minutes, I should like to accord my congratulations to the gentleman who has just been appointed Philippine High Commissioner. If I understand correctly his interview, he is going there not for the purpose of propagandizing for the breaking of obligations of this Government, but for the purpose of carrying them out, and that he feels that our national honor is involved in maintaining the compact or contract which we have heretofore made with the Philippine people.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, may I just add a word of congratulation also to the new Commissioner, that he completely disagrees with his distinguished predecessor, Mr. McNutt, that we ought to stay in the Philippine Islands forever.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, it would seem that the Philippine problem has been thrust into the discussion today perhaps with some advantage. May I say, deviating from the speech which I intended to make, that I have been very much interested in the Philippine problem for many years. I think the great mistake which was made by the United States was in failing to carry out the pledge of the Democratic Party made in 1920. I had the honor to introduce the resolution in the Democratic convention, and in the Democratic platform, that the Filipinos should have their complete independence at the earliest possible date, and if back in the early twenties we had given to the Filipinos their independence, as they desired, and as we promised in the platform to which I have referred, some of the problems which have arisen since then would have been obviated and the Philippine question would no more be upon the doorstep of the United States.

I feared that it would be with us for an indefinite period, but I am very glad that the President has selected Dr. Sayre as the Philippine Commissioner, because he will approach the problems there in the proper spirit, and with the determination to see that the rights of the continental United States and the American nationals shall be respected and preserved.

CONVEYANCE OF CERTAIN LAND TO THE STATE OF NEVADA

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain land to the State of Nevada to be used for the purposes of a public park and recreational site and other public purposes, which were, on page 2, line 12, to strike out all after "of", where it appears the first time, down to and including "24" in line 4 of page 3 and insert "sections 12, 13, and 24, but specifically excluding the land in the area which is under private ownership,"; on page 3, line 17, after "sanitation," to insert "or if there be a repeal, with no reenactment within 90 days of the resolution of the Board of County Commissioners of Clark County, Nev., dated August 1, 1939, made in consideration of the passage of this bill, which forbids gambling and the sale of liquor within the confines of the proposed State park or within a radius of 6 miles of the boundaries thereof,"; and on page 3, line 22, after "for", to insert "national recreational area or"

Mr. PITTMAN. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

NEUTRALITY, BY LAW AND IN PRACTICE

Mr. KING. Mr. President, there has been considerable discussion during this session in regard to neutrality. I desire to submit a few observations on the subject, hoping that they may have some effect upon the action of the Senate upon this important question.

Conflicting views are dividing the American people with respect to the course which our Government should pursue in its international relations,

It is insisted by some that the present Neutrality Act shall be continued. Others insist that it shall be strengthened, and by that they mean that greater restrictions shall be imposed upon our Government and upon our nationals. Others urge that the present Neutrality Act has proven most unsatisfactory and will endanger the peace of our Republic; and, under these circumstances, the demand is made that the Neutrality Act of 1937 be repealed, and that our Government chart its course by the principles of international law.

There are those who contend that international law is inadequate to meet situations which international conflicts, particularly if they eventuate in war, develop. In other words, they insist that international law, notwithstanding its importance and pervasive influence, is silent in periods of stress and storm and when the fires of war are lighted.

I was opposed to the Neutrality Act of 1935, which was amended by the act of 1937. I believed it to be a departure from the traditional attitude of our Government with respect to the principles of neutrality. I insisted that it was not in harmony with the principles that were announced by Washington and Jefferson, and by which this Nation was governed in its international relations during the intervening years.

The act, as I believed, not only was a restriction upon our Government but it was an interference with the freedom and liberty of our nationals. I believed then, as I believe now, that it was unneutral, and therefore would not only prove unsatisfactory but might provoke international criticism and possibly international difficulties.

Certainly it was an attempt at isolation, and was a surrender of American rights for which the act itself afforded no compensation, Briefly, the act provides that the President, whenever he shall find that a state of war exists between two or more foreign states, or that civil strife of sufficient magnitude exists in a foreign state, shall proclaim such fact. Thereafter it shall be unlawful to export arms, ammunitions, or implements of war from the United States to any of the belligerents; to purchase, sell, or exchange bonds or other obligations of any belligerent government; to arm any merchant vessel of the United States beyond the extent necessary to preserve discipline aboard such vessel; or for any citizen of the United States to travel on any vessel of a belligerent. It was further provided that the law should not apply to American republics engaged in war against a non-American state, if the American republic was not cooperating with a non-American state in such war.

The so-called cash-and-carry provisions of the act, which expired on May 1 last, prohibited the shipping in American vessels of articles, specified by the President, in addition to arms, ammunition, or implements of war, and allowed their export in foreign ships only after all right, title, and interest had been transferred to a foreign government or agency.

It is to be noted that the act is not to be operative unless and until the President shall find that a state of war exists. In other words, it is entirely within the discretion of the Chief Executive to determine whether or not arms and munitions may be sold to a country engaged in hostilities, whether or not a citizen may purchase bonds of such a government or travel upon her ships. The dangers that inhere in this unfettered discretion—with no standard of any kind to guide the President in making the determination, with no definition of what constitutes a "state of war," with no requirement that a state of war be recognized even though it in fact exists—become apparent.

Criticisms have been leveled against our Government because of its interpretation of the Neutrality Act, as well as the interpretation which has been placed upon its provisions. It is believed by many that under the principles of international law a different course would have been required by our Government in dealing with the Spanish situation and in its dealings with the devastating and tragic war which Japan has waged against China.

Certainly, conditions which have existed since the Neutrality Act of 1937 have demonstrated the futility of legislating in advance to meet conditions in a turbulent and changing world.

The discretion resting with the Executive, it is believed by many, is inimical to the interests of the American people, and may result in placing the Government in an unneutral position. The moment hostilities occur in any part of the world, the President must determine whether or not the resources of this Nation shall continue to flow to the belligerents. If an embargo is laid, it is inconceivable that it would affect both belligerents alike, and the country disadvantageously affected would have grounds for complaint; whereas, if the act is not invoked the other belligerent might be injured. Even though the President exercises this discretion solely for the welfare of the United States, the belligerent that is adversely affected can look upon it only as a hostile act on the part of this country. Placing the Government in such an unneutral situation, where it will likely incur disfavor from one side or the other, cannot be cited as an aid in keeping America out of war.

The difficulty in applying the act is further aggravated by the time element. Should it be invoked at the moment the first shot is fired, or should there be an interval during which peace negotiations may be attempted, or until it appears that the war will be of such proportions as to present a threat of involvement to America? If the act be not invoked at once, a belligerent might quickly obtain sufficient arms and other essentials before it is applied. The delay would be regarded by the other belligerent as a hostile and unneutral act toward it.

Another ground for my opposition to the act is that it offers an incentive for aggressive nations to declare war against nations which are less prepared and less aggressive; for so long as there is peace, arms, ammunition, and implements of war may be obtained from the United States. Walter Lippmann states that by repealing the Neutrality Act "we shall take away from them [referring to Germany and Italy] the hideous inducement to start a war in order to deprive their opponents of supplies that they can obtain only as long as there is no war."

In the troubled conditions prevailing throughout the world today, this Republic, with its great material and moral strength, should lead in the progress toward international peace and friendly cooperation among the family of nations. Dedicated to the high principles of justice and freedom, it has ever sought the settlement of disputes by pacific means. The spiritual force of this democracy has elevated the concept of government in many lands, and its devotion to peace has had its influence upon the world.

The act of 1937 is illogical and, in my opinion, should be repealed. There is no basis for placing an embargo upon the sale of arms, ammunition, and implements of war and not including in that embargo other articles such as oil, food, and clothing which are as essential, if not more so, to the conduct of modern warfare. Surely there is no greater risk in shipping armaments than there is in transporting other articles needed in carrying on military activities. The arbitrary distinction is unfair to certain nations and, again, places the United States in an unfavorable situation. Industrial countries do not need arms and munitions if they can import the raw materials with which to manufacture them; but some countries which are primarily agricultural are themselves in dire need of the manufactured articles, and their embargo, while permitting the exportation of scrap iron and other essential raw materials from which they are made, operates to the disadvantage of nonindustrial nations.

In this troubled world condition, legislation in advance concerning our foreign policy cannot be planned intelligently. Our short experience under the present act has demonstrated the impossibility of formulating a rule to guide the United States in international conflicts which may arise. We cannot foresee who will be at war or the cause of the war. We cannot divine the issues which will be involved; nor can we give expression to what the public sentiment in this country will be 6 months from now, or 1 year, or 5 years.

The act of 1937 is a surrender of conceded neutral rights even before war breaks out. In the event of a conflict, having surrendered certain rights, I fear we shall have to enumerate rights to which we intend to hold fast. Belligerents are not concerned in the details of local legislation. They are at war, and grudgingly admit restraints imposed by the principles of international law as they have come to be accepted through centuries of warfare.

There is no justification for the surrender of our neutral rights. There is no requirement for such self-denial.

If the purpose is to prevent war, concerted action by several great powers would be the only effective curb. The futility of one nation attempting a partial or general embargo against belligerents in order to prevent war has been demonstrated throughout history. It is too clear for argument that if the United States refuses to sell certain articles to countries at war, others producing the same articles will gladly supply the warring nations. The restriction upon our own trade is merely a deprivation for the benefit of our foreign competitors. It must be remembered that Americans by nature will oppose restraints upon their rights and freedom unless the justification therefor is clear.

However, regardless of the purpose, so long as the ultimate end is to avoid being drawn into a war, the Neutrality Act presents dangers to American peace interests, and any neutrality measure must be carefully and skillfully drawn because of the almost certain danger of its operating as an unneutral measure.

The United States has not often been a belligerent, and therefore has been primarily interested in determining the rights of neutrals, particularly with reference to matters affecting trade and commerce. This has resulted in announcing, as an international policy, the freedom of the seas. Our Nation has been foremost in championing the freedom of the seas, and I am unwilling to favor a policy, adopted in the act of 1937, which in effect is an attempt to seek isolation by the abdication of our rights at sea, if not on land.

It is apparent that we cannot be isolated from all possible dangers of international conflicts, and no policy of alleged neutrality should be adopted which narrows the rights of our country or weakens international law. The rights of neutrals and belligerents should rest upon recognized principles of the law of nations. This does not mean that treaties should not be entered into between nations for the purpose of promoting peace and widening the opportunities for trade and commerce and cultural and economic devel-

As I have indicated, the act of 1937 seeks to deprive Americans of the freedom of action in the event of a foreign war. It serves notice in advance that our Government will draw no distinctions between the violators of international law and the victims of such violation.

I opposed the act of 1937, believing that it would encourage armament at home, if not abroad, and that the American people would be called upon to increase their already heavy appropriations for military and naval purposes. This prediction has come true; and the appropriations for socalled preparedness which will be made by the present Congress for the next fiscal year will exceed $2,000,000,000.

For the reasons stated, and others which might be mentioned, the neutrality legislation, in my opinion, should be repealed, and we should take our stand upon the foundation and precepts of international law.

However, it is contended that these principles were violated during the World War, that treaties and solemn pacts were ignored and broken with impunity, and that therefore international law is dead.

Assuming this contention to be true, if the alternative to international law-the Neutrality Act-offered a guaranty of peace, there would be validity in the argument that we should rely upon the Neutrality Act to keep us out of war: but since it is admitted that there can be no guaranty of peace, it becames our duty to follow such a course as will give the United States the most security in its intention to remain at peace. The grave complications likely to result from tying the hands of government by declaring a policy in advance of circumstances that cannot be predicted may not be minimized. I have adverted to a few of the embarrassments which the United States would face in the event of an international conflict if our course were charted by the act of 1937; and these would tend to involve the country in war far more than situations which might arise under the rules of international law.

I cannot subscribe to the view that the law of nations is dead. Dr. John Bassett Moore, the eminent authority on international law, who was for 6 years a judge of the Permanent Court of International Justice, insists that it has not ceased to exist merely because its principles have been violated. He declares:

It has never heretofore been supposed that when belligerents violated international law they believed that they were destroying it or depriving it of its obligatory force.

International law is recognized among all nations. It is a term applied to the body of rules and regulations of states and other bodies possessing international personality. It is more than policies adopted in diplomatic relations. It finds expression in comity among nations. It is a part of the law of the land, recognized by the courts and by judicial tribunals in all civilized nations. It has been implemented and strengthened by agreements, treaties, customs, and concrete and ordered dealings among states. International law was recognized in ancient Greece, but it declined under the Roman Empire. It has been said that the birth of international law is traceable to the Peace of Westphalia. It is not unilateral but multilateral, and is in part due to compromises among nations under the terms of which selfish state laws or international policies are modified in the interest of better relations among nations. It is a recognition of the importance of higher moral standards among nations and a broader spirit of tolerance and justice. Grotius and other great writers on international law sought to mitigate the spirit of fierce nationalism and to secure a recognition by nations of what might be called natural justice.

They sought to modify the doctrine of exclusive sovereignty of nations and to bring about a certain amount of collectivity of action among nations. Various international conferences have been held for the purpose of codifying international law and formulating broader policies for the promotion of world peace.

As nations advanced in civilization, a higher ethical concept was developed, and the principles of international law became more firmly established and more generally recognized.

More recently efforts have been made to develop international machinery for the purpose of outlawing war and to make more effective the principles of international law. In the evolution of the principles of international law, emphasis was early laid upon impartiality toward belligerents, but more recently methods are being sought to determine the justice of war and who are the aggressors. Neutrals are to aid in bringing pressure upon wrongdoers.

And so the view is being developed that international law, with its emphasis upon neutrality, does not compel neutral nations to be silent in the face of assaults by powerful states upon weak and unoffending peoples. In other words, in determining the course to be pursued by neutrals consideration is being given to the question of justice and ethics and morality which arise or grow out of international conflicts; and the conduct of belligerents is being weighed by neutral nations, and the course of the latter is influenced by the verdict as to which of the belligerents was the aggressor and whether its conduct calls for universal condemnation. This, as I have indicated, may result in profound changes in the law of neutrality and affect the application of international law.

Bainbridge Colby, former Secretary of State, has stated:

It is a well-known principle of international law that the measure of a nation's neutral obligations is to be found in the rules of international law and nowhere else. As a result of centuries of wars, this group of principles was evolved by which belligerents and neutrals achieved some reasonably definite guides to the conduct of their reciprocal relations on land and sea. The adoption of these rules has been regarded throughout the civilized world as a victory for civilization over brute force, for law over anarchy. for civilization over brute force, for law over anarchy.

Mr. Colby warns that the principles of international law, despite the opinion in some quarters that it is a thing of the past, may nevertheless be tellingly invoked to show the unneutrality of the act of 1937:

If we assume the nonexistence of international law because of its unpunished violations during the last war, we may find ourselves confronted by it in all its rigor when our conduct is challenged under its ancient and established rules. We may find that we have consigned our shipping to disuse, transferred the trade of our citizens to foreign competitors, and undermined fatally our domestic economy, discovering too late that our new and ingenious formulas have not worked as expected.

The rules of international law may not prove in themselves a source of complete protection. But we shall know what our rights are and we can determine in each instance what degree of self-restraint or forbearance we can afford to practice.

Our present Neutrality Act does not lend to the strengthening of the principles of international law; rather, it is a renunciation of those principles. This nation, occupying a high place among the countries of the world, with its material and spiritual strength, should take the lead in bringing about international cooperation and peace.

AMENDMENT OF BONNEVILLE PROJECT ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7270) to amend the Bonneville Project Act, requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and announcing the appointment of conferees.

Mr. BAILEY. I move that the Senate insist on its amendment, agree to the request of the House of Representatives for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

CONSIDERATION OF UNOBJECTED-TO HOUSE BILLS ON THE CALENDAR

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Gurney in the chair). Under the unanimous-consent agreement entered into earlier in the day, the Senate will now proceed to the consideration of unobjected-to House bills on the calendar.

Mr. AUSTIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Downey Ellender Lucas Shipstead Lundeen McCarran Slattery Smathers Andrews Ashurst George Austin Gerry McKellar Maloney Smith Stewart Bailey Gibson Guffey Gurney Mead Miller Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah Bankhead Barkley Borah Hale Harrison Minton Tobey Townsend Bridges Murray Neely Nye O'Mahoney Brown Bulow Hatch Truman Tydings Vandenberg Hayden Burke Herring Holt Hughes Pepper Pittman Van Nuys Byrd Wagner Byrnes Johnson, Calif. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-seven Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I invite the attention of the Senate to House bill 5685, which I should like to have con-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill referred to by the Senator from Utah?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I reserve the right to make an objection. I should like to know what the bill is.

Mr. KING. The House has passed a bill which was exactly the same as a Senate bill dealing with real-estate brokers, salesmen, and so forth, in the District of Columbia.

Mr. BYRNES. I shall object until I have an opportunity to look into the bill.

Mr. KING. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

The clerk will call the calendar, under the unanimousconsent agreement, for the consideration of unobjected-to bills from the House of Representatives.

The first business on the calendar under the unanimousconsent agreement was the bill (H. R. 289) for the relief of officers and soldiers of the Volunteer service of the United States mustered into service for the War with Spain.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

CLOSER RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN AMERICAN REPUBLICS

The bill (H. R. 5835) to authorize the President to render closer and more effective the relationship between the American republics was announced as next in order.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I do not intend to object to the consideration of this bill, because I recognize that it comes with an almost unanimous report from the committee, and it would be a waste of the time of the Senate for me to do so. I should like the RECORD to show, however, my own personal doubt as to the value of this type of policy.

In my opinion, the Latin-American countries will buy American goods if the American goods are priced right and are of sufficiently high quality; and, in my opinion, the Latin American peoples, like all other peoples, will feel friendly toward the United States if the United States treats them fairly and justly. The notion that because the dictators of the "axis" powers undertake to propagandize and influence public sentiment in those countries we should do the same thing is to me an abhorrent notion. Indeed, the fact that they do engage in this type of conduct seems to me a very good reason why we should not do it.

I am also advised-and I hope I shall be corrected if I am wrong-that the appropriation to do this work in Latin America has already been put through; and it seems to me a disorderly procedure to appropriate money before the authorization is made. For that reason, too, I have been objecting to this bill.

I wanted this opportunity to state my views, and shall not object further to the consideration of the bill at this time.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of the bill and its purpose by the chairman of the committee; and I further inquire whether a committee of the Senate has considered it?

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, the bill was considered for some time-twice, I believe-by the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. It deals only with the functions of the State Department. The State Department has created what it calls a Division of Cultural Relations and has also provided that there shall be an advisory board with regard to these cultural relations. The bill deals principally with the exchange of professors and students in colleges.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

REFUND OF INTERNAL-REVENUE TAXES

The bill (H. R. 1648), to provide for the refund or credit of the internal-revenue tax paid on spirits lost or rendered unmarketable by reason of the floods of 1936 and 1937 where such spirits were in possession of the original taxpayer or rectifier for bottling or use in rectification, under Government supervision, as provided by law and regulations, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the bill just reached on the calendar is a House bill which was called day before yesterday, and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follette] asked that it go over. The Senator from Wisconsin is in a meeting of the Committee on Appropriations, and I will not ask that the bill be acted on at this time. However, I wish to say that it is a bill which should be passed. It authorizes the refunding of the cost of stamps which were destroyed and damaged in the Ohio River flood in 1936 and 1937 in such a way as to make them nonusable. Certainly the Government ought not to collect a tax on distilled spirits, and, after the tax has been collected and stamps representing the tax have been destroyed, insist that the owner of the distilled spirits buy new stamps before the liquor can be placed on the market. I do not know what the objection to the measure could be, but I will not ask that it be considered now. However, I hope we can take it up on its merits before we adjourn, and take some action on it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I wish to give notice that when the Senate takes up House bill 1648, to which the able Senator from Kentucky has referred, I intend to offer an amendment, which I will submit now and ask to lie on the table. I will state briefly the purpose of the amendment.

Mr. President, this is the only revenue bill I can find on the calendar to which I can attach a revenue amendment. The amendment has the simple and sole purpose of taking out of the deadlock in conference on the social-security bill that section which freezes the pay-roll taxes, and prevents an increase of 50 percent next January in the pay-roll taxes on employers and employees under title II of the Social Security Act.

There is no disagreement at all between the House and the Senate on that particular provision. There is a universal feeling all over the country that such action should be taken. If it is not, a very serious situation will result in respect to the tax burden resting particularly upon smaller business in this country.

If the deadlock on the bill making amendments to the Social Security Act continues, and it goes over to the next session, that will be too late to cure this particular situation and to prevent the increase in the pay-roll taxes. Therefore I wish to take advantage of this revenue bill in order to offer an amendment reenacting simply that portion of the Social Security amendments, now deadlocked in conference, dealing with the freezing of the pay-roll taxes next January.

I submit the amendment, and ask that it lie on the table, so that it can be considered when Calendar No. 1026 (House bill 1648) is taken up.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to say in that connection that I very sincerely and earnestly hope that the conference on the social-security amendments, which is now in session, will be able to arrive at an agreement before this session of Congress shall adjourn.

It seems to me that there were so many valuable amendments that were adopted by the House and adopted also by the Senate that the conferees should and, I am sure, will make every effort to come to a decision and agreement on the social-security amendments.

Whether it would be wise to pick out one particular amendment, referred to by the Senator from Michigan, and attach that to the bill to which I have called attention is a subject for further consideration; but I am expressing the very earnest hope that every effort will be made by the conferees on the part of the House and the Senate to come to a decision with respect to the amendments. There are so many good things in the social-security bill that it seems to me it would be a pity for it to fail at this session because of a contest over one or two controversial amendments. One of the amendments to which we all assent is that having to do with the freezing of the tax as it is now for the next 3 years. I hope that not only that but the other amendments to the law which have been brought forward will be agreed to in the conference, so that we may adopt a comprehensive conference report on the subject before final adjournment.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, of course I completely agree with the sentiments just expressed by the able majority leader. I think it would be a calamity for the social-security amendments to lapse, even until the next session of Congress. If the conferees agree, and the conference report comes in, I shall have no further interest in pressing the amendment I have now offered. It is solely in the anticipation that perhaps the deadlock may persist that I am seeking to salvage that one section of the social-security amendments, which must have action prior to New Year's, and prior to the time when Congress will reassemble, if it is to be effective.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I have just come into the Chamber. Is the Senator objecting to the consideration of House bill 1648?

Mr. VANDENBERG. No; I am offering an amendment to a revenue bill, so that we can take care of the pay-roll tax problem in relation to the social-security amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. AUSTIN. I now ask that the bill be read. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read. The Chief Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph (1) of section 96 of title 2 of the Canal Zone Code is amended to read as follows:

"(1) A sum equal to $37.50 multiplied by the number of years of service, not to exceed 30 years, rendered (a) on the 1sthmus of Panama, or (b) in the service of the United States in the Tropics;

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I inquire in what manner this bill changes the existing law?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, this is simply a bill to permit employees of the Panama Canal Zone in computing their tropical service, the service in the Canal Zone, to include time in the Tropics, either in the military service or the naval service, or in the civilian service in the Army or Navy in tropical countries. I can best explain the bill by quoting from a radio message from the Governor of the Canal, in which he says:

The records show that some 253 employees would be affected by the proposed legislation. These employees have rendered service aggregating 374 years and 2 months, or an average of 1 year and 7 months for each employee affected.

7 months for each employee affected.

This service has been rendered mainly in civilian occupations with the Army and Navy on the Isthmus and is not now allowed under the first paragraph of section 96 of title 2 of the Canal Zone Code because the regulations require that the military or naval service be supported by a discharge from the service, but it is allowed under the third paragraph of section 96. Most of these employees were under 32 years of age when they came to the Canal or railroad service and will have served with the Canal and/or railroad for more than the required 30 years before reaching the railroad for more than the required 30 years before reaching the age of 62 and the effect of the proposed amendment, therefore, including the added cost resulting therefrom, would be slight.

In other words, it simply permits the inclusion in the period of service rendered in the Tropics service performed in a civilian capacity as well as in the military or naval service or in a civilian capacity with the military or naval forces. The Army and the Navy, particularly in the Panama Canal Zone, both have a number of civilian employees which would otherwise be excluded under the law. It seems to me to be a meritorious proposition. It simply gives these people the benefit of the tropical service which they have endured.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MILITARY ESTABLISHMENTS OF AMERICAN REPUBLICS

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, what became of House Joint Resolution 367, being Calendar 1118?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed by the Parliamentarian that the measure has just been received from the Printing Office. It is the next on the calendar.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 367) to authorize the Secretaries of War and of the Navy to assist the governments of American republics to increase their military and naval establishments and for other purposes was announced as next in order.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I ask that the joint resolution be passed over.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his objection for a moment?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Yes.

Mr. PITTMAN. The joint resolution has passed the House. It was taken up in the Committee on Foreign Relations yesterday and was discussed by the committee. A considerable number of the members of the committee were present. I wish to call attention to the fact that the House bill contains amendments which the Senate bill did not contain. The House bill has the following provision in it:

And provided further, That no transaction authorized herein shall result in expenses to the United States nor involve the extension of credits by the United States.

In addition to that, the committee of the Senate offered another amendment which had a further proviso, as follows:

And provided further, That no contract shall be entered into under the terms of this resolution which shall interfere with or delay the United States in the full use of its shipyards, arsenals, munition plants, and other equipment for its own purposes.

Those are two limitations in this measure which were not in the original Senate bill, and I do not think they came to the attention of the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, neither of those amendments touches the base of my objection to the legisla-

Mr. PITTMAN. I may say also that on yesterday the Under Secretary of State, Mr. Sumner Welles, appeared before the committee and read correspondence with all Latin American republics except one. In respect to that one he had oral communications through their Ambasasdor here, and his Government approves this proposed legislation.

The objection which I know the Senator has in mind seems to be very largely obviated by this correspondence; but at least it must be apparent that no contract would be advised or permitted which would create dissension among the Latin American republics.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I object first, Mr. President, to any legislation which makes an arms huckster out of Uncle Sam. In the second place, I think this particular arrangement invites friction instead of friendship among South American countries. I am simply objecting to taking it up on the Unanimous Consent Calendar. If the Senator wants to move to proceed to the consideration of the bill when he is free to do so, certainly I cannot object to that. I am simply asserting my individual rights at the only moment when I can still assert them.

Mr. PITTMAN. I thought there were probably changes which had not come to the Senator's attention which might alter the Senator's view. That is why I made the suggestion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection having been heard, the bill will be passed over.

AMENDMENT OF THE CANAL ZONE CODE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 139) to amend the Canal Zone Code.

Mr. AUSTIN. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

PLAYA DE FLOR LAND & IMPROVEMENT CO.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7132) to amend an act entitled "An act for the relief of the Playa de Flor Land & Improvement Co.," approved May 21, 1934, which had been reported from the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, with an amendment, at the end of the bill to add a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act for the relief of the Playa de Flor Land & Improvement Co., approved May 21, 1934," be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding the following: "SEC. 2. All competent testimony, exhibits, or other evidence heretofore admitted in evidence in any proceeding heretofore had under authority of this act and all competent testimony, exhibits, or other evidence heretofore admitted in evidence in the cases docketed in said court as numbers 1 and 3, and, respectively, entitled 'Playa' de Flor Land & Improvement Co., a joint-stock corporation, plaintiff, vs. Eusebia Diaz et al., and The Panama Railroad Co., a corporation, defendants', and "The Panama Railroad Co., a corporation, defendants', and "The Panama Railroad Co., a corporation, plaintiff, vs. J. H. Stilson, W. Andrews, and C. P. Fairman, as the successors in interest and estate to Eufracis C. De Villalobos et al., defendants', shall be received in evidence for the same purpose as heretofore admitted in any suit brought or to be brought under authority of this act, as amended: Provided, That such evidence shall be subject, however, to any objection that the United States may interpose as to relevancy, materiality, or competency other than the objection of the witnesses not being produced in person."

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

POST OFFICE, AKRON, OHIO

The bill (H. R. 6021) to repeal the minimum-price limitation on sale of the Akron, Ohio, old post-office building and site, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT BUILDING COMMISSION

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 341) to dissolve the United States Supreme Court Building Commission was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, does that complete the House bills? I thought Calendar 1126 was the last one on the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the unanimous-consent agreement, the Senate is to complete the consideration of House bills on the calendar; and as there are a number of House bills reported by committees which are not yet on the printed calendar, it is the understanding of the present occupant of the chair that the Senate is to continue the consideration of House bills.

BENJAMIN HARRISON MEMORIAL

The bill (H. R. 4872) to establish the Benjamin Harrison Commission to formulate plans for the construction of a permanent memorial to the memory of Benjamin Harrison, twenty-third President of the United States, was announced as next in order.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, from what committee is the bill reported?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. From the Committee on the Library.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, are the bills which are now being laid before the Senate House bills which have been referred to and been acted upon by Senate committees?

Mr. BARKLEY. They are.

Mr. WHITE. We are obliged to take them on faith, "sight unseen," with no committee reports.

Mr. BARKLEY. We are operating under a unanimousconsent agreement to consider only House bills which have been reported by Senate committees. That is all that is being done.

Mr. WHITE. The fact remains that we must take them "sight unseen," without copies of the bills and without reports.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is true. The bills now being called have been reported by Senate committees. Virtually all of them are reported without amendment. In the interest of saving time in the consideration of House bills at this time I included them within the request. Of course, if there is any doubt about the merits of any bill, it may go over under objection.

Mr. WHITE. As a practical matter, none of us know anything about the merits of any of these bills.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 4872) was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER BRIDGE, JEFFERSON BARRACKS, MO.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6441) authorizing the county of St. Louis, State of Missouri, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Mississippi River near Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, as a matter of procedure, in view of the circumstances, inasmuch as we have no copies of the bills before us, I suggest that the clerk state with the title of the bill the committee which recommended its passage, so that we may know without asking in each instance whether or not a committee has passed on the bill, and what committee has passed upon it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will state the name of the committee.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 6441) authorizing the county of St. Louis, State of Missouri, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Mississippi River near Jefferson Barracks, Mo., reported from the Committee on Claims without amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, that bill was reported by the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CLARK. The bill was reported by the Committee on Commerce

The CHIEF CLERK. According to the print, it is from the Committee on Claims.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. There evidently is a misprint. It was reported by the Committee on Commerce. A similar Senate bill has been considered by the Commerce Committee and favorably reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair will advise the Senate that the printing on the inside of the bill states that the bill was reported from the Committee on Commerce, while the printing on the outside of the bill states that it is from the Committee on Claims.

Mr. BARKLEY. The outside printing is a misprint. The bill was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is evident to the present occupant of the Chair that the outside printing is a misprint.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I can testify to that fact. The bill was considered by the Committee on Commerce; and a similar Senate bill introduced by myself was also considered by the Committee on Commerce, and favorably reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the third reading and passage of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MISSOURI RIVER RAILROAD BRIDGE, RANDOLPH, MO.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7262) granting the consent of Congress to Frank O. Lowden, James E. Gorman, and Joseph B. Fleming, trustees of the estate of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co., to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad bridge across the Missouri River at or near Randolph, Mo., which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce without amendment.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

KINGS CANYON NATIONAL PARK, CALIF.

The bill (H. R. 3794) to establish the Kings Canyon National Park, Calif., to transfer thereto the lands now included in the General Grant National Park, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, what bill is this?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. House bill 3794. The clerk will state the title of the bill.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 3794) to establish the Kings Canyon National Park, Calif., to transfer thereto the lands now included in the General Grant National Park, and for other purposes, reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys without amendment.

Mr. PITTMAN. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

PROTECTION OF WITNESSES

The bill (H. R. 6832) to provide for the protection of witnesses appearing before any department, independent establishment, or other agency of the United States, or the Congress of the United States, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary without amendment, was announced as next in order.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I ask that the bill be read. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read. The Chief Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Criminal Code of the United States

Be it enacted, etc., That the Criminal Code of the United States be amended by inserting therein a new section immediately following section 135 (U. S. C., title 18, sec. 241) to be known as section 135 (a) (U. S. C., title 18, sec. 241 (a)) and reading as follows:

"SEC. 135. (a) That whoever corruptly, or by threats or force, or by an threatening letter or communication, shall endeavor to influence, intimidate, or impede any witness in any proceeding pending before any department, independent establishment, board, commission, or other agency of the United States, or in connection with any inquiry or investigation being had by either House, or any committee of either House, or any joint committee of the Congress of the United States, or who corruptly, or by threats or force, or by any threatening letter or communication shall influence, obstruct, or impede, or endeavor to influence, obstruct, or impede the due and proper administration of the law under which such proceeding is being had before such department, independent establishment, board, commission, or other agency of the United States, or the due and proper exercise of the power of inquiry under which such inquiry or investigation is being had by either House, or any committee of either House or any joint committee of the Congress of the United States shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both."

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'Mahoney] if he will please explain the bill. Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, this bill was unanimously reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary. When it came to the Senate it was referred to a subcommittee consisting of the very able and distinguished Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Danaher], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER], and myself. The committee consulted individually with members of the House committee, and filed a unanimous report with the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, which ordered the bill reported.

The bill extends to witnesses before committees of the House and Senate, joint committees, independent establishments and departments the same protection from intimidation which is now granted to witnesses in the courts. The bill is a recital of exactly the same language now in the law protecting witnesses before the courts. It is endorsed by the American Bar Association and by the Bar Association of the District of Columbia, and I know of no reason why it should not be passed.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I hope the bill may ultimately be passed; but I was notified by the distinguished Senator from Utah [Mr. King] that he might wish to object to it. I ask the Senator if he will not permit the bill to be passed over temporarily, until the Senator from Utah returns to the Chamber. I have sent for him.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Of course, I could not object to that request. However, the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] is present in the Chamber, and I think he will testify that the Senator from Utah was in the Committee on the Judiciary at the time the bill was considered and that his objection was thoroughly canvassed in the committee.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, the statement of the Senator from Wyoming is correct. The able Senator from Utah [Mr. King], who is a learned and valuable member of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, as is the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin], appeared before the Senate Committee on the Judiciary. It is true that at first he expressed some doubt as to the bill; but, after a thorough canvass and argument on the bill, which took place this afternoon, I understood that the Senator from Utah gave his assent to the

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, if the bill is now passed, and the Senator from Utah has any objection whatsoever to it, it will be a simple matter for him to move to reconsider. I shall personally call the matter to his attention.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, personally I have no objection to the bill, and I have no obligation to object to it on behalf of the Senator from Utah. It is merely an act of courtesy on my part to attempt to suspend consideration temporarily until he can be present. However, with the statement of the Senator from Wyoming that he will not object to reconsideration if the Senator from Utah shall request it, I shall not impose any further delay.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, I inquire whether or not the language of the bill was taken from any other penal statute.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It is taken from section 135 of the Code. Mr. JOHNSON of California. Let me read:

That whoever, corruptly, or by threats or force, or by any threatening letter or communication, shall endeavor to influence, intimidate, or impede any witness in any proceeding pending before any department, independent establishment, board, commission, or other agency of the United States—

And so forth. Was that language taken from any penal statute?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The language referring to the independent establisments, boards, commissions, and agencies is the new language.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Yes.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The bill extends to witnesses before such bodies the protection now granted to witnesses before the courts.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Was it the intention to extend it in this drastic fashion to witnesses before any department, independent establishment, board, commission, or other agency of the United States?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, when a board or commission of the United States is authorized to hold hearings and to receive the testimony of witnesses, it seems to me no one can object to giving such witnesses the same protection which is thrown around witnesses appearing in the courts.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Possibly the Senator is right. This, however, is my first sight of this bill, and I do not quite like its language. It reads:

That whoever, corruptly, or by threats or force, or by any threatening letter or communication, shall endeavor to influence, intimidate, or impede any witness in any proceeding pending before any department, independent establishment, board, commission, or other agency of the United States—

And so forth. The language is so broad, and there is left much room for construction, that I should hate to pass a penal statute of this character.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. But the court would construe it. That language is in the law as it now stands.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. But I should hate to apply it to "any department, independent establishment, board, commission, or other agency of the United States," because I think that the language is so broad that it would give to any board, any agency, or any department the right to do things that ought not to be done.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Oh, no.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Yes; I think it would.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Let us read the bill. I want to listen to every single reasonable objection, and I am always very careful to consider any question raised by the Senator from California. This bill grants no power to any board or commission; but if it should be enacted, it would protect witnesses.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Oh, no.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The bill would give no power to commissions or other governmental agencies. It would be enforced by the courts, not by any commission or agency.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Perhaps it would be enforced by the courts, but I should hate to leave with any board or any commission any power of this character.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The bill gives no power, I may say.
Mr. JOHNSON of California. 'Yes; it does. Suppose that a governmental board or commission should come into court; it would be thrice armed and would be enabled to have its own way. I do not like to give to boards, commissions, and departments any such power.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. What power? Will the Senator state what power he has in mind?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair wishes to inform the Senator from Wyoming that under the 5-minute rule his time has expired.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator from California yield to me?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona is recognized.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I am reluctant to enter this debate, but if, as I read it, this bill contained any of the implications or if I thought there could arise from it any of the conditions the able Senator from California anticipates, I would object to the measure. My understanding of the bill is that it extends to witnesses the same degree of protection which they have in the courts.

Mr. President, it is no secret that congressional committees and boards and commissions of the Government have during the last 15 or 20 years in some cases been treating witnesses in such a way as to intimidate them. I know of and can name instances of dignified, honest, upstanding American citizens being mercilessly muckraked by committees of the Congress and by boards of the Government by being required to reply to questions that were immaterial and which should not have been asked. As I understand this bill, it throws around a witness coming before a committee or commission the same degree of protection that would be accorded him if he were testifying in a court of law. If I did not think the bill so provided, I would oppose it. In other words, this bill seeks to put an end to the reckless, relentless muckraking of witnesses that has occurred from time to time in this Capitol. Courageous citizens sometimes hesitate to come before committees of Congress, because of certain conditions which have prevailed for many years. If I correctly understand the bill, it throws around the witness that degree of protection that the courts give him. If I am wrong, I wish to be corrected.

Here is the present law as to witnesses in a court of law, section 135 (U. S. C., title 18, sec. 241):

Whoever corruptly, or by threats or force, or by any threatening letter or communication, shall endeavor to influence, intimidate, or impede any witness in any court of the United States or before any United States Commissioner or officer acting as such Commissioner, or any grand or petit juror, or officer in or of any court of the United States, or officer who may be serving at any examination or other proceeding before any United States commissioner or officer acting as such commissioner, in the discharge of his duty, or who corruptly or by threats or force, or by any threatening letter or communication, shall influence, obstruct, or impede, or endeavor to influence, obstruct, or impede, the due administration of justice therein, shall be fined not more than $1,000, or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both.

As a young lawyer I grew to admire the learned Senator from California [Mr. Johnson]. I never knew, at the bar, a better cross-examiner, and I can say to his credit that he never resorted to the intimidation of witnesses.

This bill, as I conceive it, would require the various boards and commissions set up by this Government to follow the rules of evidence. No lawyer, in my judgment, should object to that. The rules of evidence are well known, but I believe the time has arrived when witnesses, if they be honest men, should approach a tribunal without fear and should welcome any question that is competent, material, and relevant, and is not hearsay.

The Senator from California must know that I would be the last man to extend additional power to any board or commission.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I realize that, and I have no doubt that the Senator from Wyoming doubtless would be of the same thought; but here we have a bill which directly connects the wrongdoing with the court, and of necessity one who becomes involved with the processes of the court in the fashion that is described in the statute would be amenable to the court and would be punished accordingly; but I think the pending bill goes still further than that. I may be in error in the matter, but I have a tenderness for the individuals called before any department or any agency of the Government, or any independent establishment-board or commission. I detest the language in the bill because I know the capacity there has been for wrongdoing on the part of boards and independent agencies exactly along the line of which the Senator from Arizona complains, and such instances have occurred a hundred times. I do not want-

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. JOHNSON of California. I will yield in a moment, when I finish the sentence. I do not want the Congress of the United States to enact any law under which such things may continue to occur. Now I yield to the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I share completely the Senator's sympathy for the witness called before any group, and it is because I have such sympathy that I am urging the passage of this bill. Let me give the Senator an example how it would work. At the present time, if a witness should be called before the Interstate Commerce Commission, some person not a witness before that Commission could with complete impunity threaten him that if he testified to the truth he would lose his job, for example, and there would be no recourse. This bill provides that, if any person should so threaten such a witness, such person would be guilty of a criminal offense not punishable by the Interstate Commerce Commission but cognizable in a court of law and punished by such court. That is all the bill does. It extends to the witness before a committee of the House or the Senate, before a joint committee, or before a commission or board, the same protection that is now thrown about witnesses elsewhere. That is all I have to say about

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I think the Senator from Wyoming ascribes to the particular measure what is rather the result of his own logical mind than the result that will actually be attained. It is not for the protection of witnesses; I do not think the bill can be read that way; it is for the protection of the boards, the independent agencies, and different departments of the Government. That is where the difference between us lies.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Of course, if the Senator has that cpinion, I cannot dissuade him; but I am sure the language of the bill does not justify such an interpretation.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. The Senator is sure I am wrong; I am quite sure that he may be wrong.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, the matter has not been disposed of. Does the Senator from California object?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I object for the time being. I will look into it as well as I may, though not with the ability of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY].

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Now! Now!

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Nor with the ability of the Senator from Arizona [Mr. Ashurst].

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Let me say that I walk at the knee of the Senator from California. If I could ever hope to attain one-half his ability and one-half his eloquence, I would, indeed, be proud.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I thank the Senator. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair advises the Senator from California that his time has expired.

The bill goes over on objection.

ALTERATIONS OF CERTAIN BRIDGES OVER NAVIGABLE WATERS

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1989) to provide for the alteration of certain bridges over navigable waters of the United States, for the apportionment of the cost of such alterations between the United States and the owners of such bridges, and for other purposes, which were: On page 1, lines 6 and 7, to strike out "kind and reconstruction" and insert "kind, reconstruction, or removal in whole or in part"; on page 5, line 17, to strike out all after the word "and" down to and including "replacement" in line 22, and insert "that part of the cost attributable to the requirements of traffic by railroad or highway. or both, including any expenditure for increased carrying capacity of the bridge, and including such proportion of the actual capital cost of the old bridge or of such part of the old bridge as may be altered or changed or rebuilt, as the used service life of the whole or a part, as the case may be, bears to the total estimated service life of the whole or such part. The United States shall bear the balance of the cost, including that part attributable to the necessities of navigation"; on page 7, line 7, to strike out all after the name "Treasury" down to and including "owner" in line 8, and insert "through the Division of Disbursement upon certifications of the Secretary of War"; on page 7, line 16, to strike out all after the word "to" down to and including "to" in line 18, where it appears the second time; on pages 9 and 10, to strike out all of section 12, and insert:

SEC. 12. (a) The first sentence of section 4 of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 33, sec. 494), and section 18 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1899 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 33, sec. 502), shall be inapplicable with respect to any bridge to which the provisions of this act are applicable, except to the extent provided in

(b) Any bridge, the construction, reconstruction, or alteration of which was required by an order of the Secretary issued prior to July 1, 1939, and was not completed on such date, and in the case of which no penalties have accrued at the time of the enactment of this act, shall be constructed, reconstructed, or altered as case of which no penalties have accrued at the time of the enactment of this act, shall be constructed, reconstructed, or altered as required by such order, and not in accordance with the provisions of this act. In the case of any such bridge, however, the Secretary shall apportion the cost of the project between the bridge owner and the United States, and payment of the share of the United States shall be made, in the same manner as if the provisions of this act applied to such construction, reconstruction, or alteration, subject to the following limitations:

(1) In case such construction, reconstruction, or alteration has not begun on the date of enactment of this act, such apportionment of cost shall be made only if (a) the construction, reconstruction, or alteration is carried out in accordance with plans and specifications, and pursuant to bids, approved by the Secretary, and (b) the bridge owner has submitted to the Secretary a written guaranty of cost as provided for in section 5.

(2) The Secretary's determination as to such apportionment, and as to such plans and specifications and bids, shall be final.

(3) Such apportionment shall not be made if such construction, reconstruction, or alteration is not completed within the time fixed in such order of the Secretary or within such additional time (not to exceed 25 percent of the time allowed in the order for such completion) as the Secretary, for good cause shown, may allow, (c) Any bridge (except a bridge to which subsection (b) applies) the construction, reconstruction, or alteration of which was required by an order of the Secretary issued prior to July 1, 1939, and was not begun before such date, shall be subject to the provisions of this act as though such order had not been issued, and and was not begun before such date, shall be subject to the provisions of this act as though such order had not been issued, and compliance with the provisions of this act and with such orders as may be issued thereunder shall be considered to constitute compliance with such order issued prior to July 1, 1939, and with the provisions of law under which it was issued.

Mr. TRUMAN. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

INCREASED COMPENSATION TO CERTAIN CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it. Mr. LODGE. I inquire what is before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is nothing before the Senate at the present time. Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, when Calendar No. 1012, House bill 5333, was called the Senator from Utah [Mr. King] objected. He has, however, agreed to withdraw his objection. I ask the Senate to recur to that bill and that it be considered at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the bill

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 5333) to amend the acts granting increased compensation to civilian employees for the period July 1, 1917, to June 30, 1924.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, was there objection to this bill when it was called on the calendar?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state there was objection interposed at the time the bill was called; but the Chair understands the Senator from Louisiana desires to make a statement regarding the bill.

Mr. ELLENDER. The Senator from Utah [Mr. King] objected to the immediate consideration of the bill, but he has since withdrawn his objection.

Mr. WHITE. I desire to ask has the Senator who objected to the consideration of the bill withdrawn his objection?

Mr. ELLENDER. Yes, sir; he has. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any further objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I am advised that the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin] expressed some doubt about this bill. I wonder if the Senator will not renew his request after the Senator from Vermont shall have returned to the Chamber.

Mr. ELLENDER. I did not know that the Senator from Vermont objected to the bill. I understood that the Senator from Utah [Mr. King] objected to it. The bill was introduced at the request of the Secretary of War. It makes no appropriation. It simply extends for 6 months the time limit within which claims may be filed.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield. Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator from Massachusetts that when this bill was reached on the calendar the Senator from Utah [Mr. King] objected to it. Later, he came to my desk and said that he had no objection, and that so far as he was concerned the bill might pass. I do not know what the position of the Senator from Vermont may be with reference to the bill.

Mr. AUSTIN entered the Chamber.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the Senator from Vermont is in the Chamber now, and will speak for himself.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Vermont?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. The Senator from Vermont did not object to the consideration of this bill. The Senator from Vermont understands that it is a bill merely to put into the law a 6-month limitation.

Mr. ELLENDER. That is all.

Mr. AUSTIN. It is protective in its character, and there is not any reason in the world why the Senator from Vermont should object to the bill.

Mr. ELLENDER. I did not think the distinguished Senator from Vermont could be guilty of urging an objection to such a meritorious bill as this one.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 5333) to amend the acts granting increased compensation to civilian employees for the period July 1, 1917, to June 30, 1924, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That no claim for additional or increased Be it enacted, etc., That no claim for additional or increased compensation incident to services rendered by civilian employees of the Government of the United States or of the District of Columbia between July 1, 1917, and June 30, 1924, authorized by acts making appropriations for the payment of such increased or additional compensation for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1918, to June 30, 1924, inclusive, shall be considered by the General Accounting Office unless presented to it within 6 months from the date of the enactment of this act.

BOUNDARY COMPACT BETWEEN STATES OF IOWA AND MISSOURI

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, on behalf of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Burke], who is in attendance upon the Committee on Appropriations, I report back favorably from the Committee on the Judiciary Senate Joint Resolution 181. Inasmuch as I shall request unanimous consent for its immediate consideration, I ask that the joint resolution, with the whereases, be read, and I invite the attention of the Senators from Missouri and Iowa to it.

It appears that there has been a dispute between those two States over a boundary line. The displute has existed, I understand, for nearly 100 years. Every Senator knows that States may not enter into a compact without the consent of Congress. This is a joint resolution granting the consent of Congress to those two States to enter into a compact regarding a boundary line.

I ask that the joint resolution, with the whereases, be read, and that the Senators from Missouri and Iowa give it their attention.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the joint resolution will be read.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 181) giving the consent of the Congress to an agreement between the States of Iowa and Missouri establishing a boundary between said States was read, as follows:

Was read, as follows:

Whereas, under date of December 13, 1937, the State of Missouri commenced suit against the State of Iowa in the Supreme Court of the United States for the purpose of determining the boundary line between the county of Clark in the State of Missouri and the county of Lee in the State of Iowa; and

Whereas, by stipulation filed in the said Supreme Court of the United States, it was proposed that the Legislature of Iowa and the Legislature of Missouri pass like bills, the State of Missouri waiving and relinquishing to the State of Iowa all jurisdiction to lands lying north and east of the Des Moines River, now in the county of Clark, State of Missouri, and the State of Iowa waiving and relinquishing to the State of Missouri all lands lying south and west of the Des Moines River, and now in the county of Lee, State of Iowa, and that said acts be submitted to the Congress of the United States for its approval; and

Whereas, in accordance with said stipulation, the Forty-eighth General Assembly of the State of Iowa did at such session pass such act, this act being known and designated as house file No. 651, acts of the Forty-eighth General Assembly of Iowa, bearing the signatures of John R. Irwin, speaker of the house; Bourke B. Hickenlooper, president of the senate; and the signature and approval of George A. Wilson, Governor of Iowa, under date of April 12, 1939; and

18, 1939, said act being thereupon properly published and becoming law under date of April 23, 1939; and

Whereas said act provided in substance that the Des Moines River in its present course as heretofore declared by the Congress of the United States shall be and remain the true boundary line between the State of Missouri and the State of Iowa; that the State of Iowa relinquishes all jurisdiction to all lands in Lee County lying south and west of the Des Moines River, being south and each of the person the States. County lying south and west of the Des Moines River, being south and east of the east and west boundary line between the States of Iowa and Missouri, and that the effective date of the relinquishment of jurisdiction shall be as of midnight of the 31st day of December following the passage of the act of Congress approving the relinquishment of jurisdiction; and

Whereas, in accordance with stipulation as aforesaid, the Sixtleth General Assembly of the State of Missouri did, at such session, pass a like act, this act being known and designated as senate bill 350 of the acts of the Sixtleth General Assembly of Missouri and bearing the signature and approval of Lloyd C. Stark, Governor of Missouri, under date of June 16, 1939; and

Whereas said act provides in substance that the Des Moines

Missouri, under date of June 16, 1939; and

Whereas said act provides in substance that the Des Moines
River shall be the true boundary line as between Missouri and Iowa; that the State of Missouri relinquishes all jurisdiction to all lands lying north and east of the Des Moines River and that the effective date of the relinquishment of jurisdiction over the land herein described shall be as of midnight of the 31st day of December following the passage of the act of Congress approving the relinquishment of jurisdiction; and

Whereas the said acts of the States of Iowa and Missouri constitute an agreement between said States establishing a boundary

tute an agreement between said States establishing a boundary between said States: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the consent of the Congress is hereby given to such agreement and to the establishment of such boundary; and said acts of the States of Iowa and Missouri are hereby approved.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I inquire whether it is the intention of this agreement between the two States interested to leave in the United States the title to the Des Moines River.

Mr. TRUMAN. Yes. The joint resolution does not disturb the title to the Des Moines River. It merely refers to the land on each side of the river, which has changed its course.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, if the Senator from Missouri will yield, the joint resolution represents the settlement of a dispute which has existed between the States of Iowa and Missouri for more than 100 years. As a matter of fact, at one time the two States were on the verge of civil war regarding the matter. Each State ordered out troops, and the dispute was finally settled by arbitration; but the matter has been in dispute ever since. The joint resolution represents an amicable adjustment of a century-old dispute.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, it gives me great happiness to join in settling such a long and ancient boundary romance I myself have lived professionally through one that began in 1763 and ended in 1936; so I am naturally keen to understand the intent of the parties here, because the boundary case with which I was so intimately involved depended upon the construction of language relating to a river.

Mr. TRUMAN. Mr. President, this joint resolution does not depend at all upon language. It is merely a settlement between the two States in regard to land which has changed its place on account of the change of the course of the river. The joint resolution is agreed to by both sides, and by all four Senators from both States.

Mr. AUSTIN. I would not delay this amicable adjustment. Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to say that if the Senator from Vermont has lived professionally through the controversy to which he referred from 1763 to this hour, he certainly does not look his age. [Laughter.]

Mr. AUSTIN. I thank the distinguished Senator from Kentucky for his compliment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

REPORTS FROM THE COMMITTEE TO AUDIT AND CONTROL THE CONTINGENT EXPENSES OF THE SENATE

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, on behalf of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, I wish to report a number of resolutions which have been pending before the committee, in connection with which I wish to make a short statement.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield so that I may call a quorum?

Mr. BYRNES. I have no objection; but I will say to the Senator that I am certainly not going to ask for action on these matters, if the Senator will permit me to make my statement.

Mr. President, I am merely reporting several resolutions; I am not asking for action, and I intend to make a statement with reference to them.

There are nine of the standing committees of the Senate which have reported resolutions for the investigation of various subjects. Those resolutions have been referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate for the purpose of determining how much money shall be made available out of the contingent fund of the Senate for the conduct of the investigations. The Committee to Audit and Control has authorized me to report these resolutions with a recommendation as to the amount which shall be expended in each case, should the Senate decide to authorize the investigations.

The Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate are of the opinion that when a standing committee votes unanimously, as in most of these cases, the committees have to conduct investigations, the Senate should have an opportunity to pass upon the question, and determine whether or not the investigation should be made.

The amounts asked by the committees have not been recommended by the Committee to Audit and Control, except in one or two instances where the amounts requested were comparatively small. Members of the Committee to Audit and Control, in reporting the resolutions to the Senate to give to the Senate an opportunity to act on them, reserve their right, as individual Members of the Senate, to oppose the resolutions when they are brought before the Senate, should they see fit to do so. They merely determine to let the Senate have an opportunity to consider these measures.

CARLTON-MACE ENGINEERING CORPORATION

Mr. AUSTIN. What was the name of the corporation? The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Gerry in the chair). The Carlton-Mace Engineering Corporation.

ESTATE OF HARVEY T. COMBS

The bill (H. R. 2363) for the relief of the estate of Harvey T. Combs was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, would it be possible for the clerk, in reporting these bills, which are not listed, to state how much is involved in each bill as he reports it? This is such an utterly slipshod method of legislating that I suggest that just a casual bit of prudence might not be out of place.

FLOYD ELTON

The bill (H. R. 3853) authorizing the payment of $400 for the relief of Floyd Elton was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. SMITH. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. SMITH. We do not seem to be proceeding according to the calendar.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, there are on the desk a number of House bills reported by Senate committees which have not been printed on the calendar, and which are being called for consideration. All of them have been reported by Senate committees.

Mr. SMITH. I understand that, but we have nothing to guide us, and something might slip by to which someone might object if we had a record of what was going on. Has this ever been done before?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; it has.

Mr. SMITH. When we have taken up bills which have not been reported?

Mr. BARKLEY. At the end of a session it is frequently done. It covers only House bills. Of course, these bills have been passed by the House of Representatives.

Mr. SMITH. I know, but none of them were passed on by Senate committees.

Mr. BARKLEY. They have been reported by Senate committees. Of course, any Senator can object when a bill is called if he does not want it to pass. Most of them are private bills, bridge bills, and so forth.

Mr. SMITH. If they are restricted to that type of bill, I would not have any objection, but just taking them as they come, the run-of-the-mine measures may get through to which some of us might seriously object if we had the proper

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from South Carolina that these are only bills from the Committee on Claims.

Mr. SMITH. They are restricted to claims?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that under the order they are not restricted to claims, but these bills being taken up now are all claims bills.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I think it is exceedingly bad practice to pass bills about which no one in the Senate knows a thing, which have never been referred to com-

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, all these bills have been referred to committees, and reported.

Mr. WHEELER. To Senate committees?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; to Senate committees. They were included in the request made for the calling of House bills on the calendar, bills reported by Senate committees. These bills have all been acted upon by Senate committees.

Mr. WHEELER. I did not know that. Mr. BARKLEY. Oh, yes; I would not ask that the bills be considered otherwise.

GEORGE A. MEFFAN

The bill (H. R. 5607) for the relief of George A. Meffan, United States marshal, district of Idaho, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THE HEIRS OF EMMA J. HALL

The bill (H. R. 5951) for the relief of the heirs of Emma J. Hall was considered, ordered a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ALLEGED DETENTION OF LABOR ORGANIZER IN MAJESTIC HOTEL, MEXIA, TEX.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I ask that there be inserted in the RECORD at this point two telegrams which I have received from E. T. Lucas and J. G. Coman, of Mexia, Tex. The telegrams will explain themselves.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the telegrams will be printed in the RECORD.

The telegrams are as follows:

Senator Morris Sheppard,

Senator Morris Sheppard, Washington, D. C.:

It has been brought to my attention that in the July 21 issue of Houston Post, under Associated Press dispatch from Washington, Robert R. Tisdale, testifying before Senate Labor Committee, testified that a union organizer was held in hotel in Mexia, Tex., and "threatened with tar and feathers" by a "group apparently sponsored by the employers." As manager of the Majestic Hotel, in Mexia, Tex., I cannot let such statement go unchallenged, as it was in my hotel that Howard Lee C. I. O. organizer stayed while in Mexia, Tex., I cannot let such statement go unchallenged, as it was in my hotel that Howard Lee, C. I. O. organizer, stayed while organizing Mexia textile mills of this city. The hotel register shows that he stayed at my hotel from August 22, 1937, to September 20, 1937, a day or so at a time and that no other organizer was in Mexia, to my knowledge. During the time Mr. Lee was guest in hotel he was never at any time "held" in said hotel by any group of persons, nor was he threatened with "tar and feath ers," nor was an attempt ever made to molest Mr. Lee or tar and feather him. I have been manager of Majestic Hotel, Mexia, Tex., since September 1, 1926, and there has never been during that time any attempt to tar and feather or detain any of my guests, and I know of no hotel in Mexia since I have resided here where any such attempt has been made, and any statement to contrary is a deliberate falsehood.

E. T. LUCAS, Manager, Majestic Hotel. MEXIA, TEX., August 2, 1939.

Senator Morris Sheppard, Washington, D. C.:

It has been called to our attention that in an article appearing in July 21 issue, Houston Post, under Associated Press news dispatch from Washington that one Robert R. Tisdale, testifying before Senate Labor Committee, testified that at Mexia, Tex., a union organizer was held in "hotel and threatened to tar and feathers" by "group apparently sponsored by the employers." This deliberate lie cannot be passed unprotested. We emphatically deny that any union organizer has ever been held with or without threat of tar and feathers in any hotel in Mexia or vicinity with or without sanction of Mexia Textile Mills and further deny that any such acts have ever taken place in the city of Mexia as testified to by Tisdale, and hereby offer myself as witness at any time you may call me. call me.

TAXES

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, on April 8, 1938, I presumed so far as to ask the Senate to hear me on the subject of taxes. I now read to the Senate what I said on that subject on that day:

> [In the Senate, April 8, 1938] TAXES

Mr. Ashurst. Mr. President, doubt and fear, twin spectral forms of evil, have descended upon business. Whether or not business is justified in its fear of Congress is a question I do not now discuss. It is sufficient to know that such fear actually exists.

The person who now addresses you during his youth time believed in ghosts, and was morbidly and frenziedly afraid of any man who was dead. It would be the subject of an interesting homily, if the Senate had the time to hear it, for me to relate homily, if the Senate had the time to hear it, for me to relate the circumstance which permanently eradicated my fear and dread of ghosts and wraiths. I may do so some day, but not at this time. The country will not recover, nor will it make progress, unless and until Congress gives assurance that when citizens engage in legitimate business enterprises they will not be the subject of unnecessary taxes and amercements. Business now fears that should it launch legitimate enterprises, its activities would be pounced upon by Congress and penalized by unnecessary taxes, and that some sort of invisible radiation, such as a ghost or wraith of the enterprise, would be all that would ever flow from the undertakings. undertakings.

Congress must dispel this fear and doubt with which it has enshrouded business. Congress should say to labor, "You shall have a fair day's wage for a fair day's work," and should say to business, "You shall not be exploited."

Taxes will be, to say the least, moderately heavy during the lifetime of all persons now in existence. Taxes may be reduced only by reducing expenditures. The remedy for heavy taxes is somewhat within the hands of the taxpayers themselves. If and when taxpayers quit the practice of telegraphing Congress for more appropriations, and begin instead to telegraph Congress to vote against appropriations, Congress will grant relief from heavy taxes.

There are in this world some laws that may not be repealed, such as the law of the survival of the fittest, the law of supply and demand, the law of compensation, and the law of reactions. Even if Congress should refuse to grant relief from excessive taxes, the law of reactions would ultimately do its perfect work.

jealousy is the concomitant of violent love, as Aristides

A jealousy is the concomitant of violent love, as Aristides the Just was banished because people grew weary of hearing him called Aristides the Just, as a flercely raging fire will burn itself out, as a rapidly running river will create obstructions for itself, likewise an era of prodigal expenditures will be followed by economy to the point of parsimony.

I therefore declare to the Senate, as I said last autumn in my addresses to various civic organizations, "You are wise in getting money from Uncle Sam's Treasury 'while the getting is good'; for under the law of reactions this prodigal era in due time will be followed by a regime that will make Calvin Coolidge look like a spendthrift."

[Laughter.]

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, in connection with the remarks of the Senator from Arizona I am prompted to ask if by any chance he has indulged in the ancient and honorable pastime of saying "I told you so."

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, it is always ungracious to say "I told you so," but I stand on the statement I made here on April 8, 1938, that under the law of reactions, an era of prodigal expenditures is followed by an era of economy to the point of parsimony. I do not say "I told you so," as that would serve no useful purpose and it would be ungracious to say it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I suppose the Senator is anticipating the next election.

Mr. ASHURST. If the Senator refers to me I will say no, I am not anticipating the next election. Let me say that I have no politically perturbed spirit, because politically I have put on immortality. Politically I am on the other side of the resurrection. I have survived. Politically I am exempt from the fear that comes to all men who seek the Presidency. [Laughter.] And if the Republicans do make a Presidential nomination they could go farther and fare worse than the eminent, learned Senator from Michiganand probably will. [Laughter.]
Mr. BARKLEY. If I may comment on the Senator's speech I wish to pay him the compliment of saying that he is in the unique position of doing what none of the rest of us here would dare to do-repeat a speech which he made on a former occasion. [Laughter.]

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I surrender. [Laughter.]

BLUE RIDGE PARKWAY, VA. AND N. C.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate bill 2626, Calendar No. 883. That bill, when reached on the calendar yesterday, was objected to by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar]. He has withdrawn his objection. The bill relates only to the Blue Ridge Parkway in the States of Virginia and North Carolina. It has a local application.

Mr. KING. A parliamentary inquiry.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. KING. I do not object, but I was wondering whether, if we break the rule, which was, as I understood, to take up only House bills, we will not be deluged with requests of a similar nature.

Mr. BYRD. I will say to the Senator from Utah that this is a very important bill, which has to go to the House, and the Senator from Tennessee objected to it, but has since withdrawn his objection. It is entirely local in application, and I should greatly appreciate it if the Senator would permit it to be considered at this time.

Mr. KING. I have no objection if it is understood that this will not be a precedent to recur to the calendar, because there are many Senators who would have been here had they understood that the Senate would do that.

Mr. BARKLEY. This understanding applies only to bills to which objection was being made while the calendar was being called. While it is true we are proceeding by unanimous consent to call only House bills, there is nothing irregular about asking to recur to a Senate bill to which objection had previously been made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2626) to amend the act of June 30, 1936 (49 Stat. 2041), providing for the administration and maintenance of the Blue Ridge Parkway in the States of Virginia and North Carolina by the Secretary of the Interior, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, with an amendment, on page 2, line 15, after the word "lands", to insert "but in no case shall such width exceed 1,000 feet", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to provide Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to provide for the administration and maintenance of the Blue Ridge Parkway, in the States of Virginia and North Carolina, by the Secretary of the Interior, and for other purposes," approved June 30, 1936 (49 Stat. 2041), be amended to read as follows: "That all lands and easements heretofore or hereafter conveyed to the United States by the States of Virginia and North Carolina for the right-of-way for the projected parkway between the Shenandoah and Great Smoky Mountains National Parks, together with sites acquired or to be acquired for recreational areas in connection therewith, and a right-of-way for said parkway of a width sufficient to include the highway and all bridges, ditches, cuts, and fills appurtenant thereto, but not exceeding a maximum of 200 feet through Government-owned lands (except that where small parcels of Government-owned lands would otherwise be isolated or where topographic conditions or scenic requirements are such that bridges, ditches, cuts, fills, parking overlooks, and land-scape development could not reasonably be confined to a width of 200 feet the said maximum may be increased to such width as may be necessary with the written approval of the department or agency necessary with the written approval of the department or agency having jurisdiction over such lands but in no case shall such width exceed 1,000 feet) as designated on maps heretofore or hereafter approved by the Secretary of the Interior, shall be known as the Blue Ridge Parkway and shall be administered and maintained Blue Ridge Parkway and shall be administered and maintained by the Secretary of the Interior through the National Park Service, subject to the provisions of the Act of Congress approved August 25, 1916 (39 Stat. 535), entitled 'An act to establish a National Park Service, and for other purposes', the provisions of which act, as amended and supplemented, are hereby extended over and made applicable to said parkway: Provided, That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Interior, to connect with the parkway such roads and trails as may be necessary for the protection, administration, or utilizeculture is hereby authorized, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Interior, to connect with the parkway such roads and trails as may be necessary for the protection, administration, or utilization of adjacent and nearby national forests and the resources thereof: And provided further, That the Forest Service and the National Park Service shall, insofar as practicable, coordinate and correlate such recreational development as each may plan, construct, or permit to be constructed, on lands within their respective jurisdictions which, by mutual agreement, should be given special treatment for recreational purposes.

"Sec. 2. In the administration of the Blue Ridge Parkway, the Secretary of the Interior may issue revocable licenses or permits for rights-of-way over, across, and upon parkway lands, or for the use of parkway lands by the owners or lessees of adjacent lands, for such purposes and under such nondiscriminatory terms, regulations, and conditions as he may determine to be not inconsistent with the use of such lands for parkway purposes.

"Sec. 3. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to approve and accept, on behalf of the United States title to any lands and interests in land heretofore or hereafter conveyed to the United States for the purposes of the Blue Ridge or the Natchez Trace Parkways, or for recreational areas in connection therewith."

The amendment was rejected.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I offer an amendment which I ask to have stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 11, after the word "overlooks", it is proposed to strike out "and"; and on the same page, in line 15, after the word "development", it is proposed to insert: ", and recreational and other facilities requisite to public use of said parkway."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Virginia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CONSULTING SERVICES, BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have considered Calendar No. 1093, being Senate bill 2448, to amend section 1 of an act entitled "An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to employ engineers and economists for consultation purposes on important reclamation work."

This is a bill in which the Reclamation Bureau is very much interested. It would permit them to employ some experts and geologists in their work. The bill has been reported by the committee favorably, and is upon the calendar. They are very anxious to have it passed at this session of Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Montana?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, may I ask how much money the bill calls for?

Mr. WHEELER. The bill reads:

That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized, in his judgment and discretion, to employ for consultation purposes on important reclamation work 15 consulting engineers, geologists, appraisers, and economists, at rates of compensation to be fixed by him, but not to exceed $50 per day for any engineer, geologist, appraiser, or economist so employed: Provided, That the total compensation paid to any engineer, geologist, appraiser, or economist during any fiscal year shall not exceed $9,000.

Mr. AUSTIN. What is the total amount involved?

Mr. WHEELER. The bill authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to employ 15 engineers or consulting engineers at not to exceed $50 a day, and not to pay them in excess of $9,000 a year. It does not specify any particular amount at all.

Mr. AUSTIN. The total might be $140,000?

Mr. WHEELER. No; it would not; but whatever it was, it would have to come out of their appropriation already made. As I understand, this would not call for any further appropriation at all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of the act of February 28, 1929 (45 Stat. 1406), authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to employ engineers and economists for consultation purposes on important reclamation work, is hereby amended to read as follows:

lows:

"That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized, in his judgment and discretion, to employ for consultation purposes on important reclamation work 15 consulting engineers, geologists, appraisers, and economists, at rates of compensation to be fixed by him, but not to exceed $50 per day for any engineer, geologist, appraiser, or economist so employed: Provided, That the total compensation paid to any engineer, geologist, appraiser, or economist during any fiscal year shall not exceed $9,000: Provided further, That notwithstanding the provisions of any other act, retired officers of the Army or Navy may be employed by the Secretary of the Interior as consulting engineers in accordance with the provisions of this act."

PROHIBITION OF THE USE OF THE RADIO BY LIQUOR ADVERTISERS

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, I desire to address the Senate on a bill which has been on the calendar since April 28 of last year. I refer to Senate bill 517. I understand full well that under the circumstances there is no possibility of bringing the bill before the Senate for consideration; but I desire to make a few remarks in behalf of the bill, so that the Senate and others may be informed as to some of the issues involved.

My bill has for its purpose the prohibition of the use of the radio by liquor advertisers. Week after week the bill has had to give way to appropriation bills, "must" legislation of one kind or another, and special orders which were urgent. I realize that the subject is controversial and that Members facing issues of international import and contending with the jam of odds and ends of legislation which always accompanies the closing days of a session are in no mood to have such a bill forced into the confusion. However, I desire to lay before the Senate and the country for study and contemplation this important piece of legislation, which has for its only purpose the protection of the American home against the intrusion of the liquor salesman.

Three hundred and seventy-nine thousand parents, pleading protection for their firesides, have exercised their constitutional right to petition Congress for relief. A whole truckload of petitions signed by anxious parents from every State in the Union has been filed with Congress, pleading for relief from the intolerant oppression imposed upon them by this shameless intruder. These parents should be given immediate protection; but under the circumstances I am not going to insist upon a harassed Senate, anxious to bring a hectic session to a close, taking action now; I am giving notice, however, that when Congress reconvenes in January I shall press for a vote, which I have every reason to believe will be favorable. At this time I shall content myself with an effort to present some basic facts.

THE RADIO

The most intimate and important inanimate object in our home is a little piece of more or less unornamental furniture which we affectionately call the chatterbox, for it brings to us the voice of the entire world. The first member to arise in the morning turns it on and the last to retire turns it off. It entertains with a program varied from the sublime to the ridiculous; it caters from early to late to the spiritual, the esthetic, and the fleeting fancies and moods of each member of the family. It so handles current news that we need only listen to the highlights to have constantly before us a picture of what is transpiring in the world. Sporting events and important ceremonies in far-away places are presented blow by blow so realistically and in such masterful manner that we prefer to stay at home rather than undergo the inconvenience and discomfort incidental to being actual eye witnesses. Over this unique contrivance the statesmen of the world gather with us around our fireside and discuss the issues which rock the universe. How fascinating to hear in our humble living room the natural voices of our beloved President, Mr. Roosevelt; the Premier who made the bad bargain at Munich, Mr. Chamberlain; the vociferous Il Duce, Benito Mussolini; and the great "I am" Der Feuhrer Hitler, each in character depicting his part in the tragic drama of current history. Truly, the radio has added much to our home. Delightfully entertaining and pleasantly instructing, the radio has become a most essential part of our family life; and we would rather go without necessities than part with its magic. I quote from an address made by W. S. Alexander, delivered in Columbus, Ohio, April 24, 1939:

The American family takes its radio programs with reasonable seriousness, and, because it does, it has a right to the protection of the law from an invasion of its sanctity by the intrusion of propaganda, such as spot advertising of alcoholic beverages. In my opinion, there is nothing at the moment that is making so much foul weather for the liquor industry as the continued intrusion in the homes of the country of alluring radio appeals to "pep up" with this brew, and "go to town" with that. Science has developed the radio so rapidly that it has changed the habits of the American people. It is no longer a luxury, but is a necessity in practically every American home. Over it comes entertainment and instruction of unsurpassed merit for every member of the family—grand opera from the Metropolitan Opera House, symphonic concerts from the finest world orchestras, arias from the golden throats of gifted singers, sermons from eminent clergymen, dramas presented by the best talent on the stage, educational and political discussions of current topics by masters in those professions, news and news comment, and the whole range of culture covered in one day's cycle. Families gather about the radio in the evening and find pleasurable contentment. Old folks who are confined to their chairs lean upon it as a lame person leans upon a crutch.

THE PUBLIC'S INVESTMENT

In the United States on January 1, 1939, there were 764 radio stations on the air, 674 of which were actually broadcasting commercial programs. The total amount invested in these stations was approximately $50,000,000; but the investment of the listening public amounted to 50 times that figure, or two and one-half billion dcllars. The gross income upon the $50,000,000 investment last year was $135,-000,000. In view of these figures, who is there to say that the public financial interest, since it is 50 times the private financial interest, should not be protected? An industry in these days which can earn nearly three times its capital investment in 1 year can well afford to lose the revenue from unwholesome, offensive advertising which amounts to less than 1 percent of its total revenue. Radio revenue from liquor sales talks was only $1,091,400 in 1938, against a total of $135,000,000.

PROFANITY CENSORED BY CONGRESS

Congress in its wisdom, recognizing its responsibility and duty to regulate the radio, a common carrier engaged in interestate commerce operating over the channels of the air, enacted a law to deny to stations the right to broadcast profane language, or anything concerning lotteries, prizes, or games of chance. When this wholesome and necessary legislative step was taken the hue and cry was raised by the defenders of such gambling systems that this was the beginning of congressional censorship of the radio and the beginning of an effort to abridge the right of free speech; but Congress was not swerved from its responsibility by such clever subterfuge, so vile language and tempting news about lotteries ceased to be dinned into the ears of little children and foolish grown-ups. The courts have spoken on the subject, so that now no informed person in all the land contends that Congress has not the right as well as the duty in the public interest to enact necessary prohibitions. My amendment proposes taking another short step forward in the protection of the home by amending the Lottery Act, also to prohibit liquor advertising over the radio as being equally as offensive as profanity and gambling.

LIQUOR ADVERTISING OFFENSIVE

Mr. President, I am convinced that liquor advertising is offensive, because 379,000 parents have petitioned Congress for relief from it; because the Parent-Teachers Association. representing two and one-quarter million parents, says it is offensive; because officials in the Treasury Department of the Government whose duty it is to collect the liquor taxes have told Congress that it is exceedingly objectionable; because a majority of households say it is offensive, because Canada, with a population similar in ideals, habits, and customs to that of the United States, has already stopped radio liquor advertising; because the National Association of Broadcasters, representing 428 stations out of a total of 778, resolved in July of this year that it be banned. I am very grateful for this expression from the radio industry. It indicates that the association of radio stations realizes how offensive is such advertising and to what extent it is injuring the radio industry. It has been my personal experience to hear hundreds of parents complain about liquor sales-appeal talks over the radio. The Pittsburgh (Pa.) Catholic, late last fall carried this forceful and significant editorial, which I read in part:

Something has been said in these columns from time to time about the harmful effects of the advertising for intoxicants with which the radio and the billboards are flooding the country; advertising that simply cannot be squared with the public interest. Appeals to begin drinking, or to drink more—at any rate to drink, drink—flaunted day and night before eyes and dinned day and night into ears, are a deliberate incitement to intemperance.

Catholic Canada is outlining a course which the United States would do well to follow. Anyone who heard the American election returns by radio, simply saturated with intoxicants, knows that something should be done to curb this, before the selfish greed of the manufacturers of intoxicants engulfs young and old in the misery of drink.

PROFESSIONAL REFORMERS

The distinguished Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Gurney], who graced the chair as presiding officer of the Senato a few moments ago, states in the minority report which he has filed with this Senate concerning S. 517 that—

The radio should not be deprived of revenues * * * merely because a group of professional reformers seem to think that the American parent cannot prevent a child from swapping the milk bottle for the beer bottle.

What a typically fanatical "wisecrack" that is to an honest effort to compel the liquor radio salesman to live within the bounds of decency! I would ask the able Senator if it is the business of a great public utility, a great public servant, and the family's most intimate friend to reach into the cradle and swap beer for milk. I cannot believe that anyone in this Senate contends that that is the proper function of a common carrier which has been permitted by the Congress to operate in the public interests with free access into the inner chambers of American homes. Does the good Senator from South Dakota believe that making liquor guzzlers of children through shrewd liquor salesmanship is in the public interest, convenience, and necessity?

I would analyze another portion of the able Senator's silly statement; I call your attention to that part of it in which he refers to "a group of professional reformers." Does the able Senator imply that the 379,000 parents who recently petitioned Congress to keep booze propaganda out of their homes are professional reformers? Three thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven of these petitioners live in South Dakota; the Senator knows many of them personally and he knows they are excellent citizens and are not by any means professional reformers. Is the Parent-Teachers Association, consisting of two and one-quarter million members, a group of professional reformers? Does the able Senator charge that W. S. Alexander, Administrator of the Federal Alcohol Administration, is a professional reformer? I do not see how the Senator from South Dakota can place him in that category after hearing him testify in our public hearing on S. 517.

This is Mr. Alexander's statement:

I have been very much interested in the past 3 years in the comments in the country at large in regard to the use of radio for the advertising of alcoholic beverages. At each time when a public statement has been made with reference to this question our Administration has received, from all over the country, comments, and usually those comments have been in favor of the elimination of radio advertising.

We have had a number of conferences on this question. Recently we had a conference in Washington, and as a result of that conference sent out questionnaires to public officials throughout the country, and while we have not heard from all of them, the opinions of those officials in various States from whom we have heard in connection with it, are all in favor of elimination of radio advertising as a medium for the sale of alcoholic beverages.

Are these State officials, Senator Gurney, to whom Mr. Alexander refers, professional reformers?

Mr. Alexander continues:

There seems to be on the part of practically all groups, of all citizens, and of most of the liquor industry itself, a willingness to eliminate the radio in the matter of liquor advertising.

Is it possible that the liquor industry is operated by a group of professional reformers?

Now Mr. Alexander states:

I think the policy of the alcoholic beverage industry should be to so conduct its industry as to be as little offensive to people as possible * * * so that they will not again become active in seeking repeal. * * * So far as I am personally concerned I have no desire to go back to the horrors of prohibition.

And Senator Gurney calls that man a professional reformer.

I quote further from Mr. Alexander's statement:

I am very much in favor of the passage of Senate bill 517, and believe it will make easier the regulation of alcoholic beverages and will remove one cause of resentment on the part of groups who do not favor the legal sale of liquor. I am very much interested in its (S. 517) passage.

Now comes Phillip E. Buck, general counsel for the Federal Alcohol Administration, another public official whom the minority report labels "professional reformer." In the distinguished presence of Senator Gurney, Mz. Buck stated:

In my opinion Senate bill 517 is a very good bill. I think it is not a question of revenue at all. It is not a question of whether or not you are taking from one advertising medium certain revenues and giving them to another.

In the first place, a great portion of the industry itself refuses to advertise over the radio, and there is no great amount of revenue now being derived from that source by the radio companies. In the second place, as I say, it is a matter of good public policy; it is not a question of revenue. It is not a question of denying freedom of speech * * * at all, in my opinion; it is a question of regulating an industry that Congress has already, by its own acts, decided should be regulated. This is simply an extension of that regulation. I think that as a matter of good public policy Senate bill 517 is good, and I would like to see it enacted into law.

As a member of the subcommittee conducting hearings on Senate bill 517, I asked Mr. Buck, "You would not classify this legislation as fanatical legislation, would you?" He replied, "Not at all. I think it is very sane legislation, surprisingly sane, in fact."

Is Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman, legislative chairman of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, a professional reformer? She testified in the presence of the able Senator from South Dakota that her organization was opposed to liquor advertising. In answer to Senator Andrews' question, "Whom do you represent?" she said:

The National Congress of Parents and Teachers. The National Congress of Parents and Teachers has a membership of approximately two and one-quarter millions, composed of 27,000 local associations constituting 48 State branches. Its purpose is child welfare in home, church, school, and community.

Another distinguished person who appeared before the hearings on Senate bill 517 was Dr. Howard A. Dawson, director of the Division of Rural Service for the National Education Association, who said among other pertinent things:

I should like to call your attention to the fact that a very substantial number of States * * * have laws which require the public schools to give instructions in the harmful effects in the use of alcohol and narcotics. Our association, of course, is in favor of giving that kind of instruction. We do not see that unrestricted advertising of alcoholic beverages is very compatible with the position that we should teach their harmful effects. I should like to point out there is quite a great difference between taking that point of view and being an advocate of prohibition by Federal amendment to the Constitution.

Dr. Dawson made it plain to everyone except Senator Gurney that he is not a professional reformer. The able South Dakota solon evidently believes that anyone who teaches the harmful effects of alcohol is a professional reformer.

Senator Andrews questioned Dr. Dawson, "Have a great number of schools radios in them, and are those radios turned on for educational purposes?" Dr. Dawson replied:

Yes, Senator; it is quite a prevalent practice now. In fact, practically the only schools which are without radios are some of the underprivileged schools.

I am certain that the able Senator [Mr. Gurney] would not class Dr. Howard A. Dawson as a professional reformer, nor do I believe that he would say that about the junior Senator from Colorado who introduced this bill for the protection of the American home and for no other purpose. I am not trying to reform anyone, Senator Gurney; but I am intensely interested in protecting boys and girls of tender age against the pitfalls of this evil time so that they will not require reformation. I do not want them placed at the mercy of the slick liquor salesman and his smooth line within the four walls of their own homes.

GOOD ADVICE TO BROADCASTERS

Chairman Frank R. McNinch, of the Federal Communications Commission, is certainly not a professional reformer. This is his very straightforward statement made in an address February 15, 1938, before the convention of the National Association of Broadcasters at the Mayflower Hotel in this city:

I think I am just an average American citizen. If I have ideals and fairly high conceptions of public interest, public taste, and public desire, I do not think I overrate the concepts of the average American citizen. I do not think I have any higher conception of the home than you have, and I am not willing to grant that any other has a more exalted opinion of the home than I have. I have a family, a wife, and five children, and I can get a fair impression similar to that made upon the average American home by program material that is broadcast.

As we sit in our family circle listening to the radio, we are, I believe, a typical American family. Some programs are not welcomed. They subtly and sometimes boldly suggest to young people things that I wonder if any of you think proper to suggest to young minds in their plastic and formative stage when impressions are quickly and indelibly made, often to last through life.

Beware of the danger to the ideals, the morals, the thought habits of our youth and children. I wonder if here there is not the highest possible degree of responsibility that is carried by any public agency because you do come into our homes, whisper your message or your song whether for good or ill to those assembled. * *

And now I am going to be bold. I am going to suggest that you consider the wisdom of adopting a policy that would deny your facilities to those who seek to cultivate the consumption of intoxicating liquors. There is comparatively little advertising of intoxicating beverages over the radio, and you are to be congratulated on so largely eliminating this sort of sales appeal. But I believe you would do well if the American public understood you were not willing to lend your facilities for sales talks intended to increase the consumption of intoxicating beverages, especially when you remember that appeal is made in the home to children of all ages and both sexes.

The majority of our citizens have registered their will that it should be lawful to sell such beverages, but the minority has, I believe, a right to have its homes protected against that which is offensive.

I do not agree with Mr. McNinch that it is merely a minority who want protection for their homes. In my opinion, an overwhelming majority of American homes desire protection against offensive liquor-sales appeal talks to their children.

A CLEVER SUBTERFUGE

One of the most brilliant defense attorneys in Colorado, when defending some culprit, picks out some poor fellow to abuse who is not on trial. In that way he distracts attention from the real defendant. The minority report attempts to do that with S. 517. Left with so little to be said against this bill, the Senator from South Dakota cleverly brings out S. 575 to confuse the issue. S. 575 is pigeonholed in his committee and he knows that it is safely out of the way. From my point of view S. 517 and S. 575 have little in common and there is no sound reason for combining them as suggested by Senator Gurney except in the hope of defeating them both. Incidentally, I am opposed to S. 575 and shall vote against it in committee and on the floor of the Senate.

These are my reasons: Newspapers are not common carriers; they are not a public utility. They are not required to operate in the public interest, convenience, and necessity. No one needs a license to go into the newspaper business; anyone can print a paper and there is no limit as to their number. They do not mix advertising with entertainment as does the radio and there is a vast difference between vocal appeal and printer's ink. Every salesman knows that.

Before leaving the subject of the minority report, I desire to point out another of its glaring inconsistencies. The able author of this weak report does not want Congress to legislate on the subject of liquor advertising, so he states, for the reason that Congress has reposed sufficient powers in the Federal Alcohol Administration, Federal Trade Commission, and Federal Communications Commission to regulate advertising of liquor. In other words, the able Senator wants government by edict and not by law enacted by the representatives of the people. I violently oppose his position as not being democratic and not being in the interest of good government. Congress should determine and set forth policies by law wherever and whenever possible and not attempt to act indirectly through bureaucratic decree.

GOVERNMENT BY MEN

In line with the able Senator's suggestion, I should like to quote from Leonard B. Levenson, of the editorial staff of the Air Law Review:

It may be concluded that radio programs can be purged of liquor advertisements by the Federal Radio Commission's adoption of the policy of refusing to renew the licenses of stations which broadcast them. The licensing authority would thereby accomplish indirectly what it could not do directly.

In my opinion, that is precisely what Congress does not want done. This Government should not be a government by indirection through licensing bureaus assuming arbitrary powers; it should be a government by law. Congress should pass an act outlawing liquor advertisements over the radio and not leave that important function to some commission to determine what the policy of the country in that regard may be. I see a grave danger in a censorship exercised by a bureau, but I do not fear laws enacted by Congress, for Congress will never assume dictatorial authority. It has its serious faults, but ambition to dictate is not one of them. I am convinced that Congress expected the Communications Commission to use its licensing power to control the physical facilities of broadcasting rather than the programs themselves. There are many physical, scientific, and technical problems which should be decided in the public interest by this Commission.

As is well understood, the Constitution prohibits Congress from passing any law which would abridge freedom of speech. Free speech is more than a pretty slogan in America. I am a vigorous and sincere advocate of the freedom of speech in its broadest sense. In this connection it is my opinion that the Federal Communications Commission has gone far beyond the bounds of propriety in issuing its infamous edict against freedom in international broadcasting. By what constitutional or statutory provision does the Commission issue the following order:

A licensee of an international broadcast station shall render only an international broadcast service which will reflect the culture of this country and which will promote international good will, understanding, and cooperation.

Had this pronouncement been made by Hitler, Stalin, or the Emperor of Japan, we need not have been shocked. However, in this democracy in which we are attempting to govern a nation by law and not by edict, Congress should demand that this bureau revoke this most unfortunate order, which they have temporarily suspended, and cease for all time such an arbitrary assumption of dictatorial power. This is a time in the world's history for America, known far and wide for her passion for frankness, to be able to tell the world without restraint and without "pulling her punches" just what her reactions to world events are as they take place. The radio is the greatest agency for international understanding and peace yet devised, but true understanding comes out of frank statements and not from hypocritical, deceitful, and censored utterances. Good will is not promoted by saying what we do not mean. International conversation by American officials must obviously be polite, moderate, and measured, but the Commission must not be permitted to be the judge of what is proper. Individuals throwing their voices to the four corners of the world for foreign audition should, of course, be held accountable under the law for what they broadcast. In any event, the Communications Commission has no right to pass judgment in such matters, for that is clearly the business of Congress and Congress alone.

RESTRICTIVE LAWS CAUSED BY MINORITY

One often hears the suggestion that we have too many laws in the United States. Less than 10 percent of the American people, through their unsocial tendencies, make almost all restrictive laws necessary. Less than 10 percent of professional men are unethical; less than 10 percent of businessmen are "chiselers"; less than 10 percent of employers take mean advantage of their employees.

A small percentage of liquor dealers voluntarily stoop to the low plane of making liquor sales talks to children, who cannot legally make the purchases which they suggest. The selfish viciousness of this noisy, loud-speaking minority, with a contemptible disregard for the rights of others, compels Congress to enact such a law as S. 517. It is likewise true that less than 10 percent of radio stations encourage liquor broadcasts. Less than 10 percent of the American people make 90 percent of all laws necessary, and less than 10 percent of the liquor crowd make the passage of S. 517 imperative.

BROADCASTERS NEED HELP

The radio industry has made great progress in providing clean programs for the public, and it should have the hearty commendation of the Congress for the high standards toward which it is striving, but like every other human endeavor, there are radio stations out for profits at any price. To do for the industry what the industry cannot do for itself, S. 517 has come to the Senate floor from its Interstate Commerce Committee with a favorable report.

Jerome G. Kerwin, associate professor of political science at the University of Chicago, in an essay, The Control of Radio, made this pertinent observation:

The theory of rugged individualism will raise its hoary head, and many a practical businessman will once again show how he loves his theories. The incontestable fact remains, nevertheless, that the privately controlled commercial broadcasting system needs a corrective which, because of its nature, the system cannot apply to

MOCKERY OF CONSTITUTION

Station WOR of Newark put on a program of the Mount Rose Gin Distilling Co., of Trenton. A male trio, known as The Sizzlers, was the advertising attraction. The program was introduced by the following statement from the an-

Those listening in from dry States may now tune out this station, for the next program is not intended to offer alcoholic beverages for sale or delivery in any State or community wherein the adver-tising, sale, or use thereof is unlawful.

That is the most impudent mockery of the Constitution which I have ever heard. It is such a bold effort to offend and make light of the constitutional declaration that it will protect dry territory that I do not see how Congress may well delay legislation to meet such a flippant challenge.

After this insolent broadcast the Radio Commission issued the following bulletin:

Although the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution has been repealed by the twenty-first, and, so far as the Federal Government is concerned, there is no liquor prohibition, it is well known that millions of listeners throughout the United States do not use intoxicating liquors and that many children of both users and nonusers are part of the listening public.

The argument is advanced that since liquor is "legal" it should have equal privileges over the radio with every other legal commodity. But liquor is not legal in the sense that water is legal. Liquor is licensed. Every State in the Union places its delivery and its use under more or less restriction.

STATES UNABLE TO CONTROL

Many States have tried to prohibit broadcasts of liquor sales talks, and while the effort has shown commendable intentions, it has not been at all effective for the reason that the radio beam knows no State line. The only power which can deal effectively with this outrageous evil is the Congress of the United States, the power which, through exercising its constitutional rights, gave the radio industry the privilege of existing. In this connection I should like to quote from a résumé by Laura Lindley, the well-known statistician, reporting on State laws against radio advertising:

Prohibitions on the use of the radio for liquor advertising are found in Georgia, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, while Maine and Massachusetts prohibit it on licensed premises. North Carolina prohibits radio programs originating in the State.

Sound trucks may not advertise liquors in Alabama, Indiana, Massachusetts, Utah, and Washington, while Virginia has regulations upon their use.

Hours and days of advertising are limited in some States. Idaho permits programs after 9:30 p. m., but the script must be approved. In Oregon beer and wine advertising may go on the air from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m., except on Sunday. Utah also prohibits Sunday programs. Advertising by manufacturers and distributors of high-balls, cocktails, and mixed beverages and/or spirits are permitted in Ohio after 10 p. m., but there must be no statements about quality or price. No manufacturer of beer and intoxicating liquors may sponsor a program for any local licensee in Ohio, though such advertising is permitted to others. In Michigan the advertisement may not use the licensee's name.

All advertising of intoxicating liquor of any kind is prohibited in Oklahoma and Tennessee.

LIQUOR NOT COMPLETELY LEGAL

The Supreme Court has ruled that-* there is no inherent right in a citizen * * * to sell ting liquor by retail. * * * As a business attended with intoxicating liquor by retail. * danger to the community it may be entirely prohibited.

No commodity which moves in interstate commerce has the restricted status of intoxicating liquors under the peculiar wording of section 2 of the twenty-first amendment to the Constitution. In fact, no commodity other than liquor is mentioned at all in the Constitution. Section 2 reads:

The transportation or importation into any State, Territory, or possession of the United States for delivery or use therein of intoxicating liquors, in violation of the laws thereof, is hereby

If actual liquor for delivery or use cannot move into any State in violation of the State laws against such delivery or use, should it not naturally follow that when States prohibit vocal advertisements of liquor over the air it should be illegal for broadcasting stations outside of the boundaries of such States to cross the State line with vocal liquor sales talks? It may not be contrary to the letter of the Constitution, but it is certainly contrary to the spirit of the Constitution to transmit into a State prohibiting radio liquor advertising broadcasts.

I am compelled to devote a portion of my argument in behalf of S. 517 today to a discussion of radio control, censorship, freedom of speech, and freedom of radio for the reason that the opponents of this proposed legislation, unable or unwilling to directly meet the real issue involvedwhich is the protection of the home against offensive vocal propaganda-have raised these issues as a smoke screen. I shall attempt to show that in the United States the radio is a privileged public utility; that the Congress, the Communications Commission, the radio station itself, or all three of them must exercise the power of selectivity over the material broadcast; and that a proper restriction of radio advertising actually promotes the freedom of the radio and does not therefore abridge free speech. Due to natural limitations every person who would broadcast cannot do so; someone must say who shall speak, when he shall speak, and what he shall speak. The number of wave lengths has been limited by Providence, the air is crowded with programs. Many applications for stations are pending which cannot be accommodated. Some authority must weigh the evidence and select from this horde of applications the few to be granted licenses. Some authority must select programs and set up general standards for the stations. If free speech be abridged by these unavoidable limitations it is merely incidental in the necessary effort to bring order out Someone must and someone does do these things. The question involved is, Who shall do it? Congress by law creates the privilege of radio broadcasting and Congress by law assigns and apportions that privilege under stipulated rules and regulations in the public interest to applicants who would use it; and then when Congress would prohibit the use of profanity, information about lotteries, and liquor advertising, the false cry of censorship is raised. The station is compelled to exercise a censorship because of its operating expenses and its desire to make profits with its limited facilities and limited time. There are only 24 hours in a day; there are only a limited number of wave lengths in the ether. The station must be granted a monopolized privilege, and Congress, the creator and allocator of that privilege, has the plain duty of seeing to it that the service rendered through its grant is exercised in the public interest. Congress should not create and hand out a monopoly to privileged private parties and then walk off and leave it to be operated without regard to the public interest. Congress has the very definite and unmistakable responsibility of protecting the public against the monopoly which it has created.

It is said with some truth that the receiving set with its dial and its switch is the proper censor. If a station broadcasts an offensive program, one may tune it out; but the second and third stations have offensive programs also, so the attempted selection in the home is nullified; the radio may be turned off, to be sure, but that is no answer to the problem. The proper place to stop offensive broadcasting is at its source. One cannot sit at his radio all day to protect his family against offensive programs. It is unfortunately true that some folks like to hear unwholesome broadcasting, but the overwhelming majority do not. It is true that a few have an appetite for lewd, vulgar, filthy things, but it is not the business of a great public utility licensed to operate in the public interest to supply that degenerate demand. The public interest demands clean, wholesome things and there can be no argument about that.

The facilities and the operation of the radio cost large sums of money so that there is an expense involved in every word which is uttered on the air. The quantity of one's broadcasting is decided by the size of his purse. If he be poor, he cannot use the radio much, however badly the world may need his speech, while the rich liquor dealer, because of his great wealth, may speak far more than is desirable. Possession of money, therefore, determines the quantity of radio speech and becomes a censor in itself.

RADIO A TWO-EDGED MONOPOLY

Radio monopoly is obviously not restricted to the ownership of the station. There is a monopoly in the use of the radio by the paid customers and that monopoly is determined by quantity of money. Liquor interests financially able to to set aside millions for advertising enjoy a very vicious radio monopoly. The monopoly of the power to advertise and carry on private propaganda must be regulated in the public interest, for it will become more and more necessary as time goes on to assure by legislation easier and more positive access to the air to the less powerful groups and the less powerful individuals. Thus will freedom of the radio be promoted by a public regulation of radio advertising. The ether belongs to all the people and its use must not be restricted to the few simply because of their great wealth. The radio is not a "temple of free speech" nor can it be made one so long as it remains a private enterprise with all of the artificial and natural limitations surrounding it. I am not advocating public ownership or public operation of the radio because I do not believe in that sort of thing. I am attempting to indicate how ridiculous it is for the radio industry to cry censorship whenever a very few necessary regulations over that industry are invoked by the Congress.

The people, it is certain, prefer a public rather than a private censor, and it must also be concluded that the Congress, representing the people, is the proper public censor to exercise what little censorship is needed, for only Congress can be trusted by the people to use the tremendous power of censorship with deliberate moderation and dignified restraint.

We must admit that the regulation of radio advertising is a very troublesome problem. While it is understood that broadcasting stations in this country are supported by paid advertisers, it does not necessarily follow that the listening public should be compelled to submit to offensive advertising over the radio as their penalty for its free educational and recreational service.

The editor of the Journal of the National Educational Association has made this stinging observation:

America is the only great civilized country that has allowed this new garden of opportunity to become overgrown with the weeds of commercial advertising.

Radio advertising is a commercial enterprise and is entitled to no privilege for which it does not pay. The public owes it absolutely nothing, while radio advertisers owe the public everything. Radio advertising is bought and paid for like apples in a barrel. A thing which is purchased at so much per word cannot be free; it belongs to someone; it is created to make a profit; it is property; it is a commodity and it moves in interstate commerce as a commodity. To the contrary, the free speech with which the Constitution is concerned is not a commodity; free speech cannot be traded in the market place; it is not owned by anyone; it is not for sale at any price; it is ideals, theories, doctrines, beliefs, and controversies concerning public questions reduced to spoken language. It is free in spirit and it is free in price. Tyler Berry, in his book, Communications by Wire and Radio, makes this observation:

It is self-evident that the constitutional guaranty of speech applies to the expression of political and religious opinions, to discussion, fair comments, and criticisms of matters of general public interest, of candidates, of men holding public office, and of political, social, and economic issues.

Commercial speech and free speech are not synonymous. Advertising is essential to the existence of radio broadcasting in the United States since the revenue from advertising finances and makes broadcasting both profitable and possible. If it were not for this advertising revenue, the operating cost of broadcasting would have to be supported by taxation of one kind or another. Advertising revenues spare the taxpayer from the burden of maintaining this delightfully entertaining and necessary public-interest service and are, therefore, an essential factor in the operation of circulating free speech. Radio advertising is just as important as any portion of the mechanical equipment of the radio station, but it must be remembered that it is a means to an end and not the end in itself.

Congress has been very patient with the advertising development of the radio and has been slow to interfere with the outrageous conditions which have developed in it.

It would be foolish to think the Congress has been given the regulation of the broadcasting industry operating in interstate commerce without authority to regulate both the quality and quantity of advertising and to do so without being charged with infringing upon free speech. Congress has been given the power over the wave length over the commercial strength of the station and over everything pertaining to its operation by the Constitution itself and has the responsibility of controlling it in the public interest, which cannot be done unless it also has complete authority and control over advertising material and advertising revenues.

PUBLIC INTEREST PARAMOUNT

The radio renders a private service and it renders a public service. The private service is rendered to its commercial customers, for which it is paid; the public service is rendered to the listening public, for which it is not paid. The radio is a public utility and, while advertising is incidental and necessary under our system to its operation, the real purpose for which the radio has been licensed by the Congress is service to the public and not service to the advertisers. Broadcasting stations are not given the privilege of a monopolized opportunity to occupy certain wave lengths by the Congress for the private benefit of radio advertisers. Even though the advertisers support the radio, the public interest which manifestly is not in advertising remains paramount. The wailing and gnashing of teeth of the liquor salesman and his pretended interest in the freedom of speech the moment the door of American homes is threatened to be closed to his offensive propaganda will not deceive any fairminded person in or out of Congress. The liquor radio advertiser is not concerned with free speech; he is concerned with sales of liquor. He is not interested in the purity of the home; he is interested in private profits and new customers and he employs the radio to secure these things. So long as advertising occurs at reasonable intervals and is honest, clean, and wholesome, and adapted to the family circle, no reasonable person has a right to complain very much. Congress in its wisdom has delegated broad powers to the Communications Commission, but Congress has relinquished none of its prerogatives over policies of radio utterances. It has already prohibited by law the utterance of any obscene, indecent, or profane language by means of radio communication, and it should obviously add liquor advertising to this very short list of banned subjects.

FREEDOM OF LISTENING

Congress must recognize that liberty of expression is one of man's most precious heritages, but Congress must also remember that the exercise of free speech has never meant and never can mean "the unrestricted right to say what one pleases at all times and under all circumstances." There must be moderation and common sense in the exercise of free speech, otherwise a great human blessing eventually deteriorates into a positive oppression. Unwholesome advertising poured out from radio stations to be received in the privacy of the various homes of this land becomes the instrument of injury to unprotected children if care is not manifested. When the spoken word does that it destroys by its very nature the social principles involved in the guarantee of free speech. There is a freedom of listening which is just as important as the freedom of speaking, for the listener to such a public utility, as the radio has just as much right to the consideration of Congress as has the

The Fourth National Radio Conference adopted this reso-Intion .

That public interest as represented by service to the listener shall be the basis for the broadcasting privilege.

I find myself in complete accord with this statement by Herbert Hoover:

Through the policies we have established the Government, and

Through the policies we have established the Government, and therefore the people, have today the control of the channels through the ether just as we have control of our channels of navigation; but outside of this fundamental reservation radio activities are largely free. We will maintain them free—free of monopoly, free in program, and free in speech—but we must also maintain them free of malice and unwholesomeness.

Radio has passed from the field of an adventure to that of a public utility. Nor among the utilities is there one whose activities may yet come more closely to the life of each and every one of our citizens, nor which holds out greater possibilities of future influence, nor which is of more potential public concern. Here is an agency that has reached deep into the family life. We can protect the home by preventing the entry of printed matter destructive to its ideals, but we must double guard the radio.

S. 517 is not in any sense fanatical legislation. It has nothing whatever to do with the eighteenth amendment or with a return to prohibition. Its only purpose is to protect the American home against offensive and unwholesome liquor advertising. That home has petitioned Congress to bar the invisible but attractive vocal liquor salesman from entry into its sacred inner chamber. I am standing on this floor advocating the adoption of S. 517 because 379,000 parents living in every State in the Union have been so outraged that they have asked Congress to protect them and to guard them against the violation of their firesides by the unscrupulous voice of this unwelcome invader. The Constitution has as much to say about the sanctity of the home as it does about freedom of speech. It does not permit a police officer, for instance, to enter that privileged sanctum without a warrant, yet the impudent liquor salesman demands constitutional rights which have never been the constitutional rights of anyone to enter that home, violate its sanctity, and make repulsive sales talks to persons who do not want to listen to them.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION OF POLAR EXPLORATION

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Truman in the chair) laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 137) authorizing and requesting the President to accept the invitation of the Government of Norway to the Government of the United States to participate in an international exhibition of polar exploration, which will be held at Bergen, Norway, in 1940, and authorizing an appropriation to cover the expenses of such participation, which was, on page 3, line 23, to strike out "$35,000" and insert "$15,000."

Mr. PITTMAN. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

FARM PRICES-THEN AND NOW

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, on July 12 there appeared in the Congressional Record a statement entitled "Farm Prices-Then and Now" under the remarks of the Honorable GEORGE W. GILLIE, of Indiana. There was inserted under his remarks an editorial entitled "Sure, Why Not?" from the Steuben Republican, of Angola, Ind. This editorial carried a most curious conglomeration of statistical data purporting to represent agricultural prices under Republican administrations in comparison with similar prices under the Roosevelt administraton. Apparently this table was compiled under the assumption that figures never lie, regardless of the method of compilation or the person doing the job.

In this table the Republican average farm prices from 1921 to 1932 were shown while the Democratic average farm prices were from 1933 to 1937, or less than half the time covered by the former. Whatever this one-sided average was meant to convey, there was only one item shown with a higher price under the Democratic administration. Apparently this one single figure could not be manipulated so as to show a lower price. The mere number of years in this average of the "roaring twenties" with relatively high farm prices was enough to offset the bad conditions prevailing when the Democratic administration took over national affairs.

The farm prices at the end of the Hoover administration represented the actual conditions inherited by the Roosevelt administration. Whatever has happened since that time ought to be measured from the low point of the depression. That is the proper starting point, not back when the farmers thought they were enjoying prosperity.

I submit a table of prices of the same agricultural products for comparable periods of time—the last 3 years under Hoover and the last 3 years under Roosevelt-and ask that the table be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CONSTRUCTION FOR DEFENSE OF PANAMA CANAL

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the next bill under the unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 5129, authorizing and providing for the construction of additional facilities on the Canal Zone for the purposes of more adequately providing for the defense of the Panama Canal and for increasing its capacity for the future needs of interoceanic shipping.

Mr. AUSTIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Shipstead Slattery Downey Ellender Lucas Andrews Laindeen McCarran McKellar Smathers Ashurst George Austin Gerry Smith Bailey Bankhead Gibson Guffey Maloney Mead Stewart Thomas, Okla. Barkley Gurney Miller Thomas, Utah Tobey Borah Minton Harrison Townsend Bridges Murray Hatch Neely Tydings Vandenberg Van Nuys Bulow Hayden Nye O'Mahoney Herring Holt Burke Pepper Byrd Hughes Johnson, Calif. Byrnes Pittman Wagner Walsh Radcliffe Capper Reed Russell Chavez Johnson, Colo. Wheeler Clark, Idaho Clark, Mo. King La Follette White Schwartz Connally Lee Lodge Schwellenbach Sheppard Danaher

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-seven Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I renew my request for unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 5129.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Missouri a few questions, with his permission.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I shall be very glad to answer them if I can.

Mr. DANAHER. I was sure the Senator would, and I thank him for his cooperative attitude.

When House bill 5129 was first introduced, the report of the Committee on Interoceanic Canals to the Senate said that it was identical with Senate bill 2229, a bill which was recommitted to the committee by vote of the Senate.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, that was true at the time the Senate bill was reported. The bill was very substantially amended in the House in accordance with the suggestions made in the debate in the Senate prior to recommittal with regard to restrictions upon the authority of the Governor of the Panama Canal. Amendments proposed by the War Department in conformity with the suggestions which were made in the Senate were adopted by the House committee and reported as part of the bill in the House; so the two bills are no longer identical, as they originally were.

Mr. DANAHER. Will the Senator please refer to page 2 of the bill, line 9, and tell us whether or not any limitation is understood by the Senator from Missouri as to the number of employees or the type of employees that the Governor of the Panama Canal may employ?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Of course it is obviously impossible to specify by law, in a great construction project of that sort, the number of employees who shall be engaged in it. I presume that in no great construction work which has ever been undertaken by the United States Government or by anybody else has anybody ever attempted to specify by law the number of pick-and-shovel men or the number of employees of various kinds who should be employed in the course of it.

We imposed a limitation in the authorization, and a limitation on the appropriation for the first year to increase the number of employees, including heavy-labor men, skilled-labor men, clerks, experts, would be simply an estimate at best, and I do not believe anyone would recommend the advisability of undertaking to restrict by law the number of people to be engaged for the expeditious and necessary prosecution of the work.

Mr. DANAHER. Nor, may I observe, is there any restriction on the citizenship of those who may thus be employed.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. If the Senator had permitted the committee amendment to be reported, it would have been perfectly obvious, from the amendment adopted this morning by the Senate committee, what was decided on in that regard. I ask that the Senate committee amendment be reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed, on page 2, line 6, after the word "purpose", to insert "Provided, however, That all new personnel in such construction work occupying skilled, technical, clerical, administrative, and supervisory positions shall be citizens of the United States."

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, that was an amendment agreed to by the representatives of the Canal Authority, and the War Department, and the representatives of the various labor groups interested in the matter.

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator and desire to say that that certainly meets in very large measure much of the opposition that was voiced to the bill.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I think the amendment is satisfactory to all concerned. It is unwise for work of a heavy nature in the Tropics—work performed by common labor—to import labor from the United States for a limited period because, in the first place, it is required that they be acclimated, and, in the second place, Americans are not suited to doing that kind of heavy work. It would very much delay and impede the completion of the project if we undertook to make any such provision. It was agreed by all concerned that the language shall be amended.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I am glad to yield.

Mr. DANAHER. Inviting the Senator's attention to lines 24 and 25, at the bottom of page 2, the Senator will read that the Governor is authorized to make contracts "without the advertisement hereinafter prescribed, with architectural or engineering corporations, firms, or individuals," and so forth. Does the Senator understand that language to mean that the Governor, within the authorized limitations, may make contracts for the whole project?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I do not so understand, because the language of the proviso is specific, that that is simply "for the production and delivery of designs, plans, drawings, and specifications," the idea being that it is particularly desirable that if the work is to be entered upon at all it shall be entered upon with as much expedition as possible, in order to shorten the times of construction. Therefore, under that proviso the Governor of the Panama Canal Zone is authorized, with the approval of the Secretary of War, without going through the necessary delay of advertising for bids, merely to engage architectural or engineering firms or individuals for the production and delivery only of designs, plans, drawings, and specifications.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, inviting the Senator's attention to page 3, lines 3 and 4, the Governor is authorized to make "any and all contracts necessary for the prosecution of the work herein authorized." I take it that that language will apply to the complete construction of the project from the beginning on?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. As I understand, that is merely to authorize the Governor of the Panama Canal Zone to enter into contracts on behalf of the United States.

Mr. DANAHER. Yes; but contracts for the whole job—the completed job. Is not that so?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I would so construe it.

Mr. DANAHER. If the Senator will yield, it says "the work herein authorized" on a $277,000,000 job. Is not that so? Mr. CLARK of Missouri. That is correct.

Mr. DANAHER. So that the making of contracts is in prosecution of the work herein authorized and hence for the whole job. Is not that correct?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Someone has to make the contracts.

Mr. DANAHER. Does the Senator understand that the making of the contract must be submitted for the approval of the Secretary of War?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. There is no question on earth about that. I refer the Senator to the language above, in lines 17 and 18, "that the Governor of the Panama Canal, with the approval of the Secretary of War," and so forth. In other words, that is the ordinary contract for public works, except that the Governor of the Panama Canal, being further removed, is given perhaps more discretion than subordinate Army officers ordinarily are in making such contracts, but the approval of the Secretary of War is required in each case.

Mr. DANAHER. Inviting the Senator's attention to page 3, line 13, we find that-

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and except as otherwise provided in this act, all purchases and contracts for supplies or for services, except for personal services, shall be made by the Panama Canal after advertising, in such manner and at such times, sufficiently in advance of opening of bids, as the Governor or his duly authorized representative in the United States shall to be adequate to insure notice and opportunity for competition.

There is thereafter a provision for a suspension of even that necessity in the event of an emergency.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. So far as the first sentence which the Senator has quoted is concerned, that merely removes this contract from the ordinary operation of projects with the War Department because of the distance from the United States. In other words, instead of having the bureau of the War Department attend to the advertising and submit the bids, it merely transfers the authority to another bureau of the War Department, to wit, the Panama Canal Authority, which is on the scene.

So far as the other provision is concerned, that is a very common provision in emergency construction, where it may be considered that an emergency exists, to permit a suspension of the rule established.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, if the Senator will indulge me just a moment further-

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I am glad to yield.

Mr. DANAHER. Does the Senator understand that it is necessary that we should suspend the protections and the limitations of existing law which bind the Secretary of War when he makes a contract?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, it seems to me that in the case of a construction at a distance so far removed from the United States as Panama is, it is necessary to vest a certain measure of discretion in the responsible officers on the ground in cases of emergency, to be so found by those responsible officers as emergencies, in order to prevent failure of the work. I dare say that if a certain very large measure, a much larger measure of discretion than is usual in such cases, or as is provided for in the pending bill, had not been vested in General Goethals at the time of the construction of the Panama Canal, the Panama Canal never would have been successfully completed. In a work of such magnitude, removed from the United States such a distance, I do not feel that we should be so technical as in the ordinary routine of the War Department operations in the

The purpose of the pending measure is to provide additional lock facilities as a measure of national defense, as well as a prospective commercial adjunct of the Canal, and the construction should be completed as soon as reasonably can be expected. Therefore we should not tie it up with unnecessary technicalities which might defeat the purpose.

The Governor of the Panama Canal always is an officer of the Engineer Corps of the United States Army. The Army engineers perform nearly all of the construction of public works in this country. I think every Member of the Senate will bear me out when I say that I have never been very much inclined to vest any unnecessary authority in any public official, or any more discretion than is absolutely necessary; but when we take an Engineer officer of the United States Army, who has been designated as Governor of the Panama Canal, who is the man on the ground, an expert in construction matters, an expert in conditions at the Panama Canal, removed several thousand miles from the United States, I say he ought to be given an opportunity to prosecute the mission imposed upon him by Congress without unnecessary hampering restrictions.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, the Senator will check me if I am incorrect, but, as I understand the bill, we authorize to be appropriated for the fiscal year 1940 only $15,000,000.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. That is correct.

Mr. DANAHER. But we place a ceiling or maximum upon the total above that of $277,000,000.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. That is correct. Mr. DANAHER. But as I read the language, we authorize that amount ultimately to be appropriated.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. That is entirely correct. Of course, the amount to be appropriated is provided for in regular appropriation bills. The reason why the authorization for the first year was placed at $15,000,000 was that that was the estimate of the War Department and the Canal authorities as to the amount which could be reasonably and profitably expended the first year.

Mr. DANAHER. I should like to ask the Senator why we could not properly amend line 4, on page 3, so that the Governor would be authorized to make any and all contracts only within the initial appropriation for the first year.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I do not believe that the War Department would feel justified in entering upon a construction of such magnitude if they were limited as to the initial expenses the first year. I know that if I were Secretary of War I would not. I do not believe any responsible administrative official in the United States would feel like entering upon a work of this magnitude, estimated to cost $277,000,000, if he were limited in regard to all important plans and arrangements in the first year.

Mr. DANAHER. And yet is not that what we are saying by putting a limit of $15,000,000 on it?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. It seems to me that the construction of a project of this sort has to be contemplated as a whole and not piecemeal. A limitation of $15,000,000 was included simply at the recommendation of the Department itself as to the amount which could properly be expended in 1 year.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I want to thank the Senator for his courtesy and his cooperation.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I am very glad to have it from the Senator from Connecticut or from any other Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Missouri for the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5129) authorizing and providing for the construction of additional facilities on the Canal Zone for the purposes of more adequately providing for the defense of the Panama Canal and for increasing its capacity for the future needs of interoceanic shipping, which had been reported from the Committee on Interoceanic Canals with an amendment, on page 2, line 6, after the word "purpose", to insert "Provided, however, That all new personnel in such construction work occupying skilled, technical, clerical, administrative, and supervisory positions shall be citizens of the United States", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the improvement and enlargement of the capacity of the Panama Canal in the interests of defense and interoceanic commerce is hereby authorized to be prosecuted the Governor of the Panama Canal under the supervision of the Secretary of War, substantially in accordance with the plans set forth and recommended in the Report of the Governor of the Panama Canal, dated February 24, 1939, and published as House Document No. 210, and including such appurtenant structures, works, and facilities and enlargements or improvements of existing channels, structures, works, and facilities as may be deemed necessary, at a total cost not to exceed $277,000,000, which is hereby sary, at a total cost not to exceed $277,000,000, which is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the purpose: Provided, however, That all new personnel in such construction work occupying skilled, technical, clerical, administrative, and supervisory positions shall be citizens of the United States: Provided, That the initial appropriation for the fiscal year 1940 shall not exceed $15,000,000. For the purposes aforesaid, the Governor of the Panama Canal is authorized (a) to employ such persons as he may deem necessary and to fix their compensation: Provided, That the compensation of such persons shall not be lower than the compensation paid for the same or similar services to other employees of the Panama Canal: Provided further. That rates of compensation in excess of Canal: Provided further, That rates of compensation in excess of those authorized by law for other employees of the Panama Canal shall not be paid without the approval of the Secretary of War:

And provided further, That the Governor of the Panama Canal with the approval of the Secretary of War is authorized to engage under agreement, when deemed necessary, expert assistance in the various arts and sciences upon terms and rates of compensation for services and incidental expenses in excess of the maximum compensation provided by law for employees of the Panama Canal; (b) to authorize the making of contracts without the advertisement hereinafter prescribed, with architectural or engineering corporations, firms, or individuals for the production and delivery of designs, plans, drawings, and specifications; (c) to authorize the making of any and all contracts necessary for the prosecution of the work herein authorized; (d) to provide for the establishment and operation of such auxiliary plants and facilities in connection with the work as may be necessary or desirable; (e) to utilize any of the facilities or services of the Panama Railroad Co. upon such terms and conditions as may be approved by the Secretary of War; and (f) in general to do all things proper and necessary to insure the prompt and efficient completion of the work herein authorized.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and except as Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and except as otherwise provided in this act, all purchases and contracts for supplies or for services, except for personal services, shall be made by the Panama Canal after advertising, in such manner and at such times, sufficiently in advance of opening of bids, as the Governor or his duly authorized representative in the United States shall determine to be adequate to insure notice and opportunity for competition. Such advertisement shall not be required, however, when (a) an emergency requires immediate delivery of the supplies or performance of the services; or (b) repair parts, accessories, supplemental equipment, or services are required for supplies or services previously furnished or contracted for; or (c) the aggregate amount involved in any purchase of supplies or procurement of services does not exceed $500; in which cases such purchases of supplies or procurement of services may be made in the open market in the manner common among businessmen. In comparing bids and in making awards the Governor or his duly authorized representative in the United States may consider such factors as relative quality and adaptability of supplies or services, the bidder's financial responsibility, skill, experience, record of integrity in dealing, and ability to furnish repairs and maintenance services, the time of delivery or performance offered, and whether the bidder has complied with the specifications.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, when this bill was before the Senate the last time I was very much interested in, and I am now very much interested in the substance of the amendment which has just been read by the clerk and agreed to by the Senate. I wish to say to the Senator from Missouri, who will undoubtedly be a member of the conference committee, if a conference committee shall be appointed, that my interest in the substance of the bill does not lapse by the mere fact that it has been passed by the Senate. I sincerely trust that the Senator from Missouri will realize the importance of the amendment, and will further realize that if the conference report comes in without the amendment, there are some Senators who will be so interested as to attempt to try to oppose its adoption on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Nevada that I have never in my life been a member of a conference committee in which I did not to the very best of my ability and perseverance and tenacity adhere to the position of the Senate.

BUSINESS OF THE SESSION

Mr. PEPPER obtained the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I wish to state at this time that the deficiency bill now in the Committee on Appropriations is the only barrier to adjournment tomorrow, so far as I can see. The subcommittee is considering that bill, and I hope it will be able to report it sometime around noon tomorrow, and that we may finish the bill and wind up the session tomorrow night, if it is possible. Many Senators are leaving the city. A good many have already gone. I do not want to be caught without a quorum on an important measure of that kind because, undoubtedly, judging from the notices that have been served for suspension of the rule, a number of amendments will be offered from the floor. In addition to that, there may be and probably will be important amendments added to the bill by the committee, and these amendments, both from the committee and on the floor, will have to be threshed out, and go to conference, and it may take some little time to iron them out in conference.

Therefore, I hope Senators, if they can do so without inconvenience, will remain here until we can finish the business of the session, so we will not find ourselves embarrassed by not having a quorum in the last 2 days of the session.

PURCHASE AND DISTRIBUTION OF SURPLUS PRODUCTS OF THE FISHING INDUSTRY

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I move that the Senate presently consider calendar No. 854, House bill 5681 to authorize the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation to purchase and distribute surplus products of the fishing industry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Florida?

Mr. DANAHER. I have no objection to the request, but there is objection to the passage of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request will first be considered. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5681) to authorize the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation to purchase and distribute surplus products of the fishing industry.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, this bill does not call for any additional appropriation of money. It merely provides that fish products shall be eligible to the benefits which agricultural products may derive from the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation. We know that the fishing industry is one of the great industries of the Nation, and that a very large portion of the States of the country have a very important part of their economy related to the prosperity of the fishing industry. Heretofore they have not been able to share the benefits of section 32 of the A. A. A., which has appropriated funds to the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation. I shall move that the amount of money that may be available for this purpose shall not exceed the sum of $1,500,000 per year. I do that at the insistence of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. Russell], who has conferred with some of his colleagues here and in the House who are interested in agriculture, so that the fishing industry may not be permitted to get an undue share of the funds which are available under that act.

So, Mr. President, I offer an amendment, on page 2, line 1, after the word "funds", to insert "not to exceed $1,500,000 per year."

Mr. KING. Mr. President, it seems to me that we are projecting the Federal Government into another paternalistic policy or scheme. As I understand, we are authorizing the purchase of all forms of sea food, and of diverting them from the market and from the normal channels of trade and commerce. The Government is to acquire them and is to provide for their distribution through Federal, State, and private relief channels.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator, of course, recognizes that that is the law now with respect to agriculture, and we merely say that the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation may deal with fishery products as they now do with agricultural products.

Mr. KING. But we should not forget the fact that the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation has lost now, I do not know how many millions of dollars—perhaps $200,-000,000—by its improvident and unwise activities largely in private endeavors. Now it is proposed in the case of this same organization, which has received tremendous appropriations, and which is now asking deficiency appropriations of over $100,000,000 to replenish the capital stock which has been exhausted, to increase its authority and to have it project itself into business which is being carried on now by private enterprise, by persons who are engaged in buying and selling fish and fish products throughout the United States. It seems to me that it is paternalism gone mad.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I hope the amendment will receive the favorable consideration of the Senate.

Mr. KING. Let me ask, why was the Committee on Commerce discharged from the further consideration of the bill?

Mr. PEPPER. I will answer the Senator from Utah. Mr. President, the Committee on Commerce was discharged because of the fact that when this bill was referred to the Committee on Commerce the committee had already passed upon two similar bills, but the main reason was that the Committee on Commerce of the Senate had passed upon a bill which is now upon the Senate calendar which, although there was a little difference in the actual wording, had exactly the same purpose as this bill has. So the Committee on Commerce was discharged because it should not have had this bill referred to it in the first place.

Mr. KING. I am opposed to the bill.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, will my colleague yield to me?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield to my colleague.

Mr. ANDREWS. I should like to make this matter plain. Senate bill 2110, which is Calendar No. 724, was introduced by me on April 7. It was considered, reported favorably by the committee. The subcommittee chairman was the Senator from Washington [Mr. Schwellenbach]. About that time or a little later a House bill came over to the Senate and was referred to the committee. It was ascertained that the two bills covered the same subject. Therefore the bill was reported back to the calendar, because the same subject matter practically had been handled by the subcommittee. So the bill is here properly for consideration at this time.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. DANAHER. I submitted yesterday an amendment, or rather it might be said that they were a series of amendments to House bill 5681. I fancy that if the amendments submitted were to be favorably acted upon there would be singular unanimity from then on in the consideration of this bill.

I ask the Senator from Florida if he is willing to accept the amendments which I submitted yesterday. I may say further to the Senator that if there were agreement upon those amendments, we could very readily dispose of the matter.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I regret that neither I nor a number of my colleagues on this side of the Chamber can agree with the Senator from Connecticut, because what he proposes to do is to make canned fishery commodities ineligible for the benefit of this law, and we think that canned fisheries products, such as shrimp and oysters and others of that character, are as much entitled to the benefits of the law as are other types of fish products. There being that difference of opinion, the Senator will have to offer his amendment and then let the Senate pass upon it according to its judgment.

The Senator from Connecticut is not opposed to the limitation of the amount which is offered by my amendment, and I hope he will let that amendment be disposed of.

Mr. DANAHER. That amount, Mr. President, is identical with that appearing in line 2 of my printed amendment, and I have no objection to the amount stated by the Senator from Florida.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida [Mr. Pepper]. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. DANAHER. Of course.

I am informed by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Lundern] that he desires the floor in his own right. I think we should get on with the bill. I think the Senator from Florida will agree to that.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, we shall not get on very far with it tonight.

INVESTIGATION OF PERSONNEL CONDITIONS AT JEFFERSONVILLE (IND.) QUARTERMASTER DEPOT

Mr. TRUMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. TRUMAN. Earlier in the day the Senate acted on Senate Resolution 178, which should have been reported by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate. I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the resolution was agreed to be reconsidered and that the resolution be unanimously reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri asks unanimous consent that the vote by which Senate Resolution 178 was agreed to be reconsidered and that the resolution be unanimously reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, what is the resolution?

Mr. TRUMAN. It is a resolution which authorizes an investigation of personnel conditions at the Jeffersonville, Ind., quartermaster depot. The resolution was submitted by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. Minton] and unanimously reported by the Committee on Military Affairs, but it should have gone through the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the vote by which Senate Resolution 178 was agreed to is reconsidered, and the resolution is unanimously reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, the vote by which the resolution was agreed to having been reconsidered, and the resolution now having been properly reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, will the Senator please tell us what the resolution is and to what it relates?

Mr. MINTON. The resolution authorizes an investigation of the quartermaster's depot at Jeffersonville, Ind., on the complaint of numerous employees there regarding certain discriminatory practices which have been going on within the depot. It carries an authorization of only $2,500 to cover stenographic expenses.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. As I understand, it relates only to Indiana?

Mr. MINTON. It relates only to the quartermaster depot at Jeffersonville, Ind.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Indiana?

There being no objection, the resolution was considered and agreed to.

RELIEF OF EXCESSIVE FARM-MORTGAGE DEBTS AND PREVENTION OF FURTHER INCREASE OF FARM TENANCY

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Yesterday the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follette], on behalf of himself and the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler], introduced Senate bill 2935, to remove the depressing economic effects of excessive farm-mortgage debts and prevent the further increase of farm tenancy due to mortgage foreclosures, and for other purposes. I have spoken to the Senator from Wisconsin and the Senator from Montana about the matter, and they have agreed that I may join with them in sponsorship of the bill. I ask unanimous consent that the Record show that I have joined the two Senators in sponsorship of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Washington?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, does the request call for action by the Senate?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, the request is merely that the bill which the Senator from Montana and I introduced and had referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry shall also be introduced in behalf of the Senator from Washington.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

PROPOSED EXTENSION OF GRAND TETON NATIONAL PARK

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I thank the Senator for yielding.

I send to the desk and ask to have read a letter from the financial clerk of the Senate. It relates to an appropriation which was made available to a special committee of the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, which was appointed a year ago to investigate a proposal to extend the Grand Teton National Park. An appropriation of $5,000 was made available to that committee. The report of the financial clerk is to the effect that there is now on hand a balance of $3,294.40 out of the $5,000; and I am returning that amount to the contingent fund of the Senate.

I ask that the letter be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The letter will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

UNITED STATES SENATE, August 3, 1939.

Hon. JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,

Chairman, Special Subcommittee of the Committee on Public Chairman, Special Subcommittee of the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, United States Senate.

Dear Mr. Chairman: On May 18, 1938, the Senate authorized the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys or any subcommittee thereof, together with both Senators from Wyoming, to make a thorough investigation of all questions relating to the suitability and feasibility of extending the boundaries of the Grand Teton National Park in Wyoming, including the attitude of the citizens of Teton County, Wyo., toward such extension, and the sum of $5,000 was authorized to be expended for such purpose.

At the present time the records show that you have expended $1,705.60, leaving a balance of $3,294.40.

Respectfully.

Respectfully,

CHARLES F. PACE, Financial Clerk.

UNFINISHED LEGISLATION

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, announcement has just been made by our distinguished leader that we are about to adjourn. I can appreciate how the Congress feels on that However, when we pick up our evening newspapers tonight and read about troops going into action, tanks rolling down the streets of great cities, the W. P. A. turmoil, and one Governor talking about insurrection against the Government, we must realize that we have important problems which are being left unsolved. I am opposed to adjournment. Let the Congress remain in session to meet the oncoming crisis.

In that connection I ask unanimous consent to place in the RECORD a statement by the president of the Minneapolis Central Labor Union, John Boscoe, in reply to Governor Stassen, together with a statement by the Workers Alliance, and an editorial from the biweekly Work.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Minnesota? The Chair hears none, and the matters referred to may be printed in the RECORD.

The matters referred to are as follows:

RADIO ADDRESS BY JOHN BOSCOE

In Governor Stassen's radio address of last week, he made an attack upon the organized labor movement of Minneapolis and its democratically elected leadership. The Governor charged this leadership with being thoughtless, unsound, and vicious. He said that a small handful of men led the W. P. A. walk-out, that the strike was called without a vote of the membership, that the leaders of the local labor movement caused great loss and injury by placing 10,000 men and women in dire need, and finally that the joint committee which directed the protest strike inflicted great harm on Minneapolis labor.

In the name of the Minneapolis labor movement, I intend to answer the Governor's faulty and superficial estimate of the W. P. A. strike and to present a factual picture of that strike which has remained hidden from the people to this very day. In Governor Stassen's radio address of last week, he made an

First of all, was it a small handful of men who caused the trouble and created the situation? This is what the Governor charged. The truth is as follows: When the W. P. A. workers of the city, State, and Nation returned to their jobs Wednesday morning after the Fourth of July holiday, they found posted on the bulletin boards a notice that their union wage scale was cut as much as 50 percent and their hours of labor greatly increased.

DROPPED THEIR TOOLS

Spontaneously, W. P. A. workers throughout the Nation dropped their tools and refused to work. In the Twin Cities, the daily press agrees, the W. P. A. walk-out began at the projects at the State fair grounds and rapidly spread throughout Hennepin and Ramsey Counties. Members of trade-unions, of unemployed organizations, and workers who had never belonged to either, walked ganizations, and workers who had never belonged to either, walked off their jobs in unison in protest against the wage-cutting, jobslashing, and hour-lengthening provisions of the slave-relief act.

Almost simultaneously the same reaction was occurring in all parts of the State—in Duluth, on the iron range, in southern Minnesota. At the same time W. P. A. workers all over the country—in New York City, in Ohio, in Pennsylvania, in Chicago and southern Illinois, in New Jersey and California, and elsewhere—were walking off projects in protest against the wage-cutting outrage committed by the sponsors and supporters of the Woodrum amendments.

A compilation of strike figures indicated that approximately half a million men and women were participating in the spontaneous walk-out in protest against this attack on their living standards.

JOINT STRUGGLE

Half a million strikers! Never before, not even in the great railway strike of 1877 nor in the Nation-wide struggle for the 8-hour day in 1886, had so many workers engaged in a joint struggle. It is certain that the W. P. A. strike was the most popular movement of protest which has ever occurred in this country. Governor Stassen gives full credit for it to "a small handful of local leaders." The fact is that such widespread protests do not occur without impelling reasons. Here are some of them: After the cumulative effects of 10 years of unemployment, a more concerted drive against the unemployed began after last November's elections when 300,000 workers were dropped from W. P. A. rolls. Next, early in 1939, noncitizens, widows with children, and old-age pensioners were dropped from the rolls.

In recent weeks the attack on W. P. A. workers reached a peak.

pensioners were dropped from the rolls.

In recent weeks the attack on W. P. A. workers reached a peak. Under the leadership of reactionaries, Congress passed a cut of $800,000,000 from last year's figures. An inadequate security wage was substituted for the prevailing or union wage. Then came the Woodrum amendments including the 30-day lay-off of all W. P. A. employees of 18 months standing; and the W. P. A. administration made it clear that those dropped have a slim chance of reemployment. Finally the new act called for a slash in monthly wages of over 1,000,000 workers in the North and West.

THREE MORE BLOWS

As the national protest demonstration grew, came three more

As the national protest demonstration grew, came three more blows in succession, the announcement that all those away from their jobs for 5 days would be dropped from the rolls; that striking W. P. A. workers would be denied relief; and then the press campaign that: You can't strike against the Government.

No wonder that the W. P. A. workers felt desperate and that the entire labor movement joined hands in protesting this attack against the American standard of living.

The Minneapolis labor movement took quick and effective action to organize and protest locally. On Thursday, July 6, the day after the spontaneous walk-out began, the Minneapolis Building and Construction Trades Council officially endorsed the protest strike. The various building-trades unions voted unanimously to remain on strike and to refuse to work for anyone at less than union wages. The Minneapolis Building Trades Council, like many sister councils throughout America, has not receded from this position and is determined to defend the union wages and conditions won during their 50 years of struggle. and conditions won during their 50 years of struggle.

ENDORSED THE ACTION

On Friday morning, July 7, the policy committee of the Minneapolis Central Labor Union endorsed the action of the Building Trades Council. In the next day or two the Hennepin County Workers Alliance, the Federal Workers section of Local No. 544, the C. I. O., and the Minneapolis Central Labor Union all voted officially to endorse and support the protest strike called by the Minneapolis Building Trades Council and their demand that the Woodrum amendments be repealed and that union wages be restored stored.

In the light of these facts, what happens to the claim of the Governor that a small handful of men in Mineapolis started the walk-out, and that the strikers had no chance to vote on the strike? The truth is that the overwhelming majority of the Minneapolis labor organizations having members on W. P. A. voted to join the strike. The truth is that the antiunion and pauperizing provisions of the Woodrum relief act had identical social repercussions throughout the country. If there was a conspiracy, it was a conspiracy of the paid political representatives of big business to put over an attack upon the wages and living standards of the American people.

Governor Stassen's second charge is that the Minneapolis labor

Governor Stassen's second charge is that the Minneapolis labor movement has elected a leadership that is thoughtless, unsound, and vicious. Thereby he implies that Minneapolis workers would be wise to desert this leadership. Minneapolis is among the best unionized cities in the entire country and, Governor Stassen, it will remain so. All the benefits of organization come to the workers and unemployed of Minneapolis because they have organized under this leadership whom the Governor accuses of being thoughtless and unsound

GREAT LOSS AND INJURY

In his third charge the Governor, in a pious tone, accuses the Minneapolis labor leadership of causing great loss and injury to the W. P. A. workers and with placing 10,000 men and women in dire need.

who is it that is injurying the workers of Minneapolis and Minnesota and placing them in dire need? Is it the Minneapolis labor movement that works untiringly to protect labor and win for it a greater share of the good things of life? Or is it the connivers in Congress who pushed through the last-minute relief bill that violated the pledges these Congressmen had made to the people, that slashed the wages of W. P. A. workers, lengthened their hours, and promises to throw 1,500,000 of them out of employment off W. P. A. Come to think of it, it is passing strange that there are any unemployed persons in this State, for did not Governor Stassen promise to create jobs in private industry that would absorb the unemployed? Did he not promise the assembled workers on the capitol steps on June 2 that no one would go hungry in Minnesota?

WHERE ARE THOSE JOBS?

Where are these jobs you were going to create for the youth and unemployed, Governor Stassen? And is it not true, Governor, that while you are making charges against a group of Minneapolis labor leaders, that during the past week you have had a delegation of labor leaders from the Minnesota Federation of Labor, along with Mr. Zander from the Minnesota rederation of Labor, along with Mr. Zander from the Government employees' national union, calling upon you for a hearing on wholesale discriminatory dismissals of their members during recent days, as well as the charges leveled at your highway department for wage cutting and wholesale lay-offs by the St. Paul Trades and Labor assembly and the State machinists

What happened to your pledge to care for the unemployed? Your legislature slashed almost $2,000,000 from State relief.

Who injured and who now injures the unemployed of this State? Is it the union and unemployed organizations that fight for decent wages and job security for the workers and decent relief for the unemployed—or the sanctimonious politicians who slyly pretend to be a friend of the workers, only to knife them in the back with slashes in relief, with one-sided and oppressive labor laws, and with employer-inspired attacks on organized labor. The labor movement is opposed to any form of strike wherever it is possible to prevent it, and only as a last resort do we strike.

This situation was forced upon us by a policy of provocation herein set forth.

INCRIMINATING MATERIAL

Why do you seek to mislead the public to believe that the transcripts of your conference with the joint labor committee contained incriminating material? Governor Stassen, why don't you inform the public of the truth, that it was the labor committee which demanded that a stenographic report of the conference be made and forwarded to President Roosevelt, Colonel Harrington, and Attorney General Murphy? We challenge you to make public through the press the entire contents of this stenographic report. It contains the impressive testimony on the police brutality against a peaceful picket line. Why didn't you inform the public that the labor committee demanded that the city council undertake an unbiased investigation into the brutal police attacks that resulted in the death of Emil Bergstrom and the wounding of a score of innocent people? score of innocent people?

Is it not true, Governor Stassen, that on "bloody Friday night" there were no pickets either on the sidewalk nor on the street in front of the sewing project at the time the police opened fire upon the people clear across the street? Is it not true that squads of police crossed the street into private property and there shot down the people who had the permission to remain on that property with their care?

FALSELY CHARACTERIZE

Why do you attempt to falsely characterize this W. P. A. strike as a revolt against the Government and a threat to democracy, when the fact is there would have been no more trouble than during previous W. P. A. demonstrations had not the entire previous W. P. A. administrative policy been sharply reversed in this instance? The W. P. A. nationally, up until this present situation, had pursued a policy of closing down temporarily any W. P. A. polymers a leaver dispute conversed. Recause of this policy there had pursued a policy of closing down temporarily any W. P. A. job where a labor dispute occurred. Because of this policy, there never was any violence or disturbance during previous protests and strikes on W. P. A. That policy always created the opportunity for calm deliberation which makes easier the settlement of disputes. How can you speak of the cooperative spirit of Mr. Glotzbach? With whom did he cooperate when he reversed this national policy without prior announcement? Or when he called for police protection to help him reverse it, or when he failed to shut down the affected jobs and call for a meeting with the responsible labor officials, as was the W. P. A. custom? Is this the spirit of cooperation you praise? Had Glotzbach done his duty, there would have been no bloodshed in this strike.

You are 100 percent wrong on another of your charges when you say that none of the strike leaders had been on W. P. A. themselves. All of the leaders of Local No. 544, Federal Workers' Section, are, or have been, on W. P. A.; and the same thing is true of the Workers Alliance.

VICIOUS FOLLY

Governor Stassen charges that the joint committee surrendered in the strike, that they falled, that they met the stone wall of their own vicious folly. We in the labor movement are accustomed to hearing the claims of employers and their representatives that strikes are failures. But the labor movement has a different way of looking at these things. At any rate, the Governor and Mayor Leach should get together in their estimate of the protest strike, since both belong to the same political party and supported each other in the State and city elections. The Governor charges the strike was an abject failure, but Mayor Leach estimates that the Federal Government has made a disgraceful surrender to the W. P. A. strikers. Which shall you call it, gentlemen, a failure or success?

Governor Stassen, you ended your attack on the Minneapolis labor movement by stating that: As for yourself, you disapproved of certain provisions of the 1940 Relief Act.

During the past year you have continued to speak of your sympathy for organized labor and the unemployed. Even while your administration cut the State relief budget, you said you protected the unemployed. Even while your labor law bound the hands of organized labor and encouraged the employers to break down the living standards of the masses, you professed your friendship for labor.

FALSE CHARGES

We submit that your judgment is completely erroneous, specifically and generally, because you have directed insinuations and false charges against the very people in this situation who are the stanchest and most reliable defenders of the real public interests—the working people and their unions—and that you have condoned and helped to cover up the real culprits who are responsible for the loss of wages of the W. P. A. workers, the violence, bloodshed, and deaths caused by them in this situation—that is, those who launched the attack and would still drive it further.

As for your unfounded insinuations to the Federal grand jury, Governor Stassen, the Minneapolis labor movement has nothing to fear from any honest investigation no matter what its source. But we are determined to protect the legal rights of our members

But we are determined to protect the legal rights of our members and defend them against any attempted frame-ups.

In this, as in all previous W. P. A. demonstrations here, the Minneapolis labor movement has recognized and declared that the main function of such demonstrations is to direct public attention to the unjustifiable problems of unemployment. That was our prime purpose. The fight for jobs at union wages and conditions, and for decent relief standards for those who have no jobs, did not begin nor end with the W. P. A. strike in Minneapolis. The struggle, by the logic of events, now takes other channels. There must be no adjournment of Congress until the vicious Woodrum provisions are repealed.

TUESDAY, July 18, 1939.

STATEMENT ON THE W. P. A. SITUATION BY DAVID LASSER, NATIONAL PRESIDENT OF THE WORKERS ALLIANCE OF AMERICA

The actions which have taken place since the Woodrum Relief act went into effect were the result of the justifiable resentment of W. P. A. workers, labor generally, and all progressive people.

W. P. A. workers, labor generally, and all progressive people.

These actions were not strikes against the Government. They were legitimate protests of needy citizens against being forced to labor at conditions that degraded, humiliated, and starved them. They were protests against the law foisted on us by the antilabor GARNER-WOODRUM-TABER clique dominanant in Congress. These actions, in our opinion have served to focus public attention on the injustices in the relief act and the need for immediate remedial legislation. Such legislation must (1) restore the prevailing hourly wage, (2) prevent cuts in the already inadequate monthly pay checks, (3) prevent arbitrary lay-offs of needy W. P. A. workers, (4) restore the arts projects.

We are culminating our actions in Nation-wide protests demon-

We are culminating our actions in Nation-wide protests, demonstrations, and parades on Thursday, July 20, in all cities where the Workers Alliance is organized.

At the moment we consider the urgent need is to focus public At the moment we consider the urgent need is to focus public attention on the necessity for Congress to act. Some honest Congressmen have expressed the opinion that job stoppages were embarrassing their efforts to have the present law changed. Some reactionaries have raised a false issue of "strikes against the Government" as an excuse for their not supporting improvements in the act. Some public officials, such as Mayor Leach, of Minneapolis, have sought to create a reign of terror, to try to provoke violence, and to stir public hysteria by ridiculous charges against labor.

Our sole concern is to protect the welfare of the millions of unemployed and W. P. A. workers and to take such practical action as will change the law in their behalf.

Because we want to provide every aid and cooperation for the friends of labor and the people in their efforts to have the law changed, because we do not wish to provide any aid and comfort for the enemies of labor or of the people, our national executive board has voted: (1) In cases where our own affiliates are leading work stoppages, the workers be asked to return to work temporarily under protest. (2) In cases where we are engaged in stoppages with other labor groups, we will recommend the temporary ending of such stoppages. In these cases, however, our groups will abide by the democratic decision of the groups we are working with. (3) To turn the full and undivided attention of the unemployed and W. P. A. workers upon the mobilizing of public opinion for changes in the law and to make Members of Congress aware of that onlyion that opinion.

We have been informed by Senator MURRAY that he does not consider our July 20 actions in any way detrimental to the cam-paign to change the relief act. We have his authority to inform paign to change the relief act. We have his authority to inform our membership that he and his group are sufficiently encouraged by the cooperation shown at least by the Workers Alliance of America to get ready to immediately push ahead vigorously for changes in the act. Now, we will have demonstrated the complete good faith of the Workers Alliance, it is up to Congress. As far as our activities are concerned, no further excuses can be made by Congress for not changing the iniquitous and unjust features of the relief act before it adjourns. If Congress fails to act, we will carry out our responsibility by taking every orderly action necessary to save the unemployed and W. P. A. workers from the awful suffering they will face.

carry out our responsibility by taking every orderly action necessary to save the unemployed and W. P. A. workers from the awful suffering they will face.

We hope in these efforts the administration will lend its support to the just grievances of labor. We believe that if the administration spokesmen had been as vigorous in defense of labor needs as they were in condemning the just protests of labor, we would be much further advanced toward a solution.

We hope also that some labor leaders may be induced to adopt a more progressive stand. Unfortunately, there were some who failed to give any support to efforts to improve the bill when it was in Congress and who are now wringing their hands or calling work stoppages. There are some who are opposed to the W. P. A. program and are using this situation as a pretext to destroy the W. P. A. program and discredit it in the eyes of labor. There are some whose only interest is to use this situation to make anti-New Deal propaganda instead of directing the main fire where it belongs—on Congress. There are some who are confusing the whole issue in the public mind by selfishly narrowing it to certain interests of a few instead of fighting for all the necessary demands of all W. P. A. workers. We have no intention to give aid or comfort to these people or to sacrifice the interests of the unemployed and W. P. A. workers to their plans.

We believe that if some people who now bitterly complain had joined with us in the National Right-to-Work Congress or in supporting the Murray-Casey bill, we would not have had this situa-joined with us in the National Right-to-Work Congress or in sup-porting the Murray-Casey bill, we would not have had this situa-tion upon us. We are still hopeful that labor can fully unite its forces upon a program which protects all labor.

[From Work] THE W. P. A. CRISIS

(By David Lasser, national president, Workers Alliance of America)

The 1940 Relief Act represents the greatest blow at American labor since the depression began. In its main provisions it would paralyze the organized workers in their fight to maintain wage standards; and by that, endanger the whole recovery movement. What are these "main provisions"?

Vinat are these "main provisions"?

1. The act does away with prevailing wage rates, and substitutes a 130-hour work month for all workers. This mean that not only will the skilled worker take a cut of 30 to 50 cents hourly, but the unskilled worker also takes a slash of 10 to 15 cents an hour in his meager pay. It puts the United States Government in the position of opening the door wide for wage cuts in all American industry.

Government in the position of opening the door wide for wage cuts in all American industry.

2. By attempting to "equalize wages" as between geographic regions, and by not providing more money with which to do this (actually, by providing less money) it makes necessary on August 31, cuts in the monthly security wages for 2,000,000 W. P. A. workers in the North and West. This second blow is not only at W. P. A. workers, but at all labor.

3. By the 18-month rotation provisions, between now and August 31, between 600,000 and 700,000 workers will get 403's and be thrown onto the labor market. Flooding the labor market with these hungry people, at a time when private employment is not increasing, will be a serious menace to the standards of workers with private jobs. workers with private jobs.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I wish to refer to a statement which portrays the situation of 112,310 Minnesota people dropped from employment in Minnesota industries. The statement is by Jay C. Hormel, one of the greatest and one of the most progressive businessmen in the State of Minnesota, head of a $60,000,000 business in our North Star State:

STATEMENT BY JAY C. HORMEL, CHAIRMAN, AMERICAN LEGION, DEPART-MENT OF MINNESOTA, COMMITTEE ON EMPLOYMENT STABILIZATION, AUSTIN, MINN., MARCH 22, 1939

Do you realize that last year 112,310 Minnesota people were laid off—were disemployed—were dropped from employment in Minnesota industries for a sufficiently long period of time to permit them to receive compensation checks under the Minnesota Unemployment Compensation Act?

Although these 112,310 people about whom we are talking did receive compensation checks from the State for their unemployment, it still is true that in general those checks were only half as much as the regular wages those people had been drawing, and in many cases they did not get a check each week they were off. Can you imagine the problems which those people had to face during their period of unemployment?

Do you realize how much these 112,310 people would be benefited if industry would, first, learn how and, second, take the trouble to stabilize employment?

I also wish to make reference, without placing it in the RECORD, to a document called Public Assistance, published by the Bureau of Research and Statistics, Division of Public Assistance Research, United States Government, stating that in the years 1933 to 1938 the public expenditures for assistance to persons in need in continental United States amounted to $12,900,000,000, or nearly $13,000,000,000 in those years. call that statement to the attention of the country. Was anything fundamental really done, except here and there? No enduring permanent program resulted from all this expenditure of the taxpayers' money, and we still have over 12,000,000 unemployed with us. That is not much of a solution. And we spent $13,000,000,000 fumbling over makeshifts. There must be an end to all this. Had this administration listened to the progressive program of the Farmer-Labor Party, a program which I have placed in the Congressional RECORD time after time, we would not now be sinking in the slough of despondency.

I wish also to call attention to the 1938 financial analysis of relief costs, board of public welfare, division of public relief, in my home city of Minneapolis, prepared by O. A.

Pearson, superintendent thereof.

I say to the Senate that before we adjourn we should look over the list of unfinished important and vital legislation and consider foreign affairs, which certainly are clouding the horizon of all nations, and see that we do not commit an error in adjourning at too early a date. So far as I am concerned, I am opposed to adjournment in this hour of

I also wish to make reference to a speech which I delivered on September 10, 1935; another on June 7, 1935; and another on April 8, 1939, on the W. P. A. and labor questions, all reported in the Congressional Record. On April 8, this year, I held the floor for more than 4 hours pleading the cause of labor against wage cuts and poverty. In the midst of untold wealth produced by our workers labor starves. I demand a just share of that wealth for the men and women of America.

PURCHASE AND DISTRIBUTION OF SURPLUS PRODUCTS OF THE FISH-ING INDUSTRY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5681) to authorize the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation to purchase and distribute surplus products of the fishing industry.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield. Mr. ANDREWS. If the Senator continues to yield, we shall never obtain consideration of the bill. I should like to see it considered this afternoon.

Mr. DANAHER. I am certain that unless we run into a night session we shall not be able to dispose of the bill today.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, there will be some discussion upon the bill. Much as I should like to comply with the wishes of the Senator from Florida, I do not think we should pass the bill this evening.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if there is to be extended discussion on the bill-

Mr. KING. There will be.

Mr. BARKLEY. In that event, I think probably we had better postpone consideration of the bill until tomorrow. It will be the unfinished business tomorrow.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, a very simple question is involved, as to whether or not canned-fish commodities are eligible for the benefits of the bill, which can be decided by the Senate in a relatively short time. In view of the announcement made by the leader, I am afraid that tomorrow we shall get caught in other legislation, and will not have an opportunity to complete consideration of the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, my suggestion is based upon information which the Senator from Utah has just given me. He has advised me that he intends to speak for an hour

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I suggest that we dispose of the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut. Then further consideration of the bill can be postponed.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President— Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. CONNALLY. I desire to make a motion. Will the Senator yield for that purpose?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator unless making the motion would take me off the floor,

Mr. CONNALLY. I rather think it would. I desire to make a motion to lav aside temporarily the pending bill and take up another bill. Mr. DANAHER. If the Senator from Florida is agreeable to having the bill laid aside while the Senator from Texas has the other bill taken up, I have no objection.

Mr. CONNALLY. I do not suppose the Senator from Florida is. That is an impossible condition. The bill to which I refer is a very important revenue bill, and it should be acted upon before we adjourn tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield for that purpose?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator from Florida would be willing to have his bill laid aside temporarily. I do not think the bill referred to by the Senator from Texas would take much time. I think it could be taken up and disposed of without affecting the bill of the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PEPPER. So far as I am concerned, I should not object to that.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Florida that I should not want to have the bill referred to by the Senator from Texas taken up in the absence of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. George].

Mr. CONNALLY. I am perfectly willing to have the Senator from Georgia here. He is somewhere around the Senate Chamber. Let us send for him.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I merely want it understood that the motion of the Senator from Texas will not displace the pending bill as being the unfinished business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, that is understood.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I move that the pending bill be temporarily laid aside without any prejudice to its standing, and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 7171, to amend section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, before the motion is acted upon I desire to say that there will be more than 1 day's discussion on that measure. It is very certain that we shall not adjourn tomorrow night if the bill comes up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. CONNALLY. I did not ask unanimous consent; I made a motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A motion if agreed to would displace the matter which is now pending before the Senate. and the Chair understood that the Senator from Texas did not want to do that.

Mr. CONNALLY. I did not desire to do it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator makes a motion to take up the bill referred to by him, and it is agreed to, it will displace the bill which is now pending.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I shall feel impelled to ask for a quorum unless the Senator from Georgia [Mr. George] can be present. I do not like to do so at this hour.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in view of the situation at this late hour, probably we had better let both bills go over until tomorrow.

Mr. CONNALLY. In view of the attitude of the leader, I shall not insist on my motion now; but I give notice that as soon as I can obtain the floor tomorrow I shall move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 7171.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Connecticut vield for a question?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator for a question.

Mr. AUSTIN. I ask the Senator from Texas if he will have his bill printed in the RECORD. There is no digest of the bill; and I have had difficulty in finding it or any descrip-

Mr. CONNALLY. I am sure a report has been filed on the bill. It is House bill 7171.

Mr. AUSTIN. Apparently there is a report, No. 1043; but I have not been able to find any digest of the bill.

Mr. CONNALLY. I think I can very briefly explain the purpose of the bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. I wish the Senator would explain it. Then we can be thinking about it.

Mr. CONNALLY. The purpose of the bill is as follows: Under section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, if the Senator has that act available, in case prices of agricultural products are raised domestically as the result of the operations of the A. A. A. or other Government agencies, the Tariff Commission is given authority to raise the tariff duties on those articles to keep them from coming in from foreign countries.

The section I have been speaking of is section 22. Under section 32 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act it is provided that 30 percent of the tariff revenues shall be set aside by the Secretary of Agriculture in a special fund for the purpose of increasing and stimulating the export of agricultural commodities. Under section 32 the Secretary of Agriculture has instituted export subsidies on wheat, which are already in operation, and have been for a considerable period. He has now instituted export subsidies on cotton, The purpose of the bill is to give the President, through the Tariff Commission, power to raise the rates on cotton textiles and other competitive commodities, and on raw cotton itself when we export it and give it a bounty, to keep it from coming back into the United States. That is the effect of the bill.

Under the present law the Tariff Commission has a limited authority in that regard, but only when the commodities are actually coming in. The bill spreads that authority a little, and says the Tariff Commission may act either when the commodities are coming in or when they are practically certain to come in, because we want to anticipate the return of the commodities. The bill is to protect the textile interests, and raw cotton, too, for that matter. It not only protects cotton, but it protects all other agriculural commodities within the compass of the two sections I have named

Mr. AUSTIN. Does it protect the producers of wool?

Mr. CONNALLY. I do not think it relates to wool, because wool already has a duty of 33 cents per pound on it.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, the tariff on wool has been cut 50 percent by a trade treaty.

Mr. CONNALLY. Only on manufactured wool; not on raw wool.

Mr. AUSTIN. I am including in my remarks manufac-

Mr. CONNALLY. I will say to the Senator that this bill applies only to the agricultural commodities which are dealt with under the A. A. A. I do not know whether the wool program comes under the A. A. A. or not.

Mr. AUSTIN. I thank the Senator for his explanation. Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Washington. Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Several months ago I submitted a resolution involving the continuation of the subcommittee of the Committee on Education and Labor which has had under consideration the subject of civil liberties. For some time that resolution has been in the hands of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate. Just a few minutes ago it was reported by the committee, and is now on the calendar. Under the rules of the Senate it cannot be considered until tomorrow.

There has been considerable discussion about a possible adjournment tomorrow night. We shall probably have before us for consideration tomorrow the third deficiency bill, which is of importance. The matter of the continuation of the civil-liberties subcommittee is something that cannot be permitted to go over until next year.

If it is to be properly considered, it must be considered before the Congress adjourns. A number of the Members of this body have indicated that they will not be willing to proceed to the completion of the consideration of the third deficiency bill until the Senate has considered and voted upon the resolution for the continuation of the work of the subcommittee. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley] what arrangements can be made now so that we may be assured that we shall not get into a iam tomorrow.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Washington that I contemplate no motion for sine die adjournment until this matter shall have been disposed of. It was suggested by a member of the Appropriations Committee that if the deficiency bill could be reported by noon tomorrow, we might finish that and other legislation and adjourn tomorrow night. Whether or not that is possible, only tomorrow night can tell; but I certainly would not hurry up an adjournment that would avoid the consideration of this resolution, with which, I will say, I am in entire sympathy. I do not know that we can make an arrangement now as to when it can be taken up tomorrow, because obviously we are going to have to adjourn or recess tonight with an unfinished bill before us; but I will cooperate fully for the consideration of the resolution at the earliest possible

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I should like to say that I appreciate very much the attitude and statement of the Senator from Kentucky, and, of course, shall be glad to comply with any request he makes; but before the consideration of the third deficiency bill is completed tomororw I should like to have some definite arrangement concerning the consideration of the resolution prior to the adjournment of the Congress. I will say that it will be extremely difficult to get through with the third deficiency bill until such an arrangement shall have been made.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President-

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky. Mr. BARKLEY. In view of the situation, I think we cannot finish tonight the bill which is before us, so it will go over as the unfinished business. I therefore move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Edward Gearing Kemp, of Michigan, to be the Assistant to the Attorney General.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. President, I ask that the nominations of John Kenna Kerwood to be postmaster at Ripley, W. Va., and Charles B. McCray to be postmaster at Webster Springs, W. Va., be recommitted to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I sincerely regret that there is opposition to the immediate confirmation of the West Virginia postmasters mentioned. But obviously any Senator can prevent any confirmation at this late day in the rapidly expiring session. Therefore, I refrain from interposing a manifestly futile objection to the pending request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations of postmasters other than the nomination of John Kenna Kerwood to be postmaster at Ripley, W. Va., and of Charles B. McCray to be postmaster at Webster Springs, W. Va., are confirmed en bloc.

IN THE ARMY

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, from the Committee on Military Affairs of the Senate I have reported favorably today a number of Army nominations, and I ask that they be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the request of the Senator from Texas is agreed to, and the nominations are confirmed en bloc. That completes the calendar.

RECESS

Mr. BARKLEY. As in legislative session, I move that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock a. m. tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 14 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Friday, August 4, 1939, at 11 o'clock a. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, AUGUST 3, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon,

Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., pastor of Gunton Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

Eternal Spirit, Thou who wert the God of our fathers, we rejoice that Thou art also the God of their succeeding generations. Hitherto Thou hast blessed us. Thy mercies are without number and the treasury of Thy goodness is infinite.

We pray that we may show forth our gratitude in lives of devotion. Fill our minds and hearts with those desires which Thou dost delight to satisfy. May we have such a love for Thy truth that we shall come to know the truth of Thy love.

Bless our President and all who are in positions of leadership and service in the life of our Republic. Give them wisdom to know and strength to perform the duties of their high calling.

May we be a Nation whose God is the Lord. Keep us in the vanguard of the upward march toward the final triumph of peace and righteousness.

In the name of the Prince of Peace, we pray. Amen.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON]?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman from Mississippi explain what these amendments do?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, before submitting the request, which is agreeable to the members of the Committee on Flood Control, I called a meeting of that committee, which considered the amendments adopted by the Senate. The members of the Flood Control Committee were substantially in agreement as to all of the amendments with the exception of one or two. The one amendment I refer to is the so-called Minton amendment, which provided that in the case of local flood-control projects in the Ohio Basin the President of the United States might, in his discretion, after he had investigated the matter and if he were satisfied that any town or city was not able to comply with the local contribution, reduce not to exceed 50 percent that local contribution. I may say a similar provision in the exact language of the Minton amendment appears in the act of August 28, 1937, in which act Congress authorized the expenditure of $24,877,000 for flood control in the Ohio Basin. In the exercise of that discretion the President of the United States followed the recommendation of the Chief of Engineers and it was only exercised in three cases, one at Paducah, Ky., and the amount that the President waived in that case was $160,000. In the second case it was exercised at Rockport, Ill., and the amount waived was $4,500. It was waived in a third case at Golconda, Ill., and the amount waived was $24,860.

In the act of June 28, 1938, we authorized additional local projects in the Ohio River Valley aggregating $50,300,000. In answer to the gentleman's inquiry, I take it, Mr. Speaker, that the only case where the President would likely be called upon to exercise this discretion would be at Jeffersonville, Ind., where the United States Government has a large War Department depot, in which as I am advised millions of dollars of war supplies are stored.

That property is not to be available for local taxation and would not be subject to taxation in order to provide the local contribution. In my judgment, if the President reduced the local contribution there, it would not be in excess of a few hundred thousand dollars at the outside. Moreover, it is my view and the view of the committee, that at the next session of Congress there should be a uniform yardstick adopted and this provision should be made applicable to all basins and to all projects, or else repealed.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. It should be one or the other. There is no question about that.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I agree with the gentleman. Before I called up this bill I submitted the request to and asked the Chief of Engineers to give me a report on each of the Senate amendments. I hold in my hand a letter from the Chief of Engineers which I expect to incorporate in my remarks as extended, in which he states the amendments are agreeable to him and he has no objection to any of them.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. These amendments have the uniform support of the gentleman's committee on both sides of the aisle?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Except as I have stated.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman if it is not a fact that the President has not yielded in any case unless there was some special reason?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. The gentleman is correct, and I have given not only the three cases but the amounts. The amount he yielded on in connection with these projects that cost some $25,000,000 amounted to about $189,000.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. May I say to the gentleman that I live in the Ohio Valley, as the gentleman knows. At this time there are a great many projects going on there and we have to pay the full amount in every case. So the idea should not go out that the Ohio Valley is getting anything. In the case of my own town we have paid every penny and this is true in the case of every place within a hundred miles. In this one town referred to, the Government has a great institution of its own and the people think the Government ought to contribute something.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. That is my understanding of the situation.

Mr. ENGLEBRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, as I understand, if there are any inequalities in the law with reference to other projects, the committee will at the next session of Congress endeaver to correct such situations?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Yes.

In extending my remarks at this point, under leave granted, I repeat the Committee on Flood Control is agreeable to the Senate amendments with one or two exceptions. The principal exception was in respect to the so-called Minton amendment, as I have stated. However, under a similar amendment in the act of 1937 the President did not waive any local contribution by 50 percent. The Committee on Flood Control in 1937, and again in 1938 and 1939, heard witnesses in advocacy of the policy of the Minton amendment. It applied, as I have stated, to authorizations in the act of August 28, 1937, amounting to $24,877,000, but the discretion was only exercised by the President in three cases and in no case did he reduce the local contribution by 50 percent. In the case of Paducah, Ky., a city of some 40.000 people—that was completely overflowed in 1937—the President waived 40 percent of the local contribution required by law and the amount waived was $160,000. Golconda the amount waived was 45.5 percent and the amount was $24,860. At Brookport he waived 32.6 percent and the amount was $4,500. The Flood Control Act of June 28, 1938, authorized $50,300,000 for additional local protective works in the Ohio Basin and the Minton amendment would be applicable to this increased authorization just as an identical provision was applicable to the prior authorization of $24,877,000. The provision in 1937 was also inserted in the Senate. The Committee on Flood Control in the House has taken the view that a definite yardstick should be applied to all projects along all rivers. The committee intends to report a flood-control bill at the next session of Congress and it plans either to make the Minton amendment applicable to all local protective projects in all parts of the country or to repeal the same. It is also fair to say that the President has not waived the local contribution unless the waiver is recommended by the Chief of Engineers. There is only one case as I have stated where there will likely be a waiver and that is at Jeffersonville, Ind., where the United States Government has an Army depot and stores millions of dollars of Army equipment. The United States property is not subject to taxation to provide the local contribution and is one of the principal properties benefited by the flood-control project. It is not believed that the waiver at Jeffersonville will materially exceed the waiver that was made at Paducah.

The amendment in section 3a places the Buffalo Bayou, Tex., flood-control project for the protection of the city of Houston on an equality with flood-control projects approved in the Flood Control Act of June 28, 1938.

With deference, I desire to call attention to the fact that the Committee on Rivers and Harbors adopted this project in the rivers and harbors bill in the Seventy-fifth Congress. Public Document 685. It should have been considered by the House Committee on Flood Control. The acceptance of the amendment putting this project on an equality with other flood-control projects must not be construed as a precedent. Flood-control projects should not be included in river and harbor bills and navigation projects should not be included in flood-control bills, except as navigation is incidental to flood control.

The Senate amendment with respect to the Muskingum project does not change the authorization and is recommended by the Chief of Engineers.

The Senate inserted a new section 5 with respect to the approval of titles in the Muskingum project and in the Los Angeles project. The amendment was recommended by the Attorney General and approved by the Bureau of the Budget. At the time the bill was passed by the House no report had been received on a bill covering the subject matter that was pending before the Committee on Flood Control. The Flood Control Committee only reported items that were recommended by the Chief of Engineers on which favorable reports had been submitted.

The Senate inserted section 7 with respect to the Alamogordo Dam and Reservoir on the Pecos River. This project has been constructed. It is for multiple purposes. It is stated that there are flood-control benefits. The amendment authorizes the Chief of Engineers to report to Congress the amount allocable to flood control and authorizes the deduction of such amount in the assessment to be collected from property owners.

The Senate inserted a perfecting amendment to section 5 of the bill as it passed the House, which is section 6 as passed by the Senate, to the effect that the power and authority conferred in the Flood Control Act of June 23, 1928, and previously conferred upon the Federal Power Commission shall remain in full force and effect. This amendment in nowise changes the meaning of the section with respect to preliminary examinations and surveys. The language in the bill as it passed the House is substantially the identical language to give effect to the intent of Congress in exempting the Corps of Engineers from reorganization. As shown by colloquies on the floor of the House and Senate at the time the reorganization bill was under consideration, and particularly in the colloquy between the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] and myself, the exemption of the Corps of Engineers from reorganization carried with the exemption the exemption of the functions of the Engineer Corps and its head. It was definitely understood and intended by Congress that flood-control and river and harbor works should remain the function of the Engineer Corps, United States Army, and its head, the Chief of Engineers, to be administered under the direction of the Secretary of War and the supervision of the Chief of Engineers.

Certain powers were conferred upon the Federal Power Commission in the Flood Control Act of June 28, 1938. Section 5 as it passed the House expressly excepted the power conferred upon the Power Commission in the act of June 28. 1938, and otherwise by other laws conferred upon the Power Commission, and I quote from the language of section 5 as it passed the House:

Except as otherwise specifically provided by Congress.

I may also add that the House Committee on Flood Control not only agreed to the Senate amendments as herein stated but before submitting the request to concur in the Senate amendments I not only followed the action of the House Committee on Flood Control, including the ranking minority members of the committee, but I conferred with the distinguished minority leader of the House. We only agreed to the Senate amendments after we were advised that they were not objectionable to the Chief of Engineers, and under leave I include the following letter from the Chief of Engineers, Maj. Gen. J. L. Schley, to me, dated August 2, 1939, to wit:

> WAR DEPARTMENT, Office of the Chief of Engineers, Washington, August 2, 1939.

Hon. WILL M. WHITTINGTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. My Dear Judge Whittington: I have carefully considered the amendments made by the Senate in the pending flood-control bill and, in accordance with your request, I am pleased to give you my views thereon.

The first amendment added by the Senate Committee on Commerce, consists of broadening language for the Muskingum project which will enable this Department to make immediate payment of funds already appropriated pursuant to authority contained in the Flood Control Act approved June 28, 1938. A further amendment would authorize the Attorney General to accept title to lands, easements, and rights-of-way upon a certificate of title from the district concerned and as guaranteed by it. This amendment has the approval of the Attorney General. The final amendment authorized the Department to make a study of the Alamogordo Dam and Reservoir on the Pecos River, N. Mex., to determine how much of the cost of that reservoir is chargeable to flood control, it being understood that no appropriation of flood-control funds is contemplated. In addition, there were added on the floor of the Senate, amendments which are discussed as follows:

One to place the Buffalo Bayou, Tex., project, previously authorized by Public, No. 685, Seventy-fifth Congress, under the conditions of the Flood Control Act approved June 28, 1938. A further amendment safeguarding the interests of the Federal Power Commission, in accordance with authorities previously conferred. After careful consideration, upon your specific request, I can see no reason why the amendments above outlined are objectionable.

There have also been added several authorities to make preliminary examinations and surveys. The examinations and surveys have been considered in each instance and are found desirable.

nave been considered in each instance and are found desirable.

The final amendment proposed on the floor of the Senate would operate to authorize the President to waive up to 50 percent of the estimated cost of lands, easements, and rights-of-way for cities or towns in the Ohio River Basin found to be financially unable to bear the full cost. This amendment opens a question of policy for determination by the Congress. However, I don't feel justified in interposing any objection to the extension to the communities in the Ohio River Basin of a similar policy authorized by the Flood Control Act approved August 26, 1937.

Very truly yours.

Very truly yours,

J. L. SCHLEY, Major General, Chief of Engineers.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1899) to provide for the detail of a commissioned medical officer of the Public Health Service to serve as assistant to the Surgeon General.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, are you putting on another assistant to the Surgeon General? Mr. BULWINKLE. To the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service.

Mr. RICH. Is this putting on a new assistant?

Mr. BULWINKLE. It is just giving the man the rank provided in the measure. This is the unanimous report of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

The purpose of this bill is to provide for the detail of a commissioned medical officer of the Public Health Service to serve as assistant to the Surgeon General and be Acting Surgeon General in the absence of the Surgeon General. The bill was strongly recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury and has the approval of the Bureau of the Budget. It was unanimously reported by the Senate Committee on Finance and passed in the Senate by unanimous consent.

The expansion of the work of the Public Health Service has imposed administrative responsibilities upon the Surgeon General which are more than he alone can meet. In recent years two additional administrative divisions have been added to the Bureau, namely, the Division of Mental Hygiene and the Division of Venereal Diseases, and many new functions have been imposed upon the Service by statute. There is a distinct need that statutory provision be made for the detail of an experienced administrative officer to assist the Surgeon General in his work.

As a temporary expedient, the Surgeon General has removed from one of the administrative divisions the Assistant Surgeon General most experienced in the administrative work of the Service and has assigned to him a share of the responsibility and work devolving upon the office of the Surgeon General. However, this officer is unable to assume the duties and responsibilities of the Surgeon General in his absence because of the provision contained in the act of July 1, 1902. that the Assistant Surgeon General, senior in total Public Health Service, shall assume the duties of the Surgeon General in his absence. Consequently the duties of the Surgeon General in such an instance devolve upon a division chief who is relatively unfamiliar with them and who is fully occupied with duties of his own.

The proposed legislation will remedy this situation by enabling the Surgeon General to detail to the position of assistant to the Surgeon General established by the bill a commissioned medical officer possessed of the experience and qualifications to enable him to aid the Surgeon General in his work and who, in the absence of the Surgeon General, can assume the duties and responsibilities of that officer. The bill will permit a new Surgeon General to select an administrative assistant of his own choosing and will allow conformance with the practice of the Public Health Service of detailing commissioned medical officers for service in Washington for periods of not longer than 8 years.

The total increase in cost as a result of this legislation will not exceed $300 per annum. The maximum salary and allowances of the new position will be $7,500 per year, which is only $300 in excess of that of the existing grades of Assistant Surgeon General and Medical Director from which the officer detailed to the new position will be selected. The bill does not increase the number of commissioned officers in the Public Health Service and the position vacated by the officer detailed to serve as assistant to the Surgeon General will remain open while he is thus serving.

The increase in salary will be only $300 over that of the existing grades of Assistant Surgeon General and medical director. The maximum salary and allowances of these grades is $7,200. The maximum salary and allowances of the new position will be $7,500. It is contemplated that the officer selected for this position will be from a $7,200 grade.

The bill does not increase the number of commissioned officers in the Public Health Service. Congress places a numerical limitation on the number of commissioned officers in the annual appropriation act. No increase in the number of commissioned officers will be requested on account of S. 1899.

The officer who will serve as Assistant to the Surgeon General under the provisions of S. 1899 will be selected by the Surgeon General from the regular commissioned corps on the basis of experience and general fitness for the position. The position which he vacates to become Assistant to the Surgeon General will remain open while he is thus serving, and upon the expiration of his term of appointment as Assistant to the Surgeon General he will return to the same position which he would have occupied had he not been so appointed. This system is applicable to an officer who is appointed by the President to serve for a time as Surgeon General and to officers who are appointed by the Surgeon General to serve at his pleasure as chiefs of the administrative divisions and designated as Assistant Surgeons General while so serving. These provisions are by regulations promulgated by the Secretary of the Treasury after approval by the President. The positions of Surgeon General and Assistant Surgeon General are established by act of Congress. Similarly, the proposed position of Assistant to the Surgeon General would be established by S. 1899.

Numerical replacements of officers in any grade and any length of service who may die or otherwise vacate their positions can be made only by employing new officers entering at the foot of the lowest and entering grade. This is specified by the act of April 9, 1930, which provides that the conditions of promotion, pay, and allowances of commissioned officers of the Public Health Service shall be the same as for commissioned officers of the Medical Corps of the Army.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill (S. 1899), as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there shall be in the Public Health Service a commissioned medical officer of the Public Health Service, detailed by the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service, who shall be known as the Assistant to the Surgeon General, and who shall perform such duties as the Surgeon General may prescribe and shall act as Surgeon General during the absence or disability of the Surgeon General or in the event that there is a vacancy in the office of the Surgeon General. The Assistant to the Surgeon General, while serving as such Assistant, shall have a rank in the Public Health Service which shall correspond to that held by a brigadier general in the United States Army, and shall be entitled to the same pay and allowances as a brigadier general in the Army.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL ADVISORY HEALTH COUNCIL MEMBERS

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1540) to adjust the compensation of the members of the National Advisory Health Council not in the regular employment of the Government, with a committee amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to have the gentleman from North Carolina explain what this is.

Mr. BULWINKLE. This bill is to provide that the National Advisory Health Council, which was established in 1900, be allowed $25 per day. This will entail an additional expense of $540 to the Government. These doctors come from various parts of the United States and this measure puts them in line with the others.

The purpose of this bill is to authorize an increase in the compensation of those members of the National Advisory Health Council not in the regular employment of the Government. The National Advisory Health Council is an advisory board for the Public Health Service. The council consults with the Surgeon General relative to investigations to be inaugurated by the Public Health Service and the methods of conducting such investigations, and advises the Surgeon General in respect to public-health activities. It is composed of 14 members, 4 of whom are ex officio and serve without additional compensation. The 10 members not in the regular employment of the Government receive under existing law enacted over 37 years ago-section 5 of the act of July 1, 1902-compensation of $10 per day while serving in conference, together with allowance for actual and necessary traveling and hotel expenses. Under the bill these members would, while in conference, receive, instead of $10 per day, compensation at a rate to be fixed by the Federal Security Administrator not to exceed $25 per day. Members of the National Advisory Cancer Council, a similar organization, receive under the provisions of the National Cancer Institute Act, approved August 5, 1937, compensation at the rate of $25 per day during the time spent in attending meetings and for time devoted to official business. It would seem only proper that there be authority to fix the compensation of members of the National Advisory Health Council on the same basis, since no difference exists between the members of the two councils either in their reputation and scientific standing or in the quality of the service rendered.

The bill would also permit the utilization of the services of council members outside of conference but in connection with conference matters, and authorize payment for such services at the same rate of compensation that they would receive while in conference. At times problems arise in which the advice of only one or two members of the council specially conversant with the subject matter is required. This may, for example, necessitate a visit to a field station where the work is carried on or the critical review of a scientific report. It is believed that work of this kind should not be done without remuneration.

The Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce reported the bill with amendments which provide for the fixing of the compensation of members of the National Advisory Health Council in an amount not to exceed $25 per day by the Federal Security Administrator rather than by the Secretary of the Treasury, as is provided in the bill as passed by the Senate. These amendments are desirable because of the transfer on July 1, 1939, of the Public Health Service from the Treasury Department to the Federal Security Administration, pursuant to reorganization plan No. I submitted to Congress by the President on April 25, 1939.

The total estimated annual expenditures under the bill will be $1,650, which will represent an increase of $990 per annum over existing expenditures in this connection. This estimate is based on the expectation of two regular meetings each year of the council totaling 3 days in all—one of 1 day and one of 2 days—which will be attended by all 10 nongovernmental members of the council, and on the use of 6 nongovernmental members of the council an average of 6 days each per year outside of conference.

It is estimated that the additional cost will be about $990 per annum.

There are 14 members of the council. Only 10 of these are affected. The other 4 are ex officio and receive no per diem allowance.

There are two meetings each year totaling 3 days.

The present cost of 10 members at these meetings at $10 per day is $300.

The cost at the proposed rate of $25 per day will be $750. The additional cost of this item is therefore $450.

In addition to the foregoing it may be necessary to utilize the services of six of the members for an additional 6 days.

At the old rate of $10 a day this would cost $360.

At the new rate of $25 a day it will cost $900.

The additional cost of this item is therefore $540.

The total additional cost will therefore be: Item No. 4, $450; item No. 5, $540, or a total of $990.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the committee amendments.

And on page 2, line 2, strike out the words "three months" and insert "six months'."

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understand if this is passed it only extends the time for 60 days for an applicant to make his final payment of the fee to the Department of Commerce.

Mr. SIROVICH. The old law provided that the man must pay his fee within 6 months. The bill that the House passed provided for 3 months. The Senate amendment provides that it shall remain at 6 months, and we have agreed to that.

Mr. RICH. In other words, the bill just gives him an extension of time for the payment of the fees.

Mr. SIROVICH. Yes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were concurred in and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimcus consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill, H. R. 6747, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Senate amendment.

SEIZURE AND FORFEITURE OF VESSELS, ETC.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 6556) to provide for the seizure and forfeiture of vessels, vehicles, and aircraft used to transport narcotic drugs, firearms, and counterfeit coins, obligations, securities, and paraphernalia, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill, H. R. 6556, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment. The Clerk will report the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, line 4, after "that" insert "(1) in the case of a railway car or engine, the owner, or (2) in the case of any other such vessel, vehicle, or aircraft."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object for the purpose of having the gentleman explain what the amendment does.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, the principal purpose of the amendment is to provide that in the case of a railroad, a railroad train cannot be forfeited by the Government unless the owner of the train knew it was carrying contraband.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. And what the gentleman seeks to amend is the bill respecting the importation of marihuana and guns and the usual implements of burglars?

Mr. ROBERTSON. That is the bill.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. And the Senate amends it so that a railroad car will not be confiscated?

Mr. ROBERTSON. Unless the owner of a railroad knew the car was hauling contraband.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I suppose the reason is because that was clearly beyond the comprehension of the law, confiscating a whole railroad for such dereliction.

Mr. ROBERTSON. A railroad has never yet been forfeited, and we think this amendment is rather immaterial. Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I agree with the gentleman.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. What about a ship? Suppose a purser is guilty of such a thing. Will you forfeit the whole thing?

Mr. ROBERTSON. No. Perhaps I had better read the language.

In the case of any other such vessel, vehicle, or aircraft, the owner or the master of such vessel, or the owner or conductor, driver, pilot, or other person in charge of such vehicle or aircraft was at the time of the alleged illegal act a consenting party or privy thereto.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION APPROPRIATION

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I have the following telegram from C. A. Buettel, the president of the Colorado Farm Bureau Federation:

BURLINGTON, Colo., August 3, 1939.

Congressman John A. Martin, Washington, D. C.:

The error in failure to include in the deficiency bill $119,000,000 will be the wrecking of farm prices. We urge every effort be made to correct this mistake.

President, Colorado Farm Bureau.

I have sent the farm leader the following answer:

AUGUST 3, 1939.

Mr. C. A. BUETTEL,
President, Colorado Farm Bureau, Burlington, Colo.:

The Commodity Credit Corporation appropriation amendment The Commodity Credit Corporation appropriation amendment carried in Committee of the Whole on a voice vote 95 to 94. On teller vote it was defeated 116 to 110. Under the rules no defeated amendment can be voted on in the House. A motion was ready to recommit the bill with instructions to report it back carrying the appropriation. This motion was forestalled by Mr. Tarer, of New York, a leader of the Republican-Democratic coalition now in control of the House, who was entitled to recognition and who offered a motion to recommit the bill with instructions to strike out a minor surveying expenditure of $100,000. It was a purely parliamentary move to prevent a favorable roll call vote on the appropriation. I regard the Commodity Credit Corporation appropriation as the I regard the Commodity Credit Corporation most beneficial of all farm-aid expenditures.

JOHN A. MARTIN, M. C.

And also the following telegram from the Farmers Union and others stressing the vital necessity of the appropriation:

ST. PAUL, MINN., August 2, 1939.

Hon. John A. Martin,

House Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

We are amazed at the decision of the House Committee on Apwe are amazed at the decision of the House Committee on Appropriations in disproving the deficiency appropriations of $119,-000,000 for Commodity Credit Corporation. This would definitely eliminate the corn-loan program and eventually destroy the wheat-and rye-loan programs if the Appropriations Committee's position should be sustained by the Congress. Without the loan programs for these three commodities they would hit an all-time low price in history. The result of such a price debacle would envelop several hundred thousand more farm families into the cataclysm of bankhundred thousand more farm families into the cataclysm of bankruptcy. Attempts to balance the Budget at such a cost is in no sense a move of economy. Admittedly the present farm programs for price and income are inadequate and incomplete, but that is no justification for abandoning the present props to hold up farm prices. We hope the House of Representatives will override the decision of the Appropriations Committee.

NATIONAL FARMERS UNION,
NATIONAL FEDERATION OF GRAIN COOPERATIVES
WHEAT CONSERVATION CONFERENCE,
M. W. THATCHER, Legislative Representative.

I regard this as the most beneficial bit of farm aid the Appropriations Committee and the House have ever considered, and it was asked for in the President's Budget. [Applause.]

I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PURCHASE OF BEER ON CREDIT BY RETAILERS-VETO MESSAGE (H. DOC. NO. 467)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following veto message from the President of the United States, which was read by the Clerk:

To the House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, H. R. 5137, an act "to prohibit the purchase of beer on credit by retailers in the District of Columbia." So far as I can recollect, I know of no legislation which has ever undertaken to order that some special kind of industrial product be sold by the manufacturer solely for cash. To establish the principle that retailers must pay cash for any special article opens the door to similar legislation, not only for the District of Columbia but for the entire country, whereby the Congress could select this, that, or the other product and command that the manufacturer thereof cease selling it on credit.

I understand that this bill is urged by brewers because they have not had wholly favorable results from selling beer in the District of Columbia to retailers by the usual credit procedure. This bill would allow whisky to continue to be sold on credit. The question of unfavorable experience on the part of the brewers seems to me to be wholly a matter that lies within their own selling practices. They should continue to sell only to such retailers as they have had good experience with. That is the usual custom adopted by manufacturers throughout the Nation.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, August 3, 1939.

The SPEAKER. The objections of the President will be spread at large upon the Journal.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I move that the message and the accompanying bill be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia and ordered printed.

The motion was agreed to.

MINIMUM AGE (SEA) CONVENTION—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 466)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read by the Clerk, and, together with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries and ordered printed:

To the Congress of the United States of America:

To fulfill the obligations of this Government under the Minimum Age (Sea) Convention (Revised), 1936, I transmit herewith for the favorable consideration of the Congress the enclosed report from the Secretary of State and the accompanying draft bill to implement the Convention.

This bill was prepared by an interdepartmental committee after careful consideration of the questions involved. The purpose of the proposed bill is to establish minimum standards for the employment of minors on American vessels comparable to the standards heretofore adopted by the Congress for the purpose of eliminating interstate traffic in the products of child labor. These standards consist in a basic minimum age of 16 years for employment on small vessels and a minimum age of 18 years for employment on large vessels and in certain other maritime employments considered to be particularly hazardous or detrimental to the health and wellbeing of minors of such ages.

I heartily recommend enactment of this proposed legislation, for it will extend still further our frontiers of social progress by erecting additional safeguards against the employment of the youth of our Nation at immature ages.

Inasmuch as the Convention heretofore ratified by the Government of the United States will become effective for the United States on October 29, 1939, it is a matter of great importance that legislation be enacted at this session of the Congress.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 21, 1939.

THE HOUSING BILL

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I do this for the purpose of making clear the very wide support for the housing bill that exists in my section of the country.

I have in my hand telegrams from the City Council of Los Angeles; from the chief of the Division of Immigration and Housing of the State of California; from the director of the housing authority of the city of Los Angeles; from the chairman of the Committee on Social Legislation of the City of Los Angeles; from the Motion Picture Democratic Committee; from State conference of the bricklayers, stonemasons, and plasterers unions; the district council of carpenters; the plumbers' union; and from a number of other organizations and persons of similar importance, all urging the adoption of the rule and passage of this housing bill.

I also have seen a telegram from the legislative chairman of the Farmers' Union of America, expressing strong support for this legislation; and I hope earnestly that it will be passed. I know that arguments will be made against some of the financial features of the housing program. They are the same arguments that can be made against the financing by the method of bond sales of any project or construction program whatsoever. I have an amendment which I shall offer at the proper time which I am convinced will answer those arguments. It is explained on pages 10604 and 10605 of the RECORD for July 31.

I think it is important for the Members of the House to realize that a vote for or against the rule is a vote for or against the bill.

TRANS-ATLANTIC AIR SERVICE—CHICAGO VIA SHEDIAC

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, next Wednesday, August 9, the United States representatives will meet with the representatives of the Canadian Government in an international conference at Ottawa to consider the general subject of airtransportation services between the respective countries.

It would be a forward step in the development of trans-Atlantic air service if a direct air route were inaugurated between Chicago and Shediac, New Brunswick, and thence to Botwood, Newfoundland, where the Pan American Clippers take off for Ireland. I am accordingly urging our Civil Aeronautics Authority to make this proposal one of the matters for consideration at the Conference at Ottawa next Wednesday.

The only regular trans-Atlantic service now in operation is that conducted by the Pan American Airways, Inc. It has two routes. The one known as the northern route extends from New York via Shediac, New Brunswick, and Botwood, Newfoundland, to Foynes, Ireland, and London, England. The other, known as the southern route, extends from New York via the Azores and Lisbon, Portugal, to London or Marseilles, France.

At the present time mail and passengers from Chicago go something like 710 miles by air to New York City for trans-Atlantic transportation. It is, as will be readily seen by a mere glance at the map, a circuitous route. Mileage, time, and money could be saved by the inauguration of a direct route out of Chicago across Canada to Shediac, New Brunswick, and Botwood, Newfoundland.

Mr. Speaker, there are several possible routes out of Chicago across Canada, instead of to New York City, that could be followed:

First. From Chicago direct to Botwood, Newfoundland-1,626.5 miles.

Second. From Chicago to Shediac, New Brunswick, and thence to Botwood, Newfoundland-1,651.5 miles.

Third. From Chicago to Detroit, to Toronto, to Ottawa, to Montreal, and thence to Botwood, Newfoundland—1,661 miles.

Fourth. From Chicago to Detroit, to Toronto, to Ottawa, to Montreal, to Shediac, and thence to Botwood, Newfoundland—1.681.5 miles.

Whichever of these four routes out of Chicago is adopted, it would be shorter than the present circuitous route across the United States to New York and thence north. I might say that of the four possibilities, the route from Chicago to Detroit, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, Shediac, and Botwood seems to be the most desirable. It has unlimited potentialities in developing air transportation service for the Midwest and far West to Europe.

It is hardly necessary to point out to this House that Chicago is the "hub" of the Nation. Like spokes in a wheel, railroad lines, air lines, and bus lines, from every direction across the continent, center in the great city of Chicago. The farmers of the great wheat and corn fields ship their products to its markets. It is the market for the fruit growers, the market for the cattle of the South and western prairies, and the center of manufacturing. In the Chicago area alone there are something like 10,000 manufacturing plants of national prominence.

In short, Mr. Speaker, a direct route of trans-Atlantic air transportation service out of Chicago may be said to be a line from the very heart of the Nation. And it should also be pointed out that the weather conditions in Chicago are excellent for flying purposes. The United States Department of Agriculture summary of Chicago records shows that during 1938 there were only 10 days of dense fog. The greatest daily range of temperature at Chicago in 1938 was 39 degrees.

I do urge, in the interest of developing and improving air transportation service, in the interest of economy and time, that my colleagues cooperate with me in an effort to inaugurate this proposed direct-route service out of Chicago to Europe. I have urged the Civil Aeronautics Authority to make this a subject for consideration at the Ottawa Conference this coming Wednesday. I am communicating with the various air lines now conducting service out of Chicago. And I earnestly solicit the full cooperation of my colleagues here in the House in advancing this proposal.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record on two different subjects.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to proffer two unanimous-consent requests: First, that I may be allowed to extend my remarks in the Record in response to a letter which I have just received from Gen. Frank T. Hines; second, to extend in the Record a resolution from the Military Order of the Purple Heart of the Department of Minnesota.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the requests of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

[Mr. Thorkelson addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. McARDLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks, as I will not have time on the rule. I hope we will determine whether this bill is really a slum-clearance proposition or whether it is what they sometimes call "pork." It seems to be another free gift from the Public Treasury.

I want to remind you: The Scotchman saw a sign "Free Air." He took so much that all four tires blew. [Laughter and applause.]

The SPEAKER. The Chair is not inclined at this juncture to recognize Members for any purpose except to extend remarks.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include therein an article from the Washington Post of July 27.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Speaker, I make a similar request. The SPEAKER. Without objection it is so ordered. There was no objection.

APPORTIONMENT OF REPRESENTATIVES IN CONGRESS

Mr. McLEOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do trust that Members will not ask to address the House at this time. I shall not object to the request of the gentleman who is on his feet, but we do have a matter that we want to bring up, and I would suggest that those gentlemen who want to speak wait until the legislative business of the day is taken care of. A great many Members are seeking recognition to call up House bills with Senate amendments, and I think the business of the session should come first. I trust, therefore, that no other Member will ask to proceed until we finish the business of the day.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. McLEOD. Mr. Speaker, I have asked for this time to call to the attention of the House a situation that will prevent reapportionment after the next census is taken if not corrected before the present Congress adjourns.

Section 22 of Public Act No. 13, Seventy-first Congress, which provides for the apportionment of Representatives in Congress, must be amended during the present Congress if the provisions of the Constitution providing for a redistribution of seats in the House of Representatives every 10 years are to be carried out.

H. R. 7348, the bill I introduced recently, if adopted, will provide the necessary amendments to this act.

Having received several inquiries relative to the purposes of this bill and the effect it will have on reapportionment, I wish to outline the reasons for amending section 22 of the above-mentioned act.

In enacting a reapportionment statute in 1929, it was the intent and desire of the Seventy-first Congress that thereafter reapportionment should be automatic. The situation existing during the 20-year period between the years 1910 and 1930, during which time Congress failed to provide for reapportionment, led to the enactment of an automatic reapportionment statute. In addition to this—and probably of more importance—the Constitution provides the authority and places upon Congress the duty of effecting reapportionment every 10 years.

However, section 22 of the present Reapportionment Act, if permitted to remain unchanged, will defeat the will of Congress and the demands of the Constitution.

The present law provides that-

On the first day, or within 1 week thereafter, of the second regular session of the Seventy-first Congress and of each fifth Congress thereafter, the President shall transmit to the Congress a statement showing the whole number of persons in each State—

And so forth. "Each fifth Congress thereafter"—that is the automatic clause referred to, with the Seventy-first Congress as a basis upon which to calculate the elapse of years. The fifth Congress after the Seventy-first is the Seventysixth. The second session of the Seventy-sixth Congress will convene in January 1940.

Since, therefore, the President's statement must be based on the "fifteenth and each subsequent decennial census of the population," and since the sixteenth decennial census will not commence until April 1940, 3 months after the time when the President's statement based on the sixteenth decennial census is scheduled to be transmitted to the second session of the Seventy-sixth Congress, no reapportionment can be effected. In short, the President will not have figures upon which to base his statement until approximately 1 year after the time his statement is required to be submitted under the existing statute.

H. R. 7348 corrects this anomalous situation. This bill amends section 22 (a) to read:

Within 4 weeks after the first regular session of the Seventy-seventh Congress and of each fifth Congress thereafter, the Presi-

And so forth, without further change in subsection (a) of section 22, with the exception of changing the decennial census from the fifteenth to the sixteenth.

There would be no need for this bill and the amendments it proposes had there been no amendment to the Constitution changing the order of congressional sessions. However, the enactment of the so-called Norris lame-duck amendment has caused a mix-up in dates and thrown congressional sessions out of order with respect to reapportionment. The originators of the present reapportionment statute, I being one, did not anticipate such an amendment to the Constitution and for that reason could not word the act to meet such a contingency.

Another question has been asked concerning H. R. 7348, as follows: "Why has subsection (b) of section 22 been amended to provide a 60-day limit within which Congress may enact a law apportioning Representatives?" again we have the Norris amendment changing the effect of the present reapportionment statute. Suffice it to say that before the adoption of this amendment to the Constitution, Congress convened in December of one year and adjourned on March 4 the following year. Section 22 (b) of the present statute provides:

If the Congress to which the statement required by subdivision (a) of this section is transmitted, fails to enact a law apportioning representatives among the several States, then each State shall be entitled, in the second succeeding Congress and in each Congress thereafter until the taking effect of a reapportionment under this act or subsequent statute, to the number of Representations. sentatives shown in the statement based on the method used in the last preceding apportionment. It shall be the duty of the Clerk of the last House of Representatives forthwith to send to the executive of each State a certificate of the number of Representatives to which such State is entitled under this section.

Before the passage of the lame-duck amendment, the report of the Clerk would be made to the States immediately after adjournment on March 4. However, at the present time, Congress convenes in January of each year and may continue the session into August, or even later. If any Congress, under the present statute, failed to enact a law apportioning Representatives the Clerk could not transmit the required certificate to the States until adjournment, which might be very late in the year. Since the great majority of State legislatures meet during the early months of the year, it is essential that they know definitely, or at least the latest date, when the certificate of the Clerk will

Mr. Speaker or Members of the House, I want to repeat, failure to enact such a time limit in the reapportionment statute will defeat the purpose of the Constitution and the desires of the Congress which adopted the present reapportionment statute.

AMENDMENT OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 6480) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what does this bill do?

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. This bill relates to the shipment of grain from small country elevators into the larger terminal warehouses. It does not cost the Government anything.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "Agricultural Adjustment Act," approved May 12, 1933, is amended by striking out the whole of subsection (5), section 8, title I, part 2, and substi-

ment Act," approved May 12, 1933, is amended by striking out the whole of subsection (5), section 8, title I, part 2, and substituting in lieu thereof the following:

"(5) No person operating a public warehouse for the storage of any basic agricultural commodity in the current of interstate or foreign commerce shall deliver any such commodity upon which a warehouse receipt has been issued and is outstanding without prior surrender and cancelation of such warehouse receipt, except that any person operating a country public grain warehouse or warehouses may, because of lack of sufficient space to accommodate all depositors, move storage grain out of such warehouse or warehouses to another warehouse for continuous storage, under such regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe. A nonnegotiable warehouse receipt shall be issued by the warehouseman to whom the grain was shipped, and said receiving warehouseman shall give such guaranty and shall store such grain under such regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe to assure delivery to the rightful owner of such grain in the amount, and of the kind, quality, and grade called for by his receipts. Any warehouseman who intends to ship grain while his original receipt is outstanding must recite in his receipt both the name and address of his warehouse as well as that of the warehouse to which the grain may be shipped under a that of the warehouse to which the grain may be shipped under a nonnegotiable bill of lading. Any person violating any of the provisions of this subsection shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000, or by imprisonment for not more than 2 years, or both. This act shall not be construed as amending or changing in any manner the United States Warehouse Act of August 11, 1916, as amended."

With the following committee amendments:

On page 1, strike out all of lines 4 and 5 and insert "approved May 12, 1933, as amended, is further amended by striking out the whole of section 8f, title I, part 2, and."
On page 1, line 9, strike out "(5)" and insert "Sec. 8f."
On page 2, line 18, after the word "shipped", insert "for further storage. All grain shipped under this section must be shipped."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time. was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDMENT OF THE HOUSING ACT

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH].

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 266. The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 266

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of S. 591, an act to amend the United States Housing Act of 1937, and for other purposes, and all points of order against said bill are hereby waived. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 3 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider without the intervention of any point of order the substitute committee amendment recommended by of order the substitute committee amendment recommended by of order the substitute committee amendment recommended by the Committee on Banking and Currency now in the bill, and such substitute for the purpose of amendment shall be considered under the 5-minute rule as an original bill. At the conclusion of such consideration the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any of the amendments adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or committee substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions. or without instructions.

Mr. SABATH. This not being a partisan matter, I do not believe the other side will want any time on the rule but will want to agree unanimously to the rule. Am I correct?

Mr. MAPES. I am afraid the gentleman's imagination is working overtime. We shall need all the time we can get.

Mr. SABATH. I think you will need all the time you can get. In view of that fact, Mr. Speaker, I yield the usual 30 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MAPES. I agree with the chairman of the committee that it is not a partisan matter, and I expect to yield part of my time liberally to Members on his side.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Michigan is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, this rule provides for 4 hours of general debate, the committee having added 1 hour to the original 3 hours requested. The rule makes in order the consideration of the housing bill passed by the Senate, one which probably for political reasons we will not waste a great deal of time trying to prevent passing. Notwithstanding what has been stated in some of the newspapers and by gentlemen who are opposed to this humane, needed legislation, I call attention to the fact that this bill will not cost the Government any money. The $800,000,000 provided will all be lent to States, counties, and municipalities who by special legislation have organized for the purpose of providing and constructing housing facilities for the poor people of the Nation, at the same time eliminating the slum sections, the crime-breeding sections of the communities.

This bill sets aside $200,000,000 for rural housing. Oh, I feel that there are some Members from rural sections who may say, "We do not need any," but I know of the demand that comes from people from every section of the country who do know and who have the interest of the people at heart. Right here I have telegrams from nearly every city and State that has passed special legislation asking and urging this aid for the needy. When I say that it will not cost the Government any money I say so because 11/2 percent of all the loans will remain with the Government to take care of expenditures to the tune of about $40,000,000. In attempts to prejudice the minds of Members and the people of the country against this legislation it is being charged that it will cost $70,000,000 per year to carry out the commitments necessary under this bill. These charges are not only untrue but are in direct opposition to the facts. The actual facts are that this measure will actually cost the Government little in comparison to the great benefits. The money authorized will be lent to the housing authorities, the security for such loans being the housing projects themselves. All the bonds now being issued for projects under way are in great demand by the banks all over the United States. The new bonds likewise will be snapped up at favorable rates for the Government.

Under this bill the Government will get the money needed for the loans at an average cost of 1% percent and will loan it out on these developments at 3 percent, leaving the difference, 1%-percent profit, a substantial margin, which will materially reduce the $45,000,000 authorization in this bill for maintenance and operation. Thus the figures which have been quoted by multiplying the authorization by the 60-year life of the loans are but bugaboo or hokum computations.

The passage of this bill not only will provide decent housing for approximately 2,000,000 unfortunate slum dwellers but it will provide employment for nearly 500,000 workers; it will stimulate business-in fact, all industries-and at the same time will provide an outlet for the billions of dollars now reposing in the vaults of the banks throughout the country. I cannot, therefore, understand why there should be any objection to the bill unless it be, unfortunately, for political reasons; and I again say to my friends on both sides of the aisle that they will make a great mistake if they try to defeat the consideration of this bill, which is demanded by labor organizations, commercial organizations, and farm organizations throughout the United States. They have appealed for this legislation. The Senate has acted. Will you deny consideration in the face of their requests for it?

For years there has been complaint in the House that the Rules Committee has smothered legislation and deprived the membership from voting on it. Yet only yesterday, when you had an opportunity to vote on the farmers and wageearners relief bill you voted down the rule providing for its consideration. Today you have another opportunity, and the question is whether you will again refuse to even consider a bill carrying such vast benefits. Will you gentlemen from the rural and farming sections of our country refuse to legislate on the $200,000,000 authorization provided for in this bill to improve the housing conditions of the poorest of the poor farmers, the sharecroppers, the farmer tenants, and those poor in the smaller towns of your districts? If you do refuse, the responsibility will again be yours and not mine. I have done my full duty and await your action. I know that the Republicans both yesterday and today were being whipped into line, but I have a right to feel that there are independent Members on the Republican side who will not be made rubber stamps by the Republican leaders and who will support this beneficial legislation. As to you Democrats who voted yesterday against the lending bill, you will be held to account when you return to your districts. I say to them, here is another opportunity offered to vote right. Do not let vicious propaganda or personal hatred against President Roosevelt sway you from your duty to your constituents and to the country. Remember the old saying, "He who digs a pitfall or grave for another is digging it for himself."

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion I wish to direct the attention of the House to the fact that the House Banking and Currency Committee has carefully considered the Senate bill; it has been properly amended and safeguarding and restrictive provisions added to it, making the bill, if enacted, one that can be efficiently administered. I repeat that our duty is plain, and I know that the President and all those interested in this matter and all those who are interested in the underprivileged are in favor of this beneficial legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I am not going to detain the House longer because I have many requests from gentlemen who desire to express their views in behalf of this legislation. I therefore conclude, reserving the balance of my time.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott].

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I was very much interested in what the gentleman from Illinois just said. If I understood him correctly, he said this program would not cost the Federal Government one cent.

Mr. SABATH. Eventually not a cent.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I want to make the statement, and I challenge anyone on this floor to successfully contradict it, that this bill will cost the Federal Government a very minimum of $2,700,000,000. This bill is a supplement to the act which we passed last year and the one passed the year before by which we authorized the United States Housing Administration to make $800,000,000 in loans; but the significant part of it is that we at the same time authorized appropriations amounting to $28,000,000 annually over a 60-year period of time. So under existing law, much to my amazement and much to the amazement of other members of the Banking and Currency Committee, when this matter was under consideration a few weeks ago, we found we had authorized appropriations of $1,680,000,000 for what purpose? For the sole purpose of reimbursing the Government for the original loan of $800,000,000.

Now, this bill is presented, by which they would raise the bond authorization of the United States Housing Authority another $800,000,000. It has been referred to quite generally as the $800,000,000 bill. Mr. Speaker, the minimum that this will cost the Government, let me reiterate, is $2,700,000,000. You must add the $28,000,000 authorized by existing law to the $45,000,000 authorized under this bill and you get the figure $73,000,000. You may say it is a $73,000,000 bill. But is it? You must multiply the $73,000,000 by 60, because, if this bill is enacted, we shall have authorized an annual expenditure in the form of annual contributions of $73,000,000, or a total of $4,380,000,000 without taking into consideration any interest whatever. For what purpose? For the sole purpose of paying back to the Government the $1,600,000,000 which it will loan. [Applause.]

I leave it to the judgment of every sound-thinking individual, not only on this floor but in the United States, if it is good, sound business to raise $4,380,000,000 for the purpose of paying back a $1,600,000,000 loan.

No contracts are made for less than 60 years. No part of the rent which is collected in any of these projects ever finds its way back into the Federal Treasury and there is no provision of law that so provides. Not one cent of this money is returned to the Treasury. So when the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Sabath] or any of the other gentleman who are going to talk on this bill, speak of these as self-liquidating projects, let them show us in the bill wherein they are selfliquidating other than that this debt is liquidated by appropriating three times as much as the original debt to do so. Of course these bonds are good; of course the banks want the bonds, because the Government of the United States annually appropriates money to retire these bonds and pay the interest on the bonds, and the bill specifically says that annual contributions shall first be used to retire this debt, not only the $1,600,000,000 debt, but also, and this is remarkable and amazing, to make available money by which the local housing authorities, who are supposed to put up 10 percent, might retire their own bonds.

Mr. Speaker, when we complete this program we will have raised the money to have built every project contracted for and at the end of 60 years we hand these projects over to the local housing authorities without the projects having cost the local housing authorities one red cent. The purposes of this bill can be accomplished by encouraging the use of a part of the $7,000,000,000 available capital that is now frozen in the banks. A study of this whole question should be made and I implore you to do it during the present session of Congress, instead of being placed in a ridiculous position by passing this bill. I assure the House there are brains enough in this country somewhere, and we will find them, to solve the problem without too much expense to the Federal Government. A study should be made of this problem, and we can thaw out private capital for the purpose of doing this same job, and can give relief to those within the lowest income brackets, as suggested by this bill. Why do I make that statement? Because an experimental project undertaken by Girard Lambert in New Jersey has proven it can be done with a little assistance. Read the hearings. He has already developed a project with private capital; the rents are nearly as low as those charged on U.S. H. A. projects. He has done this without the benefit of subsidies. If he had a 10-percent subsidy, such as the localities are supposed to put up in cash, work, land, and so forth, by the provisions of this bill, and if he had a further subsidy of 20 percent which the localities put up in services, tax remissions or tax exemptions, he could get the cost and maintenance down to a figure low enough so that the person within the very lowest income brackets could afford to rent his homes. He is now and could continue to pay 4 percent on his bonds.

Mr. Speaker, with $7,000,000,000 of idle credit in the banks, it is ridiculous for us to supplement and continue to furnish Government credit without giving at least some consideration to available means of thawing out this credit and putting it to work. Bear in mind this program takes care of only 15 percent of those whom the President and Mr. Straus want to serve, but there is a limit, of course, to their ambitions.

Mr. Straus tells us, assures us, that at no period of 60 years will the program cost us in annual subsidies more than $500,000,000, or $30,000,000. Can you imagine that? Thirty billion dollars he assures us will be the peak, and over a period of 60 years it will not annually cost us more than $500,000,000. Let us think of what we are doing here.

England tried out this plan, and England came to the conclusion that if it followed the program to its logical conclusion it would empty the British exchequer. All I want to do and what this House should do is stop this program before it empties the United States Treasury. [Applause.]

Mr. SABATH and Mr. KELLER rose.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I am sorry, I cannot yield.

The rural section of this bill was written into the bill in the Senate 5 minutes before the final vote was taken and without any consideration having been given to it by the Senate committee. It sets up a program whereby the farmer can deed to a local housing authority, provided one is organized, one-eighth of an acre, half an acre, or an acre of land, and then the authority can build a home and rent that home to the farmer for 60 years. The farmer does not own it. [Applause.]

Mr. Straus estimates that a farm home can be built for from $2,000 to $3,000 on land not owned by the farmer; the Farm Security Administration is now providing homes for farmers on land owned by the farmer for $1,100.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCormack].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Michigan has made a number of statements which are rather amazing and with which I cannot agree. I recall that not long ago, when the Committee on Ways and Means unanimously reported a bill to the House, by the vote of 15 Democrats and 10 Republicans, the gentleman from Michigan took the floor and, with his usual ingenuity, raised the cry of inflation, and his Republican colleagues followed him and did not follow the 10 Republican members of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Let us not deceive ourselves. The Republicans are going to vote against this rule. A vote against this rule is a vote against the bill. There are many districts represented by Republicans which have benefited by this legislation, and I am interested in seeing how they are going to vote on this rule. The money heretofore appropriated has been allocated in a fair manner, without political considerations.

Later, when the Republicans tell their friends, "Oh, I was for the bill; I was only against the rule," I hope their friends will realize a little deception is being practiced.

Everything the gentleman from Michigan has said is pertinent in the consideration of this bill in the Committee of the Whole. If the gentleman is sincere, why not vote for consideration of the bill? I have heard the Republicans talk against gag rules, and I believe there is some foundation for such talk, but now they are willing to completely gag the consideration of this bill.

As I have only 2 minutes, let me speak briefly to my friends on the Democratic side. I am not so much concerned about what happened to the rule a few days ago as I am concerned with the Democratic Party and with what happens on this rule today. The rule of a few days ago was a matter which, from a party angle, does not mean anything politically fatal to the Democratic Party—serious but not fatal.

Mr. Speaker, may I say now to my Democratic colleagues that this coalition idea can work two ways. The gentleman from Colorado earlier spoke about the coalition of yesterday. It was a different coalition than the one the day before. Action brings reaction. I do not like such reaction. I do not like action that is not consistent with the best interests of our party. All we want is the consideration of this bill. I do not like to see schisms among the members of my own party. I do not like to see a situation where those in the country are going to vote one way and those in the cities vote another way, using the Republican Party as the tail of their kite. That is the situation. That game can be played two ways, but I do not want to see it played either way. I want my party to vote for the consideration of this bill, and then when the bill comes up for consideration let individual Members vote as their conscience dictates. [Applause.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox].

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, in my opinion, the calling up of this rule constitutes a very great blunder on the part of my friend the gentleman from Illinois, the chairman of the Rules Committee. The gentleman has no expectation whatever that the rule will be adopted, or if adopted, no idea that the bill could possibly pass.

Mr. SABATH. I did not say that.

Mr. COX. The rule is called up for the purpose of being defeated in order that some gentlemen may have a talking point for some time in the future. I voted to report the rule for consideration of the bill; but at the time I reserved the right to vote against its adoption in the House. To press for the adoption of the rule in the face of certain defeat is a vain and foolish thing to do. It is my belief that on the call of the roll a majority of the Rules Committee will vote against the adoption of the rule.

In my opinion, the bill is infinitely less meritorious than the lending bill that the House refused to consider several days ago. Gentlemen who were heard by the Rules Committee took the position that the whole bill is nothing less than a barefaced fraud, and the statements made in support of this allegation were most persuasive.

Mr. Speaker, I believe the rule should be voted down. The chairman of the Committee on Rules offering the rule, if really interested in housing, would do a wise thing if he should ask unanimous consent that he might withdraw the rule from the further consideration of the House. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Luce].

Mr. LUCE. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Committee on Banking and Currency through many years, it may be presumed that I speak with some familiarity on this subject.

When housing was first considered and when authorization to proceed was made it was believed on the part of the committee, and following that on the part of the House, that we were to engage in a lending program. It has developed into a spending program as well, as shown to you by my colleague, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Wolcott]. This has come about by reason of the fact that experience has already demonstrated the impossibility of providing decent housing for the lower third of society without contribution from a Government source. The structures already contracted for furnish residence at an average cost of about $4,500. It is hoped this can be reduced on some dwellings to $3,300. Now, $3,300 would give the kind of living quarters normally occupied by families with $1,320 a year income, the rent being one-tenth of the value and one-quarter of the income.

The President has called to our attention his belief that one-third of our people are ill housed. It happens that onethird of our people have incomes of less than $1,000 a year. Therefore this program at its best furnishes living quarters for nobody in that lower one-third unless supplemented by a contribution from the Government.

You will see that you are plunging into the very middle of an activity than which there is nothing more socialistic. I use the word "socialism" with no invidious significance. It is a philosophic principle for which there is argument for as well as argument against, but here you have complete socialism in undertaking to tax the people of the country in order that one-third of them may live in homes that they would not otherwise occupy.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, will my friend yield for a question?

Mr. LUCE. I decline to yield.

This may or may not be the wise thing for us to do, but I hold its importance is such that we ought to stop, look, and listen. No great harm will come from postponing this measure until the opening of the next Congress. In the course of that time it will be possible for gentlemen unacquainted with the facts to learn what we are doing and find out with what we are threatened by reason of our

It is said, to be sure, that there should be this step in order to aid the building business. The figures for June show that building had, in that period, reached a high point, perhaps not the highest ever reached, but a building boom is on. There is no important need for the Government to go farther with this thing to encourage building. We are likely to see the biggest building boom the country ever saw as a result of private activity and private enterprise. [Applause.] [Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky, a member of the Committee on Banking and Currency [Mr. Spence].

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, we are today not alone considering this rule, but we are trying a policy of the Democratic Party that has been solemnly adopted by the legislative branch of this Government.

We have adopted a policy of slum clearance. Slums are the breeding places of crime, of disease, and of immorality, and they are not only destructive of this generation, but of the generations yet to come. The bill has for its purpose a great humanitarian object. Twenty-eight States have passed enabling legislation. No State has refused to pass such legislation where it has been submitted. Three hundred and fifty local agencies have been organized. Eight hundred million dollars of funds have been allocated. Five projects have been completed and there are now applications for projects totaling a billion more.

If we refuse to adopt this rule, it is a refusal to give a hearing for a continuation to a policy which we have already adopted. It is the conviction and condemnation of the United States Housing Act of 1937 without arraignment, without plea, and without trial. There is no excuse for refusing to adopt the resolution and considering the bill under this fair and open rule.

This is a momentous occasion for the Democratic Party. I think it means much to us, not only for the present, but for the future of the party. We have solemnly adopted the United States Housing Act of 1937. It is not only this rule that is on trial, it is that act which is on trial. To refuse to pass this resolution would be a confession of error when we passed that act and a confession of incapacity, because it would proclaim to the world that we not only admit we made a mistake when we passed the act, but that we also admit we are not capable of perfecting it; that we are incapable of making it a better act. [Applause.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Colmer].

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I rise at this time to explain the fact that I shall vote for this rule, even though I am opposed to this legislation. I voted for the rule in committee, and I feel it my duty to vote for it on the floor of this House. I have always followed that policy in the brief time I have been on this committee, and I think the House should have an opportunity to consider these matters. Therefore I will vote for the rule, even though I am opposed to the legislation. Of course, there are those of you who are not on the committee who do not have to vote that way. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia rose. Mr. COLMER. Oh, I cannot yield.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Just for a question. Mr. COLMER. Very well. I cannot refuse the distinguished gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. And if the gentleman were not on the Committee on Rules, I judge he would not feel obligated to vote for the rule.

Mr. COLMER. The gentleman from Virginia has a way of drawing fair conclusions. [Laughter and applause.] But I always favor an opportunity for the membership to pass on these questions.

Mr. KELLER rose.

Mr. COLMER. No, Mr. Speaker; I am sorry, I cannot

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I have only two more speakers on this side.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the gentleman from Michigan has only two gentlemen who are brave enough to speak against the rule, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Anderson].

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, every Member of this House is aware that the expenses of our Government must be kept within its revenues, and that continuation to spend far more than we collect will eventually place our Government in a state of insolvency just the same as any other business that spends more than it makes.

From its very inception I have been opposed to the vast and almost uncontrolled Federal spending as a means of reviving business. I feel that this is not a desirable way nor an effective way to get the wheels of industry turning and get men back to work. Our efforts to resuscitate the fallen giant of industry will bear more fruit it we proceed to remove or at least modify a lot of boards, bureaus, taxes, and other restrictive elements that shackle American industry and agriculture and prevent recovery. However, let it not be said that all Federal spending is wasteful or undesirable. A certain amount of public works should always be authorized so long as there is need for it.

That there is a tremendous need for proper low-cost housing in the cities of this Nation is not debatable. The clearance of slums is a great economic and social necessity of our day and certainly it is a question that transcends all political considerations. The establishment of proper housing and environment for the millions who now dwell in the filth-ridden slums of our great cities is a problem that no man or woman can solve by political equation. It is one that must be met with an open mind and with a firm devotion to our duty of doing everything within our power to promote the "general welfare" of all our people.

The problem of large scale slum clearance is so vast and so urgently pressing that only the Federal Government is capable of handling the situation with any degree of success.

I cannot believe that there is a man or woman in this body who can fail to appreciate the desirability of slum clearance not only as a sound economic policy but one that involves great social betterment for millions. Perhaps there are many here who have no serious slum problem in their districts. The slum is one of the scourges of the large cities, and you, who live in and represent essentially rural areas may not look upon the slums with the same horror that those of us do who come from the large cities. But everyone here does know that the provision of proper housing and proper surroundings for a vast part of our population is a problem of greatest importance.

Before coming to Congress I practiced law in St. Louis for many years. After that I served two terms as prosecuting attorney of St. Louis County. In this capacity I learned of the tremendous necessity and desirability of slum clearance because I saw crime and criminals fostered and bred in the

An amazingly large number of the young and first offenders that reached my office became criminals and social outcasts because of surroundings that were conducive of bad conduct. The Nation's annual crime bill is almost beyond comprehension for a nation that beasts of so many advantages for all. A very large percentage of the offenses are due to improper and unwholesome environment, especially in the large cities. Hence I am convinced that whatever money we spend for the housing program of the United States Housing Authority will be repaid hundreds of times, not in dollars and cents but in social and economic betterment for millions of people. Thousands of laborers, artisans, and mechanics will find work under the program, and generations to come will be improved socially and morally if we have the foresight to begin this great program now. Nothing is so effective in improving business conditions as a construction and building program. Every kind of business is helped by it.

Perhaps the majority of this House in their wisdom will see fit to defer or defeat the housing bill. There can be no quarrel with this body's prerogative to do that if it so desires, and I always have the greatest confidence in the decisions of the majority of this body whether I happen to be on that side or not. But I urge you-yes, even plead with you-to at least consider the bill by voting for the rule so that you may hear our case on the merits of the bill. Certainly it is too important a matter to refuse even the slightest consideration.

The housing bill means a great deal to St. Louis and to every city in this Nation. It means work for the building trades and all the industries that supply and sustain building programs. It means fewer slums and fewer social delinquencies. It means a better America.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO], who has some valuable information to give to the House.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk read the following letter which I received from the president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection the Clerk will read the letter in the time of the gentleman from New York.

The Clerk read as follows:

AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION. Washington, D. C., August 3, 1939.

Hon, VITO MARCANTONIO

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN: Replying to your recent inquiry to me as to the position of the American Farm Bureau Federation relative to the Housing bill, S. 591, under date of January 10 a statement of the American Farm Bureau Federation by its executive committee was submitted to the President of the United States and to all Members of the Seventy-sixth Congress, which set forth the position of our organization with respect to employment and various recovery measures. From this statement I again quote:

"1. In these critical times, when lack of economic balance between groups of our people prevents normal exchange of goods and services, which in turn results in a continuing unemployment problem, we reiterate our conviction that the full power of the Federal Government must be mobilized in an effort to restore the economic balance which is necessary to enable us, as a Nation, to regain normal volume of production and normal national income. We must put to work our billions of unemployed dollars and our millions of unemployed people."

Among our specific recommendations was the following: "That the Federal Government continue to provide employment for those who cannot secure employment in private industry."

We further recommended: "We insist further that Federal works projects be limited to such constructive projects as can fairly be expected to increase national income and wealth, or to add to the productive efficiency of our national encountry."

productive efficiency of our national economy."

To the extent that S. 591 meets the requirements as set forth in the foregoing statements with respect to providing useful employment, it will be a factor in national recovery as well as improving the housing conditions in better that the conditions in the statements. ing the housing conditions in both rural and urban areas. Sincerely yours,

EDW. A. O'NEAL. President.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, as one who was born in the slums, who was raised in the slums, and who still lives in the slums, I take this opportunity to voice the gratitude of the slum dwellers to the officers and members of the American Farm Bureau Federation for their support of this housing bill, S. 591. [Applause.]

All I can do in this brief moment is to direct my remarks to those who are playing politics with human misery. I ask you to forget politics, to forget your political hatred of Franklin D. Roosevelt, or his opponents; to lay that all aside and go into the slum districts of the big cities. Go into my district on a hot summer night and see American babies sleeping on the fire escapes, gasping for air. I am sure if you saw that sight you would forget playing politics with human misery. Stand on the sidewalks of New York with the people who dwell in the slums when the siren of the fire truck is heard, and watch their faces, observe their eyes filling with fear, and see them wonder as to which relative. whose brother, whose sister, whose mother, whose child is going to be the next victim on the funeral pyre of a slum fire. I say this because these sights, and these sights alone, could stop this disgusting political game that is being played here, with human beings as pawns.

This bill is not pump priming. It is the inexorable next step in the march of human progress. All we ask by this bill is not prosperity, not leisure, but to give to our young Americans their share of air and sunlight with which God has endowed our Nation. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Faddis].

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, this legislation is entirely too much of an adventure into the realms of socialism to suit me. My concern for the national credit and for the general welfare of this Nation will not allow me to support it. It comes to us from Mayor LaGuardia and his council of mayors of the metropolitan areas of the United States—an organization which has been endeavoring for several years to have the Congress force upon the country in general the relief problem of the metropolitan centers of this Nation.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. FADDIS. I cannot yield. I do not have the time.

We have learned much during the past 6 years about relief, and we are due to learn more during the next few years. I myself have learned during the past 6 years that relief must be a local problem; that if we are ever to solve this problem we must solve it locally. I am confident that the housing problem of the United States is of the same character. Day before yesterday we refused to consider a measure brought in here which would have helped the rural population of the United States. The reason we refused consideration of that measure was because we believed that we had already expended as much money this year as we were warranted in expending. For the same reason that I voted against consideration of that measure I intend to vote against consideration of this one. The trend of the times is not toward more concentration in the cities, but the trend of the times is toward the breaking up of large metropolitan centers. This legislation is contrary to the trend of the times, and I hope the rule will be voted down. [Applause.]

I vield back the balance of my time.

Mr. KELLER. Will the getleman yield for a question?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I have only one more speaker. Mr. SABATH. I yield $2\frac{1}{2}$ minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Wood].

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, I hope this rule will be adopted. It was said a moment ago that the chairman of the Rules Committee made a blunder when he brought out this bill. I think we will make a big blunder if we do not adopt this rule and pass this bill.

In my opinion, we made a blunder when we built up a prevailing rate of wages amongst mechanics on W. P. A. in prevailing rate of wages amongst mechanics on W. P. A. in the cities for 3 long years and then abolished it. We made another blunder when we reduced the rolls of the W. P. A. 1,000,000. Six hundred and fifty thousand go off the W. P. A. rolls this month. We made another blunder when we failed to adopt the appropriation for $119,000,000 for the Commodity Credit Corporation to protect the prices of corn, cotton, and other commodities. We will indeed make a blunder if we do not pass this measure that will give the low-income group an opportunity for healthful surroundings, and also create work opportunities for the unemployed that is so desperately needed among the building trades; and if we do not start clearing out the slums and supplanting them with decent surroundings for the workers of this Nation.

I think there is no more important legislation that has come before this session of Congress than this measure. If we defeat this measure I think we will have completed a do-nothing session, insofar as contributing to the recovery of this Nation is concerned. [Applause.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from North Dakota. I regret that I do not have more time to give the gentleman.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, it has been reported here that all of the Representatives from the farming sections of the United States will oppose this rule, because the farmers did not get what they wanted. I want to say that I represent a State where there is no other activity except agriculture. We are about as far removed from New York City as any other State in the Union that is engaged in agriculture. From my section of the country the gentlemen who represent that State in this House are not against the rule. We are not against any rule. We have never been against a rule, because it is a confession of weakness for this House to decide that we shall not hear the merits of a bill. [Applause.]

I expect to keep my mind judicially inclined and listen to this bill. If it is a good bill I will support it. If it is not, I will vote against it. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I only have one other speaker, so I will ask the gentleman from Michigan to use his time.

Mr. MAPES. The gentleman has only one more speaker?

Mr. SABATH. That is all.

Mr. MAPES. I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Gore].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Tennessee is recognized for $10\frac{1}{2}$ minutes.

Mr. GORE. Mr. Speaker, on day before yesterday I resolved doubt as to the self-liquidating character of the lending bill in favor of its sponsors and voted "aye" on the resolution. Today, on this bill there can be no doubt. The United States Housing Authority program is in no respect self-liquidating. It is not contemplated that any revenue from any project will ever be returned to the United States Government.

The cost of the program is paid in 60 annual payments from the Treasury of the United States. This bill authorizes $800,000,000 to be loaned, but, mind you, that does not represent the cost of the program. It also authorizes the United States Housing Authority—and, mind you, when you authorize them, it will certainly be done—to make binding contracts for the payment of $45,000,000 a year for 60 years—$2,700,000,000. Add that to the $28,000,000 every year to which we have already been committed, for 60 years, and you have $73,000,000 a year for 60 years—$4,380,000,000 to which the passage of this bill will definitely and positively commit the Government.

Mr. KELLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GORE. I decline to yield.

Mr. KELLER. Not for a question?

Mr. GORE. I decline to yield.

The regular order was demanded.

Mr. GORE. If I thought the gentleman was seeking information, I would yield. [Laughter.]

The faith and credit of the United States Government is pledged to the fulfillment of these contracts.

The chairman of my committee, whom I dearly love and whom I regret to oppose, will follow me; and I hope he will not say that any of this is misinformation, because it is not misinformation and I would be glad to substantiate every statement I have made in personal conversation with any Member of this House.

The municipalities do not pay one penny of the cost of these projects. Each transaction requires two contracts. Mind you, it is not done in one contract. There is a loan contract and a contribution contract. The contribution contract represents the cost of the program which is-now, listen to this-which is a minimum in every contract of 233 percent of the amount loaned. Some contracts-and I shall be glad to show them to any Member, I have analyzed dozens of them—some contracts pledge the payment of 250 percent of the amount loaned. The Government pays the entire bill. The municipalities get the buildings and the local units get the rent. Not only does the Government pay the entire bill, but it is pledged, and contracted, and bound to amortize the debt at the rate of 3 percent interest; and, mind you, the United States Housing Authority borrows the money at 1% percent.

If the contracts, if the projects, could be amortized by the Treasury they would be paid completely in a little less than 32 years by making the same payment, the same one, the same specific amount that they bind themselves in these contracts to pay not for 32 years, but for 60 years. Let me illustrate by this simple example. Here is the finance provision: I lend you $53. I take your note, put it in this pocket; and then I make a side contract with you to pay you $73, and I take that money out of my other pocket, which is supplied by the taxpayer, put it in the first pocket, pay off the $53 and proclaim to the world that I have made a profit of $20.

It is ridiculous, Mr. Speaker. I am one of the youngest Members of this House. Even though my people may keep me here for 10 years, for 20 years, for 30 years, for 40 years, or for 50 years, this program will not then be paid for; and every year our appropriation bills will carry an item of $73,000,000 for this purpose for the next 60 years. My 18-months-old baby will be lucky to live to see one of these contracts consummated. It is ridiculous. How many people can name an apartment house that is inhabitable at the end of 60 years? I turn to another point.

The United States Housing Authority is guilty of disseminating the most reprehensible, deceptive, and misleading information. In spite of this cost I find that on June 2 Mr. Straus made a speech in New Haven, Conn., in which he said—and in order that no claim of misinformation or misquotation can be assigned to me, I read his statement. I quote:

"The loans which the U. S. H. A. makes to localities for financing the capital development of projects are absolutely returnable—every dollar—with interest—"

Listen to this-

"They do not cost the public a penny."

I guess that is where the chairman of the Committee on Rules got his information. [Laughter.]

Mr. SABATH. No; I had studied the bill. [Laughter.]
Mr. GORE. That is very pleasing. I continue the quotation:

"They do not cost the public a penny, but, in fact, yield a small interest profit."

Mr. Speaker, one must be charitable, and, indeed, modest in selecting his diction to call that "propaganda."

The program is advertised as low-cost housing. It is not low-cost housing. So far this program has cost an average of $4,893 per family unit, and before we pay ourselves back by this crazy change-of-pocket procedure and doubling the interest on the taxpayers of the country it will cost us for every family unit an average of over $10,000. One project has cost—and this is a statement from the United States Housing Authority substantiated this morning—one project has cost $6,710 per family unit, and before we pay ourselves back—mind you, the project never pays one penny to the Government—it will cost in that project over $14,000 per family unit. I am wondering how many of my colleagues live in such expensive abodes.

The program is advertised as one to rehouse the slum dwellers, and although specifically requested, not one iota of evidence has been presented that as much as one family from the abolished slum area has ever been rehoused in one of these projects. I want to read from the record of the hearings. I do not wish to be misunderstood in making the statement that not as many as one has been rehoused, but I asked for the information, and they could not show me where one had been. I read to you from page 304 of the record of the hearings in regard to the projects which have been opened:

MEMBER OF THE COMMITTEE. In these five projects what percentage of the occupants are from the slum areas which were demolished?

Mr. Straus. From the particular area demolished?

Member of Committee. Yes.

Mr. Straus. I do not know. I can find out. It is not very important. * *

I thought it was important!

And that is not misinformation.

It will be said following me, because I know the program and argument, that we have adopted a policy, that it should go on, and that we should not stop it. Well, England adopted it, as you have heard, and within 3 years they stopped it. Why? Because a catastrophe was impending for the exchequer.

Mr. Speaker, something was said about blunders. I do not subscribe to the theory that because we as representatives of the people, we as Democrats or as a Congress, have made a blunder or a mistake, we should keep right on and carry it through. [Applause.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of the time to the chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee [Mr. Steagall], who is not a new Member, but who has served here and on that committee for over 20 years.

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I shall not contend that if this House recognizes that a mistake has been made in passing the original legislation that we should not correct that mistake. I do call attention to the fact, however, that the bill before the House is simply a provision for the continuation of a program upon which the House has voted affirmatively at least three or four different times, and that this program should not be interrupted without full consideration of results. Since the program was begun projects have been inaugurated in all but 17 States and 38 States have passed enabling legislation for organization of local housing authorities. The problem of housing is one that challenges the sympathetic efforts of every Member of the House. It pertains not alone to our cities, but conditions that cry out to us are spread throughout the length and breadth of the Nation. The legislation is national in purpose and will benefit the people of the entire Nation.

The cities were the first beneficiaries of our efforts for relief, but those who were responsible for this legislation had a vision that swept beyond the confines of the cities of the country. Those of us who come from rural areas know that conditions there parallel the unfortunate conditions that have been depicted in some of the cities of the Nation. Slum housing in rural areas is just as deplorable as is the case in urban centers. The inauguration of this great reform has been successful to an extent that exceeds our expectations.

Under the act as it was initially passed and approved in September 1937, the United States Housing Authority was authorized to issue bonds in an amount not to exceed a total of $500,000,000, $100,000,000 of which was to be available the first year and $200,000,000 the second and third years. That act also authorized annual contributions in an aggregate amount of $20,000,000, $5,000,000 to be available the first year and $7,500,000 the second and third years. In June of 1938, amendments were adopted which increased the bond authorization to $800,000,000 and made the full amount immediately available. The amendments increased the annual contribution authorization to $28,000,000 and made the full amount immediately available. This annual contribution authorization has, however, been sufficient to cover projects involving only about $650,000,000 in Federal loans, plus the 10 percent local capital participation.

The amendment to the bill proposed by the committee authorizes the United States Housing Authority to issue its bonds for an additional $800,000,000. The proceeds of these bonds would be available for loans of not more than 90 percent of the cost of projects undertaken by local publichousing agencies. This increased authorization is an authority merely to borrow that sum, which will be used for loans that will be fully repayable to the United States Housing Authority with interest.

The bill authorizes the United States Housing Authority to contract for the payment of annual contributions to public housing agencies in the additional amount of $45,-000,000. These annual contributions will cover projects financed with the proceeds of the additional bonds of the United States Housing Authority in the amount of $800,-000,000 and the amount of $150,000,000 unexpended. These contributions are intended to make up the difference between the rent which would otherwise have to be charged for decent new housing and the rent which the families living in slums can now afford to pay. The bill authorizes the extension of the program to families of low income in rural areas. Of the funds available to the United States Housing Authority for loans, $200,000,000 are earmarked to provide housing for families of low income in rural areas.

The program to be carried out if this proposal is passed would rehouse 500,000 families in the United States. It will provide new housing facilities for 2,000,000 people—certainly not less than 1,500,000—in the United States, of whom more than one-half million would be in rural areas.

The statement has been made that residents in the slum sections of our cities have not in reality been rehoused. The program is just getting under way, and projects under construction cannot be used before completion. Under the present program 365 projects are under way and some of them finished and occupied. There is demand now for more funds than is provided in the measure under consideration, but the program will have to proceed in an orderly way. It is not calculated that funds to be made available under this bill will be exhausted in less than 2 years.

This bill would afford employment for one-half million men for a period of 1 year. It is estimated that in connection with expenditures of this kind three times the amount of those directly expended will be employed in the expansion of trade and in labor to be put to work in carrying out contracts for the erection of buildings and otherwise.

The record shows that down to this time, instead of costing $6,000 per dwelling, the cost is not above $4,000, and it is being gradually reduced lower than contemplated in the original act. We have now approached the time when the cost of these structures will average $3,500 or less. On an average, they have never exceeded the limits established in the original law of $5,000 per unit and $1,250 per room for the more expensive construction in the larger cities, and $4,000 per unit and $1,000 per room elsewhere.

I desire to call attention of Members of the House to the provision in this bill for rural housing. Two hundred million dollars have been earmarked for the relief of slum conditions that obtain in the rural sections of the country. Enabling legislation passed in 17 States provides for the organization of local housing authorities in rural areas. Secretary of Agriculture testified that the program can be extended to several areas in every State in the Union under local laws or under the Farm Home Corporation in the Department of Agriculture. I believe that the program is less difficult of administration in rural areas than in urban centers. There is on hand $150,000,000 of the funds available to inaugurate a system of low-cost housing in rural areas, without the requirement of the 10-percent cash contribution required under the bill now before us, which is a departure from existing law.

Under this bill any local housing authority must first contribute 10 percent in cash of any loan to be made.

Mr. SIROVICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEAGALL. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SIROVICH. The distinguished gentleman who has been battling for slum clearance has made a very interesting contribution; but I want to call his attention to the fact that although the United States Housing Authority assisted projects are built for 60 years with labor paid the prevailing wages, the average net construction cost of these projects is more than $1,000 less than the comparable figure for private residential construction of all types.

Mr. STEAGALL. That is quite true, and I thank the gentleman.

I wish to call attention to the figures that have been given, which are calculated to give an exaggerated and unjust impression respecting the provisions of this bill.

The amount of annual contributions carried in this bill for the purpose of maintaining the low-rent quality of houses to be afforded the unfortunate people who are to benefit by this legislation is not such as has been pictured. The rate of interest paid by the United States Housing Authority at this time is 1% percent. The rate of interest charged on loans is 3 percent. So that you have a margin of 1% percent upon which to operate, and when we take into account earnings on the margin between the cost of the money and the rate applied, and apply that to annual contributions, it will reduce annual contributions to $50,000,000. That is what the actual figures show.

Contrary to statements that have been made, not technically misleading, but calculated to create misunderstanding with reference to this bill, it is a loan bill insofar as the money supplied to aid the local housing authorities in the construction of buildings is concerned. They are loans that will be repaid and loans that we have a right to expect will be repaid. The gentlemen who oppose us proceed with the figures handed us. I answer on a basis of the same figures that have been handed us. If they are correct when offered by the gentlemen who have preceded me, they should not be questioned when offered by me. On the basis of these figures we are justified in the statement that the difference of 15% percent between the cost of money and the interest charged on loans if applied against annual contributions will reduce them to $50,000,000 a year.

The bill provides for full repayment of loans but not to the Treasury for the reason that the Treasury does not part with a dollar. The Treasury does not furnish the money and the Treasury, of course, does not get the money back. The United States Housing Authority uses the credit of the Federal Treasury to borrow money, and the bill provides that the money will be returned to the United States Housing Authority for payment of its obligations.

The way in which figures are presented to this House would give an unjust impression. If we take any annual appropriation and multiply it by 60 the total will be appalling.

Such a calculation on the figures in this bill is far less staggering than it would be if applied to any of our various annual appropriations such as national defense, veterans' benefits, agricultural adjustment, and others made on that basis. It is not a fair way to present it. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I hope this resolution will pass. It is extremely fitting that we should be represented at the Polar Exploration Exposition at Bergen. Norway. We, in Massachusetts, are especially interested, due to the fact that Admiral Richard Byrd has made such extremely valuable contributions.

APPORTIONMENT OF COST BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND THE OWNERS OF CERTAIN BRIDGES

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 1989) to provide for the alteration of certain bridges over navigable waters of the United States, for the apportionment of the cost of such alterations between the United States and the owners of such bridges, and for other purposes.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain this bill?

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Speaker, the transportation bill that was passed last week contained a provision about the apportionment of the cost of alterations of bridges between the Government and the railroads when they were ordered changed or rebuilt by any of the departments of the Government. There will not be any agreement in conference on the bill before January, and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Hobbs] is interested in a matter down in his district and would like the legislation to take effect so far as the bridge matter is concerned now. This is practically the section that was in the transportation bill passed last week with regard to bridges.

Mr. TABER. It has to do with bridge matters and nothing else?

Mr. CROSSER. Nothing else but bridges.

Mr. TABER. And the committee has all agreed to it?

Mr. CROSSER. Yes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

SEC. 4. It shall be the duty of the bridge owner to prepare and submit to the Secretary, within 90 days after service of his order, general plans and specifications to provide for the alteration of such bridge in accordance with such order, and for such additional alteration of such bridge as the bridge owner may desire to meet the necessities of railroad or highway traffic, or both. JOHN ULLMANN, JR.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 2427, authorizing the naturalization of John Ullmann, Jr., and consider the same.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Dakota asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 2427 and consider the same, which the Clerk will The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, notwithstanding any other provision of law, at any time within 1 year after the date of enactment of this act, John Ullmann, Jr., of the United States Navy, retired, may be naturalized as a citizen of the United States by taking the naturalization oath of allegiance before any court having jurisdiction of the naturalization of aliens.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, this bill (S. 2427) is one of the most meritorious naturalization bills that has ever come to my attention. It will authorize the naturalization of John Ullmann, Jr., at any time within 1 year, by the taking of the naturalization oath of allegiance by Mr. Ullmann before any court having jurisdiction of the naturalization of aliens. It appears that Mr. Ullmann was born in Russia in 1884 and came to this country with his parents in 1892. The father, John Ullmann, Sr., took out his first papers in Clay County, Nebr., in 1893. They were under the mistaken belief that this was all that was required and that such action conferred citizenship upon the entire family, some of whom moved to South Dakota.

It was not until 1914 that Mr. Ullmann, Sr., received his final papers at which time John Ullmann, Jr., had reached his majority. In 1906 he enlisted in the Navy and at that time his citizenship was established to the satisfaction of the Navy Department officials upon an affidavit by the father. In 1914 his citizenship was again established upon a similar affidavit to the satisfaction of the Navy Department. Mr. Ullmann was retired at Shanghai, China, in 1936, upon the completion of 30 years' service. He immediately was appointed as an assistant deputy United States marshal in Shanghai, which position he held for 18 months. Since that time he has been employed by two or three American tobacco firms, representing their interests in China. He returned to this country in February of this year on a visit and was admitted as a citizen upon the presentation of his Navy papers. During the month of April he learned definitely that he did not acquire citizenship upon the naturalization of his father and immediately filed a declaration of intention, however, under the regular procedure, it will be 5 years before he can receive his final papers.

Mr. Ullmann has a wife and four children in Shanghai and they, of course, cannot come to this country until his citizenship is established and neither can he obtain a passport to return to China. He had an excellent record while in the United States Navy.

The consideration of the House in passing S. 2427 to meet this situation is appreciated.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

BRIEN M'MAHON

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 2478) to limit the operation of sections 109 and 113 of the Criminal Code and section 190 of the Revised Statutes of the United States with respect to counsel in certain cases, and consider the same.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 2478, and consider the same. Is there objection?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Will the gentleman please explain what this bill is?

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, this bill extends the statutory period so that Mr. McMahon, who was an Assistant Attorney General, may try the Harlan County cases over again without having the 2-year period apply to him. It does not involve any additional appointment. It merely permits the 2-year period to start from the time he left the employment of the Department of Justice.

Mr. TABER. Does this call for any additional expense?

Mr. WALTER. No.

Mr. TABER. And it relates specifically to him and not to anyone else?

Mr. WALTER. Not to anyone else.

Mr. HANCOCK. He was employed as a special counsel to try these cases, and this is to permit him to proceed with the cases of which he has had charge.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the employment of Brien McMahon as an attorney or counselor specially employed, retained, or appointed by the Attorney General or under authority of the Department of Justice, at a compensation not to exceed the rate of $10,000 per annum, to assist in the conduct of the case of United States against Mary Helen Corporation and others, in the eastern district of Kentucky, and the case of Société Suisse pour Valeurs de Metaux, petitioner, against Homer S. Cummings, Attorney General of the United States, and William A. Julian, Treasurer of the United States, in the District of Columbia, including all proceedings therein and any other case or proceeding, appellate or otherwise, that may arise out of or pertain to the matters or any of them involved in the said cases, shall not be construed to be employment within the meaning of sections 109 and 113 of the Criminal Code of the United States, as amended (U. S. C., title 18, secs, 198 and 203), or section 190 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. C., title 5, sec. 99).

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXEMPTION OF CERTAIN TELEPHONE EXCHANGES

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 1234) to amend section 13 (a) of the act approved June 25, 1938 (52 Stat. 1069), entitled "Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938," and consider the same.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. What is this?

Mr. RAMSPECK. This is the so-called rural telephone exchange exemption. I think everyone is in favor of it. I talked with the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Martin] and he is agreeable to this.

Mr. RICH. We may not object to this particular provision, but the gentleman has a lot of things in the National Labor Relations Act that ought to be changed. Can we expect any relief on that legislation which is anticipated by the people of this country?

Mr. RAMSPECK. This has nothing to do with the National Labor Relations Act.

Mr. RICH. This is the Wage and Hour Act?

Mr. RAMSPECK. Yes.

Mr. RICH. There are other features which the gentleman's committee is interested in, and are we to get any relief from that?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I cannot tell about that.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman tell how far this goes?

Mr. RAMSPECK. It simply exempts from the wage and hour provisions switchboard operators employed in telephone exchanges having less than 500 stations.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 13 (a) of the act approved June 25, 1938 (52 Stat. 1069), entitled the "Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938," be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding a new subsection 11 as follows: "or (11) any switchboard operator employed in a public telephone exchange which has less than 500 stations."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

SURPLUS AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a conference report on the bill (S. 2697) to facilitate the execution of arrangements for the exchange of surplus agricultural commodities produced in the United States for reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials produced abroad.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a conference report upon the bill S, 2697. Is there objection?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Will the gentleman explain what this is?

Mr. STEAGALL. This conference report is entirely satisfactory to all of the conferees.

Mr. TABER. On both sides of the aisle?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes.

Mr. TABER. And it is approved by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Martin]?

Mr. STEAGALL. Yes; with certain amendments which are entirely satisfactory to him.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the conference report. The Clerk read the conference report.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (S. 2697) to facilitate the execution of arrangements for the exchange of surplus agricultural commodities produced in the United States for reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials produced abroad, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"The Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized and directed to transfer to warehouses in or near cotton manufacturing centers in New England not to exceed 300,000 bales of cotton, to which it now has title or may hereafter acquire title, having regard for the grades and staples customarily required by manufacturers in that area: Provided, That all necessary costs in connection with such transfer will not result in additional net cost to the Corporation.

"In determining specific cotton to be exchanged under this Act, the determination shall be made by sampling and selection at the place where the cotton is stored on the date of ratification of a treaty providing for such exchange, and no cotton shall be exchanged under such treaty which, after such date, is transported to another place and there sampled and selected."

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (S. 2697) to facilitate the execution of arrangements for the exchange of surplus agricultural commodities produced in the United States for reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials produced abroad, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report as to each of such amendments, namely:

The House amendment provided that the Commodity Credit Corporation should warehouse in or near cotton—manufacturing centers in New England such reasonable amounts of cotton held as security for loans as the Corporation deemed necessary to meet local manufacturing needs, and in no event was the amount to be less than 300,000 bales. It was also provided that the written consent of the producer or borrower to reconcentration, as provided in section 383 (b) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act should not be required, and in determining specific cotton to be exchanged the determination was to be made by sampling and selection at the place where the cotton was stored on the date of the enactment of the act, and no cotton was to be exchanged which after such date was transported to another place and there sampled and selected.

383 (b) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act should not be required, and in determining specific cotton to be exchanged the determination was to be made by sampling and selection at the place where the cotton was stored on the date of the enactment of the act, and no cotton was to be exchanged which after such date was transported to another place and there sampled and selected.

The conference agreement provides that the Commodity Credit Corporation shall transfer to warehouses in or near cotton-manufacturing centers in New England not to exceed 300,000 bales of cotton, to which it has or may hereafter acquire title, having regard for the grades and staples customarily required by manufacturers in that area, provided that all necessary costs in connection with such transfer will not result in additional net cost to the Corporation. It is also provided that in determining specific cotton to be exchanged the determination shall be made by sampling and selection at the place where the cotton is stored on the date of the ratification of a treaty providing for such exchange, and no cotton is to be exchanged under such treaty which, after such date, is transported to another place and there sampled and selected.

POSTAL POWERBOAT SERVICE IN ALASKA

Mr. ROMJUE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 882, to authorize the Postmaster General to contract for certain powerboat service in Alaska, and for other purposes, and consider the same at this time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 882, and consider the same. Is there objection?

Mr. TABER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman explain this bill?

Mr. ROMJUE. Under the present law the Postmaster General has no authority to make any contract for carrying passengers. All he can do is to make contracts in regard to carrying the mail. The Department has had great difficulty in getting anyone to carry the mail for the money they are allowed.

I would like for the Delegate from Alaska [Mr. DIMOND] to explain the details of it.

Mr. DIMOND. If the gentleman will yield-

Mr. ROMJUE. I yield.

Mr. DIMOND. In a certain part of Alaska, in that part which embraces the Alaska Peninsula and some of the Aleutian Islands, a region about 1,000 miles long, and containing six or seven or eight thousand people, there is difficulty in getting facilities for transportation for freight or passengers.

The purpose of this bill is to improve the service, so that in addition to furnishing transportation of the mail in this region, the bill will authorize the Postmaster General to require that the mail carrier also use in the service a safe and seaworthy boat of sufficient size to carry a reasonable number of passengers and some freight, in order to give adequate transportation service. The bill has the approval of the Bureau of the Budget and the Postmaster General, and we have a unanimous report from the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, and it has been passed by the Senate by unanimous consent.

Mr. TABER. What will be the additional cost?

Mr. DIMOND. In my judgment, the additional cost will be about $20,000 a year, but it may be somewhat more. I want to say to the House, however, that in the recent contracts that were made in 1938 for the carriage of mails in Alaska, we effected a very great savings on other contracts, so that the Government, even under this bill, will not pay any more money for the service generally than it has paid out before.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Romjue]?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster General may, in his discretion, contract for a period of not exceeding 4 years, without advertisement therefor, for the carriage of all classes of mail, by steamboat or other powerboat of United States registry, on the route from Seward, by points on Kenai Peninsula, Kodiak Island, Alaska Peninsula, the Aleutian Islands to Umnak Island, and points on Bristol Bay, Alaska, and vicinity, and back, by a schedule and under the conditions prescribed by the Postmaster General; the contractor to furnish and use in the service a safe and seaworthy boat of sufficient size to provide adequate space for mail, passengers, and freight, the annual cost not to exceed $125,000, payment therefor to be made from the appropriation for powerboat service.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

KANIKSU NATIONAL FOREST

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 2752) to include within the Kaniksu National Forest certain lands owned or in course of acquisition by the United States, with a Senate amendment, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 10, line 18, after "forests", insert "Lands received in exchange or purchased under the provisions of this act shall be open to mineral locations, mineral development, and patent, in accordance with the mining laws of the United States."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is that a usual provision to put in this kind of a bill?

Mr. DeROUEN. Yes, sir. This was passed by both the Senate and the House. That amendment originated with the gentleman from California [Mr. Englebright], who wishes this reservation made on all bills.

Mr. TABER. I have no objection, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 30 seconds.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. Speaker, when the resolution providing for the consideration of H. R. 7120, the lending bill, was voted on Tuesday last, I was absent from the House due to being in the hospital. Had I been present I would have voted "aye" on the adoption of the resolution.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. Speaker, at this time I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and include a radio address by Mr. R. W. Blackburn, secretary, American Farm Bureau Federation, made last evening.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks on the resolution relating to the Housing Act.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered. There was no objection.

PETROLEUM INVESTIGATION

Mr. COLE of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House Resolution 290.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

House Resolution 290

Whereas in 1934 the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, by a subcommittee thereof, under authority of House Resolution 441, Seventy-third Congress, conducted a petroleum investigation and on January 3, 1935, submitted to the House a report thereon (Rept. No. 2, 74th Cong.), which investigation and report served as the basis for the enactment of important oil legislation;

Whereas on July 22, 1939, the President of the United States addressed a letter to the chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the House, reading, in part, as follows:

and Foreign Commerce of the House, reading, in part, as follows:

"I appreciate the thoroughness with which the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce conducted the petroleum investigation in 1934 in response to H. R. 441; but in the light of changes that have taken place, I believe the committee may wish to study developments since that time by investigation and hearings prior to the next session of the Congress. To this end, and with a view to the enactment of suitable legislation in the next session, I request that the petroleum conservation bill which I today discussed with you and Representative Cole be introduced at this session"; and Whereas the bill referred to by the President in such letter was introduced on July 26, 1939, as H. R. 7372: Therefore be it Resolved, That the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized—up to date its study and report made pursuant to House Resolution

441, Seventy-third Congress, which provided for the investigation of (1) the production, importation, storage, transportation, refining, purchase, and sale of petroleum and its products for the purpose of determining whether there is an excessive supply of petroleum and its products; whether such excessive supply, if it exists, injuriously affects commerce in petroleum and its products and has the effect of rendering unprofitable the operation of wells of small but settled production and will cause their natural resources, induced by absence of restrictions upon the quantity which may move in com-merce, results in waste and inferior uses; whether restrictions should be placed upon the quantities of petroleum and its products which may move in commerce when an excessive supply exists, and if so, whether such restrictions should regulate and coordinate commerce in petroleum and its products among the several States and with foreign nations, with fair and equitable apportionment among the States and among different operators and sources of supply; and whether commerce in petroleum and its products is of such a nature that it may be regarded as a unit for the purpose of establishing quotas irrespective of whether transactions are interstate or intrastate, or whether exportation or importation is involved; and (2) all other questions in relation to the subject of regulating commerce in petroleum and its products; and

(b) To investigate the methods and practices employed in the production and storage of petroleum from deposits within the United States, for the purpose of determining whether such methods United States, for the purpose of determining whether such methods and practices are wasteful of petroleum and the reservoir energy available for recovery thereof from such deposits; whether the employment of such methods and practices is inimical to the maintenance of reserves of petroleum, and of the facilities for the recovery and transportation thereof, available for military and supporting civilian needs in an adequate national defense; and whether the employment of such methods and practices burdens and obstructs interstate commerce and unduly limits the usefulness of instruments of transportation in and causes the abandonment of facilities. ments of transportation in, and causes the abandonment of facili-ties for, such commerce; and to investigate any other matters bearing upon the practicability and advisability of enacting legis-lation of the character of H. R. 7372, introduced on July 26, 1939;

(c) To investigate methods and practices employed in the production, transportation, and distribution of petroleum and its products for the purpose of determining whether such methods and practices, in or in relation to interstate commerce in petroleum and its products, constitute unfair methods and practices from the standpoint of their effect upon producers and consumers.

The chairman of the committee or any member thereof may administer oaths to witnesses.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RIGHT-OF-WAY FOR BLUE RIDGE PARKWAY ACROSS CHEROKEE INDIAN RESERVATION, N. C.

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 6668) to grant the State of North Carolina a right-of-way for the Blue Ridge Parkway across the Cherokee Indian Reservation in North Carolina, to provide for the payment of just compensation for said right-of-way, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object. I would like to have the gentleman explain this bill.

Mr. Derouen. This bill has been before the committee for several years. It provides for a right-of-way through the Cherokee Indian Reservation in North Carolina. The disagreement was that the survey which was at first proposed went through the Soco Reservation, where the agricultural lands, the best lands of the Indians, were, and we objected to that. So finally, after long hearings during several years, we recently held a hearing before the committee and an agreement was reached by which we were willing to grant this right-of-way, provided it would not go through the Soco

Valley, and provided further that a new section would be added as section 8 of the bill, which provides as follows:

Nothing in this act shall be deemed to constitute a precedent for authorizing the Secretary of the Interior or any other officer of the United States to grant or take for any purpose any other Indian lands or property within the Cherokee Indian Reservation without the consent of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians.

The chief and the assistant chief of the Cherokees testified before our committee and agreed that if this amendment were added to the bill they would have no objection to the enactment of the bill.

This bill provides that the State of North Carolina must buy and pay for all this land, and give it without any cost to the United States Government.

Mr. RICH. What are we going to do to take care of the Indian tribes?

Mr. Derouen. The Indian tribes are cared for under the Indian laws.

Mr. RICH. If we take this land from the Indian tribes because of the passing of this legislation, what are we going to do to reimburse the Indians, and who is going to pay it?

Mr. Derouen. The Indians will receive $40,000 for this right-of-way on the ridge and not in the Soco Valley, where they have their land. Both the chief and the assistant chief stated to the committee that there was no disagreement. The only thing they were afraid of was that other roads might be built. They did not want this to happen too often, and did not want other roads going through their reservation. They realized, however, that it would mean much to them as well as to other people, and there was no disagreement between the white folks in the States and the authorities. With the adoption of this change they were perfectly satisfied. They did not want this to constitute a precedent; and secondly, they did not want the road to go through the Soco Valley, but on the ridge, way up where no one lives.

Mr. RICH. Then the Indian tribes will not come back on the Federal Government at some time in the future and expect us to make them a further payment?

Mr. DEROUEN. Not at all. The State of North Carolina pays the Indian tribes $40,000 for the right-of-way.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I am a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs, but I have no recollection of our committee's considering this bill. The subject matter of the bill would seem to bring it within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Indian Affairs. What committee did consider this bill?

Mr. DEROUEN. I will explain to the gentleman. This has to do with a right-of-way for a road.

Mr. RICH. For a parkway.

Mr. DEROUEN. For a parkway, a continuation of the Great Smokies National Parkway. It has been before the Committee on Public Lands for several years.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. If the gentleman will yield further, this is a matter directly affecting an Indian reservation. I believe that before the House should be asked to pass this bill by unanimous consent, a bill dealing with a subject within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Indian Affairs, the members of that committee, at least, should have had the matter called to their attention.

Mr. Derouen. Let me answer it this way, as far as reference to the committee is concerned: That was done by the Parliamentarian. We have had it for about 4 years trying to arrive at a compromise. This is not the type of reservation one ordinarily thinks of when one speaks of Indian reservations.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. If the Indians involved in this reservation have expressed their approval of this proposed bill I shall not object.

Mr. DEROUEN. Yes; they have; the chief and assistant chief living on the reservation. That is what I am trying to tell the gentleman.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. In view of that fact, Mr. Speaker, I will withdraw my opposition, but I respectfully suggest that when any more Indian reservation bills are referred to the gentleman's committee that he send them to the proper committee for consideration.

Mr. DEROUEN. I thank the gentleman.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and empowered, whenever he may determine that the requirements of this act have been fulfilled, to grant and convey to the State of North Carolina a right-of-way for the Blue Ridge Parkway across any lands or other property within the Cherokee Indian Reservation in North Carolina held in trust by the United States for the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians. Such grant and conveyance shall pass to the State of North Carolina in fee simple absolute all right, title, and interest of the United States and the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians in and to all lands and other property situate and lying within the boundaries of said right-of-way.

property situate and lying within the boundaries of said right-of-way.

Sec. 2. The location and boundaries of said right-of-way, which shall not exceed 1,000 feet in width, shall be determined by the Secretary of the Interior. Before approving any plan for the location and boundaries of said right-of-way the Secretary of the Interior shall transmit a copy of the plan to the council of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, and shall allow said council at least 90 days thereafter for the submission of recommendations in favor of the approval or disapproval of the plan or in support of any alterations therein which said council may desire to propose. In determining the location and boundaries of said right-of-way, the Secretary of the Interior shall give effect to the recommendations submitted to him by the council of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians to the extent that he finds such recommendations to be consistent with the interest of the public in the proper placement of the Blue Ridge Parkway for recreational and other public purposes.

SEC. 3. In consideration for the granting of said right-of-way, the State of North Carolina shall pay to the United States in trust for the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians a sum sufficient to constitute just compensation to the said band and the members thereof for the taking of said right-of-way for parkway purposes. The just compensation herein referred to shall cover all elements of damage for which the Constitution of the United States would require compensation to be made in proceedings brought by the United States for the condemnation of a like right-of-way across lands in private ownership, and shall also cover any further elements of damage for which the Constitution or laws of North Carolina would require compensation to be made in proceedings brought by the State highway commission for the condemnation of a like right-of-way across lands in private ownership, without diminution in either case for any benefits resulting from the use of said right-of-way for parkway purposes. All amounts agreed upon or awarded as just compensation for said right-of-way shall bear simple interest at the rate of 6 percent per annum until paid, to be computed from the date when deed for said right-of-way is accepted by the State of North Carolina.

SEC. 4. At any time after the determination of the location and boundaries of said right-of-way the council of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians may make a contract with the State of North Carolina, liquidating the sum to be paid as just compensation for said right-of-way and prescribing the time and manner of its payment. Such contract shall be approved by the Secretary of the Interior if he finds that the sum to be paid thereunder will meet the requirements of section 3 of this act and that the terms on which payment is to be made are fair and reasonable. Upon approval by the Secretary of the Interior such contract shall become binding upon the United States, the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, and the State of North Carolina.

Sec. 5. At any time after the determination of the location and boundaries of said right-of-way the Secretary of the Interior may execute and deliver a deed conveying said right-of-way to the State of North Carolina: Provided, however, That if no contract liquidating the sum to be paid as just compensation for said right-of-way shall have been made and approved, the Secretary of the Interior, before delivering such deed, shall require the State of North Carolina to furnish a bond, in form and amount satisfactory to him, conditioned for the payment of just compensation in accordance with section 3 of this act to the United States in trust for the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians. Upon the delivery of a deed for said right-of-way and the acceptance of such deed by the State, title to said right-of-way shall vest in the State of North Carolina and right to the just compensation required in section 3 of this act shall vest in the United States, in trust for the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians.

Sec. 6. After the delivery and acceptance of a deed for said

SEC. 6. After the delivery and acceptance of a deed for said right-of-way, the United States and the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians shall each have the right to bring suit against the State of North Carolina for the enforcement of all obligations and rights running to or vested in either of them under this act, in the event of any controversy arising with respect to the amount to be paid as just compensation for said right-of-way or with respect to any other matters pertaining to said obligations and rights. Jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the District Court of the United States for the Western District of North Carolina to hear and decide any such cause in accordance with law and equity; to grant such relief therein to or against any party as may be appropriate and proper under the circumstances; and to issue all lawful process necessary for the accomplishment of the foregoing purposes. The Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians may intervene in, or be made a party to, any such suit brought by the United States may intervene in any such suit brought by the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians but shall not be made a party involuntarily. That promptly upon the institu-Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians but shall not be made a party involuntarily: Provided, however, That promptly upon the institution of any such action to which the United States is not a party the said band shall cause written notice of the pendency of the action to be served upon the United States district attorney for the Western District of North Carolina, and that upon the expiration of 60 days from the date when such notice is served the United States shall be bound by any judgment or other order thereafter entered in the proceedings the same as a party thereto. The practice, pleadings, forms, and modes of proceeding in any such cause shall conform, as near as may be, to the practice, pleadings, forms, and modes of proceeding in condemnation suits brought by the United States in said district court where title has passed the United States in said district court where title has passed under a declaration of taking; and the orders or judgments ren-dered in any such cause shall be appealable to the same extent and in the same manner, as near as may be, as like orders or judgments rendered in condemnation suits brought by the United States in said district court where title has passed under such a declaration. Acceptance of the deed for said right-of-way by the State of North Carolina shall constitute a consent to be sued under

SEC. 7. Payment for said right-of-way shall be made by the State of North Carolina to the United States in trust for the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians. All funds so received shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians, and shall be available for expenditure for such purposes as may be designated by the council of said band and approved by the Secretary of the Interior. In order to provide acceptable lands for purchase out of such funds the Secretary of the Interior, is barely authorized in his discretion to band and approved by the Secretary of the Interior. In order to provide acceptable lands for purchase out of such funds the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to grant to the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians the beneficial interest in any lands selected by the council of said band within the tracts in the vicinity of Ravensford, N. C., now owned by the United States and known, respectively, as the Ravensford tract, containing approximately 884 acres, and the Boundary Tree tract, containing approximately 322 acres; and the said Secretary is hereby directed to exclude from the Great Smoky Mountains National Park any lands so selected and granted: Provided, however, That the quarry site within the Ravensford tract shall not be granted to said band. Prior to the consummation of any such grant, payment shall be made for all lands included therein by the transfer of a sum equal to the fair market value of such lands, as determined by the Secretary of the Interior, from the funds placed to the credit of said band under this section to the credit of the fund "National Park Service, donations," which transfer the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to make upon request by the council of said band approved by the Secretary of the Interior. Funds so transferred shall be available for national park and monument uses, including the acquisition of lands for the Interior. Funds so transferred shall be available for national park and monument uses, including the acquisition of lands for inclusion in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. All lands purchased or otherwise acquired for the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians with the funds received under this section shall constitute a part of the Cherokee Indian Reservation in North Carolina, shall be held by the United States in trust for said band, and shall be nontaxable and nonalienable to the same extent as other lands within said reservation.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 2, line 7, after the word "Interior", insert "except in the Soco Calley Soco Calley."

Page 8, after line 6, add a new section as follows:
"SEC. 8. Nothing in this act shall be deemed to constitute a precedent for authorizing the Secretary of the Interior or any other officer of the United States to grant or take for any purpose any other Indian lands or property within the Cherokee Indian Reservation without the consent of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians." Cherokee Indians.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. Cole of Maryland and Mrs. O'Day asked and were given permission to revise and extend their own remarks.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include therein a statement by the national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

WAGE-HOUR AMENDMENTS

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, the fact that there was no objection to the unanimous-consent request submitted by the gentleman from Georgia to consider a bill amending the Wage-Hour Act exempting only rural telephone exchanges having under 500 phones makes it very obvious that the rule reported yesterday to make in order the consideration of the three bills amending the Wage and Hour Act will not be called up.

We will not have a chance to vote on the Barden bill, for which the Committee on Rules provided a rule. We had every reason to expect it would come before the House. As one who was a member of the Labor Committee and who attended the hearings on that bill and as one who made the motion to recommit the Wage-Hour Act when it passed, may I say that the will of Congress has been thwarted by the leadership by not permitting the rule to come before the House. I believe the Barden bill would have passed the House. Something more than rural telephone exchanges needs to be exempted from the law. I would not have objected when that matter came up, but not a word has been said since this action has been taken, which means that the administration is afraid to let it come to the floor. We will not have a chance to consider it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair agreed to recognize the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hoffman], who states he has a question of personal privilege to present.

Mr. RAYBURN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Texas. Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for a half minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN].

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, the House does not at this time seem to be inclined to consider very much legislation. especially any legislation of far-reaching importance. I have been asked, I guess, 50 times a day for the last week whether or not the so-called amendments to the wage-hour bill will be taken up for consideration during this session. The answer is, they will not.

Mr. SABATH rose.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN] yield to the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I do not. The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN] is recognized. How long does the gentleman desire?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Not very long.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is recognized for "not very long."

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, under the rule that means 1 hour, does it not?

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman presents a question of personal privilege, he is entitled to 1 hour.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I have a question of personal privilege to present, a question that also involves the privileges of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his question of personal privilege.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, this involves the integrity of the RECORD. Under date of July 27, when the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Keller] had the floor, certain remarks were made by me under a reservation of the right to object. I send to the Speaker's desk a printed copy of the RECORD and a transcript from the Official Reporters, which shows that all of those remarks made by me were stricken from the RECORD by the gentleman from Illinois. That is the question of personal privilege and of the privilege of the House I now present, and which will be followed by a motion.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is of the opinion that the gentleman presents a question affecting the privileges of the House and he is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I shall be very, very brief. Mr. Speaker, I raise this question because this is not the only instance in which the RECORD has not accurately reported the proceedings which have taken place on the floor. The question is not raised because the remarks which were stricken from the RECORD were deemed by me to be of any particular importance, but because it does involve the right of every Member, when he so desires, to have the remarks he made on the floor recorded in the RECORD.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.
Mr. DIRKSEN. Would the gentleman care to apprise the Members of the language that was stricken, so that we will know what it is all about?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I will. I read from the official transcript. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Keller] had the floor and said:

Mr. Keller. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 more minutes

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. Hoffman. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, was the gentleman present in the Labor Committee this morning when John Lewis made that statement?

Mr. Keller. Yes; I was. Mr. Hoffman. Did you offer any objection? Mr. Keller. I did not.

Mr. Hoffman. You thought it was true, did you? Mr. Keller. I did not ask you for that, or anybody else. Mr. Hoffman. No; but I am asking you. [Laughter.]

Now, all of those words were stricken from the Record, and Mr. Keller's remarks appear as one connected statement without any interruption, without showing that anyone else took part in the colloquy. If those words had been stricken by someone on the Republican side, by some tory Democrat-if there be such a political creature-who had attempted to undermine the Constitution by destroying the right of free speech and a free press, perhaps I would not have thought much about it, because I know that the various "economic royalists" and all those who venture to question the wisdom or adaptability, whatever it may be termed, of the present program to our national problems, are to be criticized, and their remarks perhaps should be stricken from the RECORD; at least, that appears to be the view of some people. But the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Keller] is a self-styled great liberal.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. What does the gentleman call a "liberal" today?

Mr. HOFFMAN. One who is willing to decide everything for us, solve every problem, every crisis, every emergency, without a moment's consideration, give away everyone's property except his own; something along that line. [Laughter.]

When the gentleman from Illinois, who is creating that great lake over there in his State for the benefit of the carp and the people who live around it, creating it at the expense of the taxpayers of the Nation for the benefit of the voters of his district, so that the "economic royalists" can build their homes down there on its shores, after the Government fixes it up, talks so much, so loudly, and, some may think, so eloquently, about free speech, I was almost prostrated by grief when I saw in the RECORD what the gentleman had done; that he had committed, to him, the unpardonable, of depriving a fellow Member of the great constitutional right to free speech. [Laughter.] You could hear the foundations of this great Capitol of ours fairly quake; see them rock when the gentleman struck from the Congressional Record those words. The words themselves were not of any importance. It is the principle that is involved that makes the question important, vital. You would not deny to a poor, humble, ignorant, unassuming, and uneducated Republican, who is not a Communist, who is not antilabor, the privilege, would you, of just putting in a few words here and there? The law, the Constitution, is for the protection of the weak, the lowly, those who are unable to defend themselves, as I am unable, incapable of defending myself from the mighty thrust of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Keller]. He is strong, magnificent in his presence; his voice is music that charms us all when he takes the floor, his logic irresistible when he discourses of carp and lakes for his district, all at Government expense. So when the gentleman from Illinois, who has written books-the great author and the great statesman, as he styles himself-strikes from the RECORD those remarks. I believe the RECORD should be corrected.

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas. Mr. GUYER of Kansas. The gentleman was revising his remarks without extending them, was he not?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I do not know about that. What he did was to strike from the RECORD, and that without permission, the remarks of another Member.

Mr. Speaker, I will not take any more time, because I know you are all in a hurry to get away.

Mr. Speaker, I send to the Clerk's desk a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

John Lewis made that statement?

"Mr. Keller. Yes; I was.
"Mr. Hoffman. Did you offer any objection?
"Mr. Keller. I did not.

"Mr. Hoffman. You thought it was true, did you?
"Mr. Keller. I did not ask you for that, or anybody else.
"Mr. Hoffman. No; but I am asking you. [Laughter.]"

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, the motion may be a little vague in that it states "after the words --." The reason for this is that the official stenographer's transcript of what the gentleman from Illinois said does not indicate where this colloquy belongs, so we will have to ask the gentleman from Illinois to help.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Wis-

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Does not the gentleman believe it would be a kindly act if the gentleman would hold his motion in abeyance and give the distinguished gentleman from Illinois a chance to ask unanimous consent to correct the error? I cannot believe that a great liberal would intentionally take it upon himself to censor the proceedings of the House.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Oh, I do not believe he did it either, in the spirit of censorship; probably his only thought was to preserve for posterity the purity, the continuity, of his thought; I just think it was a slip, you know, of the shears.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. It was inadvertently done, and the gentleman should have the opportunity to ask unanimous consent to correct the error.

Mr. HOFFMAN. I think the gentleman from Wisconsin is right, because if you will refer to the stenographer's minutes you will notice that the gentleman from Illinois just took the shears and clipped off his set speech, inserted it, added to it here, and crossed out the remarks which I made. So I have not the slightest objection; in fact, I will be happy if the gentleman from Illinois wishes to make such a request, for I really love him, admire him, and think he does much to relieve what on occasion might otherwise be a dull day.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Why does not the gentleman yield to the gentleman from Illinois so he can ask unanimous consent to make the correction?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I will be glad to do that.

Mr. KELLER. I am not asking the gentleman to do that. The gentleman has his motion.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Suit yourself about it, but I would be glad to have you do it.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Michigan, to correct the RECORD.

The motion was agreed to.

SURVEY AND STUDY OF THE NATIONAL PARKS, NATIONAL MONU-MENTS, AND NATIONAL SHRINES

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unainmous consent for the present consideration of House Resolution 284.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

House Resolution 284

Resolved, That, for the purpose of making a survey and obtaining information necessary as a basis for legislation, the Committee on the Public Lands, as a whole, or by subcommittee, is authorized and directed to make a survey and study of the national parks, national monuments, and national shrines and of the administration of them and of the laws, rules, and regulations pertaining to them. The committee shall report to the House, as soon as practicable after January 3, 1940, the result of its findings, together with such recommendations for legislation as it deems desirable.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

Mr. TABER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that to consider a resolution such as this by unanimous consent—I do not know that a report from the committee is available—is rather a broad-scale proposition. How much money will this survey cost?

Mr. DEROUEN. Not to exceed $2,000.

Mr. RICH. When will the report come in?

Mr. DEROUEN. The report will be made during the recess of Congress, after the Congress adjourns.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, only a short while ago a volume came to my desk, and I am sure it went to every Member of the House, which apparently indicated that a survey had been made by the Department of the Interior along the same line. Is not that true?

Mr. Derouen. That is where the trouble lies. None of us in the committee or in the Congress knows anything about all these monuments and parks for which we have been appropriating money. It has been approximately 16 years since a survey has been made by the Congress of this subject. It seems to me it would be proper and the part of wisdom that some committee of the Congress go and see for themselves about these monuments and parks and report to the Congress.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Is the matter so urgent that we cannot investigate a little further, at least until tomorrow, and see what sort of investigation the Department of the Interior has already made?

Mr. DEROUEN. The Department of the Interior has no objection to this resolution, and your minority leader is in agreement with it. We have consulted all parties concerned, and they are all in agreement that this would be a very conservative thing to do.

Mr. DIRKSEN. But they may not be aware that such an investigation has already been made and a report prepared in document form.

Mr. DEROUEN. From what I hear, there seems to be a disposition in the Congress not to accept the surveys of Mr. Ickes' Department.

Mr. RICH. Reserving the right to object, I realize the Speaker will make the appointment, but who is going to make the recommendations to the Speaker? Will the members come from the Public Lands Committee or from the Committee on Appropriations that makes the appropriations for these parks?

Mr. Derouen. The appointments will be made by the Speaker, and he will appoint, according to the usual custom, members of the minority and the majority, and then the matter will be referred to the Committee on Accounts.

Mr. RICH. I am interested in knowing whether the members of the committee will be from the Committee on the Public Lands or not.

Mr. DEROUEN. Yes; they will be from the Public Lands Committee.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understand there has been a survey made, and the survey has been made available by the Department of the Interior. I wonder if the gentleman would not withdraw his request now and look at the copy of that survey that is in the possession of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Dirksen], and see if that does not answer his purpose before going ahead with a resolution tying us up to this expenditure?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I may say to the gentleman that if there is no duplication, I would have no reason to object, but I do not believe there ought to be overlapping of work in this field.

Mr. CARTER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, what is to be the nature of this investigation?

Mr. Derouen. It is not to be an investigation. Let us be frank about it on both sides. I have been on the Public Lands Committee during the last 12 years, and my experience has been that whenever we bring any bills in here that have to do with monuments or parks, very few Members know anything about them. We have appropriated a lot of money for these purposes and Congress does not know anything about such matters, and it would therefore seem that $2,000 would not be a large expenditure for the purpose of informing the Congress through a survey made by Members from both sides of the House, who will perform the work and tell the Members of the Congress what they have found. No one knows what has been done in the past, and I have no interest personally further than what I have just stated.

Mr. CARTER. Does not the gentleman know that that information is all available through the Department of the Interior, and all he has to do is to send a communication down there and get the information?

Mr. Derouen. I thought I knew about these matters myself; but let us be fair and frank about it. Every time I bring any of those reports from the Interior Department or from any of the bureaus, I am told that they are not correct. Now, what do I know about it? I do not know anything about it personally, and I am trying to be fair about the matter.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEROUEN. I yield.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Why does not the gentleman write a personal letter to Mr. Ickes?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I have requested that the gentleman hold this over until tomorrow. I would like to get some further information

Mr. Derouen. May I call the gentleman's attention to this fact. We are about to adjourn, and unless we act on this matter now it will be too late to have it sent back to the committee and have appropriate action taken. If we adjourn and there is nothing done about this, we will be in the same position we have been in every year in the past.

Mr. CARTER. I think the gentleman will have time tomorrow to bring this up and for the present, Mr. Speaker, I am going to object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard.

FIVE YEARS OF THE TRADE-AGREEMENTS PROGRAM

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? There was no objection.

RESULTS FAVORABLE

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, heretofore I have briefly set forth some of the reasons why it was necessary for this Nation to reverse the tariff policy of the previous administration in order to improve the conditions of foreign trade. I have pointed out that the method chosen for accomplishing this was a logical and forward step in taking the tariff out of logrolling politics. Today I intend to discuss some of the results of that program.

After 5 years of the reciprocal-trade agreements program, examination of the best statistical and other evidence available, obliges one to conclude that it has been a decided success. Quite naturally the program has not satisfied everyone. Some people were afraid that that which ought to happen might happen under the program, therefore they opposed it from the very outset. Some people believe that they have well-founded grievances against certain action taken in the operation of the program. It was not expected that some of those who had part of their unwarranted and excessive tariff subsidies taken away from them would applaud such action. They were not expected to view the program from a broad national viewpoint.

There are other individuals opposed to trade agreements who believe in taking all without giving anything in return. Some say they believe in reciprocity, but when it comes to reduction of the towering trade barriers they only give lip service to the principle. They would have us gain concessions in trade without giving any in return. Then there are certain organizations whose very existence depends upon faultfinding and criticism; that is their stock in trade. No difference how convincing the evidence, they would not admit of success. They prophesied that trade agreements would be bad for the country and they would have it so. But it can fairly be said that the Nation as a whole endorses the tradeagreements program and believes that it has been successful in its accomplishments. I believe the results of this program give some justification for rejecting the theory that nations cannot have greater economic harmony. Although no one holds that we have arrived at the millennium since the passage of the Trade Agreements Act, our foreign trade has managed to "ride out the storm in comparative security"; its condition is much better than some other phases of our economy which have not had the advantage of such a constructive and far-reaching program. There is good reason to hold that the United States at last has adopted for itself a realistic tariff and commercial policy which fits its needs. The program goes a long way in adjusting the Nation to world conditions as they actually exist.

MEASURING TANGIBLE RESULTS OF TRADE AGREEMENTS

What then does the record show for 5 years? In the first place, agreements with 20 countries—21 agreements, including 2 with Canada—have been negotiated. The Czechoslovak agreement has been nullified. An agreement with Venezuela is under negotiation and a supplemental agreement is also being negotiated with Cuba. Exploratory conversations are going on with several countries and some other of the present agreements may soon be reopened for revision. All nations are invited to aline themselves with this program of trade betterment. It is not an exclusive program for countries of a particular political ideology. It is comprehensive enough to include all forms of government.

The trade with the countries with which agreements have been concluded represents almost 60 percent of our total foreign commerce. This means that within the framework of the principles of fairness and soundness of the trade agreements the countries with which we carry on more than half of our foreign commerce apparently believe that a reversal of the trend of recent years is necessary, and have accepted our leadership; they have, by their acts, expressed a willingness to cooperate in liberalizing foreign trade. In addition to Canada, our good neighbor to the north and our second largest market, the list of countries includes Great Britain, our largest single market, France, Cuba, the Netherlands, and Brazil, other large markets and important suppliers of raw materials needed in the United States.

Our total trade embraced with these countries amounted in 1937 to over $2,000,000,000. About 68 percent of this trade has been covered by concessions granted and received, including bindings of present rates of duty and binding items on the free list. These guaranties are of considerable importance in stabilizing commerce which is greatly needed at the present juncture of world events. United States exports have almost doubled since 1932 and 1933, the low years preceding the Trade Agreements Act. It is quite possible that much of this trade would have been regained without any reciprocity program. No one, so far as I know, attributes all this gain in trade to the agreements alone. Many other factors have entered into the picture. Nevertheless, a comparison of exports on a broad 2-year basis, 1934 and 1935, with the last 2 years of trade agreements, 1937 and 1938, shows an increase to agreement countries of about 61 percent; exports to nonagreement countries for the same comparative periods increased by about 38 percent. It has been suggested by opponents of trade agreements that the gains in exports have largely been in war materials. It may be true that considerable quantities of materials which can be used in war have been exported, but this is in no way a result of the trade-agreements program. No two people seem to agree on what constitutes war materials, and in final analysis practically everything which is exported may be utilized during a conflict. Tabulations have been placed in the RECORD, including petroleum products, trucks, and other articles of peaceful commerce as war materials. In any case, we would have had sales of war materials quite apart from trade agreements. No special efforts are made to gain concessions abroad for our war materials, as some would have us believe.

I submit as part of my remarks a table from the Department of Commerce showing the summary of trade gains under the trade agreements by agreement and nonagreement countries:

Exports represent only one side of a two-way street. Both sides must be open if the street is going to carry anything like a maximum of traffic. So it is with trade; it must move in both directions. Some groups, from a purely selfish viewpoint, would like to have exports without imports. We cannot have, and we may as well reconcile ourselves to the fact, exports without imports. It takes trade in both directions to make healthful commerce. It cannot be repeated too often that we must receive goods and services if we are to send them out.

From the point of view of relative gains in trade, with agreement and nonagreement countries, the import picture is less favorable than that for the exports-that is, the imports from nonagreement countries have increased more than have imports from agreement countries. In a similar broad comparison of a 2-year preagreement and postagreement periods, 1934 and 1935 compared with 1937 and 1938, imports from agreement countries increased by about 35 percent, while imports from nonagreement countries increased by 37 percent. This greater increase of imports from nonagreement countries was largely accounted for by raw materials principally from nonagreement countries. Products such as corn, as well as other agricultural products brought in because of the drought of 1936, happened to have come from nonagreement countries. This smaller increase in imports from nonagreement countries certainly justifies the conclusion that trade agreements have not ruined domestic industries by increasing imports.

If excessive barriers had been lowered, but no increase had been shown in trade we might assume that the removal of trade impediments prevented our foreign commerce from falling still lower. In some instances, a well-deserved victory may be won by merely holding the present position. A mere stabilizing of trade against the return to the desperate conditions of 1932 and 1933 might be considered a substantial measure of success.

The figures which I have just quoted as stated came from the Department of Commerce. I find that an independent study of the results of trade agreements appeared in the summer issue of the Harvard Business Review (p. 486). (Is the United States Losing Its Foreign Trade? Charles A. Bliss, assistant professor of business statistics, Harvard University.)

Opponents of trade agreements cannot say that this analysis is Government propaganda. As a matter of fact, the article was generally unfavorable to the program. I quote the following:

The United States without question has gained an increasing share in the imports of agreement countries since the signing of trade treaties. This observation holds true even when Canada and France, the two largest countries in the agreement group, are excluded from the comparison.

The evidence on exports to the United States is not so clear. It suggests, however, that our importance as a customer has not increased parallel to our importance as a seller.

In other words, export trade has increased more with agreement than with nonagreement countries and imports were down in relation to exports, especially during 1938. With such unbiased evidence, it seems a little farfetched for opponents of trade agreements to maintain that we have lost out in bargaining for trade and that other countries have "gotten the best of us." Viewed in the light of our creditor position, it would seem that we have succeeded almost too well, particularly when it is recalled that our exports in 1938 exceeded imports by more than a billion dollars.

UNITED STATES GAINS IN RELATIVE POSITION IN TRADE WITH WORLD The following figures from the above-quoted article of the Harvard Business Review seem significant:

	American exports as share of world exports	American imports as share of world imports
1934	11. 3 12. 0 12. 2 13. 5 14. 0	9. 0 11. 8 12. 8 13. 3 10. 0

From these figures it is seen that from 1934 to 1938 we improved our position by increasing our exports from about 11 to 14 percent of world exports while imports in 1934 were 9 percent of world total, and, after reaching about 13 percent in 1937, fell back to only 10 percent of the world total in 1938. The preliminary figures of foreign trade for the first 5 months of 1939 show a tendency for the importexport situation to more nearly equalize.

Not only has the trade of the United States been improved absolutely with agreement countries, but also relatively in relation to trade with some other countries. For example, Netherlands imports from the United States increased by 71 percent in 1937 over 1935, while the total increase in Netherlands imports from all countries was only 35 percent. Belgian imports from the United States increased more than 70 percent in 1937 over 1934, while total Belgian imports increased by only 44 percent. Swiss imports from the United States increased in 1937 over 1935 by 28 percent, while total Swiss imports from all countries increased only 1 percent.

EFFECTS OF AGREEMENTS ON AGRICULTURE

There has been a great deal said about the effects of the program in its relationship to agriculture. Many statistics have been placed in the Congressional Record in an attempt to show that trade agreements have operated in such a way as to injure agriculture. Some opponents have been so brash as to suggest that, for some reason or other, those sponsoring the program desire to aid industry to the detriment of agriculture. Of course, any such suggestion is pure imagination.

One method which has been used, in an attempt to mislead farmers, is to show a long list of imports of agricultural products for the depression years in comparison with the relative prosperous years of 1936 and 1937. In most instances there have been increases over the extreme depression low. In presenting the list there is always the implication, if not direct statement, that the increased imports are the results of trade agreements. In these tables wheat and corn have been shown, the importations of which largely resulted from the drought of 1934 and 1936; these lists include wool, hides and skins, and flaxseed, and other products which have always been imported because we do not produce enough for our own use. None of these items have been subject to a reduction in the general rates of duty in trade agreements.

Now some guarded reductions in duty on agricultural products, such as cattle, cheese, and cream, have been made. Opponents would make a much better case against the agreements if they limited their statistics and statements to those items which have been included; they realize that they are hard-pressed for a case and overstep themselves by padding their lists. Happily, farmers are becoming aware of these tactics of misrepresentation; they are gradually getting the truth of the matter.

Lists of increased imports of certain agricultural products for a few months of 1939 over 1938 have been inserted in the Congressional Record during the present session of Congress with the same misleading implications that the increases resulted from trade agreements. Some of these imports, such as wool and hides and skins, have increased because our economic condition is happily improving over last year and industry is utilizing more raw materials. The duties on these imports have not been reduced; the increased imports are a sign of the business upturn.

Since the trade agreement with Canada went in effect in 1936 there has been a desultory attack by some of the dairy groups because of small imports of dairy products. We have heard criticism because of the reduction in duty on cream. This well illustrates how unwarranted the attack has been against the program. For the first 6 months of 1939 exactly 567 gallons which was 0.04 percent of the annual quota set for imports of cream entered the United States under the reduced duty. Although the rates of duty were lowered the imports of cheese under that trade agreement have never approached the predepression level. As a matter of fact, imports of 1938 were only slightly above those for the emergency period of 1932 and 1933.

The following excerpt from an editorial of the Times, Fairmont, W. Va., illustrates the nature of the attack against the program and gives a substantial answer to the charges:

There is persistent reactionary Republican propaganda to the effect that the trade agreements have "directly resulted in an increasing flood of foreign pork into the United States." This assertion has been made frequently in the past 2 months on postcards broadcast by G. O. P. organizations and their aid societies.

Instead of the trade-agreements program having increased the imports of pork, as the Republicans claim, the figures show that the imports for the year 1934, the year in which the reciprocal trade agreements program was enacted by Congress, exceeded the imports for 1938 by more than half a million pounds.

The best over-all information available does not indicate that agriculture has come out on the short end of this program. The Department of Agriculture has found that the farm exports to the 16 countries with which agreements were in effect during the fiscal year 1937 and 1938 in comparison with the fiscal year 1935 and 1936 increased by $102,000,000 or 55 percent, while to nonagreement countries the increase was $20,000,000 or only 3 percent. For the same years of comparison, imports of agricultural products from agreement countries show a minus 3 percent, while imports of such products from nonagreement countries show a plus of 4 percent. The importation of agricultural products shows a result that is somewhat surprising in view of some of the criticisms which have been made in connection with the agreements. I realize that these figures represent an over-all average and that there is a certain weakness in the use of such averages, but these are not mere accidental relationships. I also realize that on a few items such as cattle, an increase in imports over the preagreement period is shown. This has occurred for a number of reasons other than lower rates of duty. This increase in imports of cattle does not necessarily mean that the cattle industry, however, has been seriously injured by the agreement with Canada. The limitation in imports at the reduced duty through the quota, guarantees the domestic producers about 97 or 98 percent of the domestic market.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Rich] has taken the floor of the House on frequent occasions to point out the low levels of exports of cotton; he alleges that this condition is a result of trade agreements. From his expressed interest one might believe that many of his constituents are cotton producers and he is espousing their cause in Congress. One way to aid the cotton farmers is to assist them in obtaining lower tariffs and consequently lower prices on the manufactured products which they purchase and which are effectively protected by the tariff.

To anyone with a rudimentary knowledge of conditions in the world trade in cotton it must be apparent that the principal cotton-using countries of the world depend heavily upon the United States for their supplies of raw cotton, and under such conditions are not likely to establish, and have not established, tariff or other barrier against imports of American cotton. It is not tariff barriers that have checked our exports of cotton, but the systems of blocked exchanges, the shortage of American dollars, and the disparity in prices between American and foreign growths of cotton. To expect trade agreements to lower tariff barriers against American cotton when there were no such barriers is asking a good deal

On the other hand, the trade-agreements program has helped foreign customers to obtain American dollars with which to buy American cotton, it throws its influence against the tangle of currency and exchange restrictions and it has very definitely—especially in the case of the United Kingdom, which is one of the largest foreign customers for cotton—obtained guaranties against future discrimination or barriers to imports of American cotton. Other agreements make a similar guaranty. To assert that the trade-agreements program has been a factor in the decline of the United States foreign market for cotton is to ignore and deny the main facts in the case.

Entirely eliminating cotton from the gains and losses between 1935-36 and 1937-38 we have an increase of $106,-000,000, or 108 percent, in gains of agricultural exports to agreement countries, and a gain of $103,000,000, or 58 percent, to nonagreement countries. Of the $106,000,000 increase in exports of foreign products, excepting cotton, to 16 trade-agreement countries during the period under consideration, the largest part was in our exports to Canada. Practically all of this increase occurred in items upon which Canadian duties were reduced by the trade agreement with that country. Furthermore, the expansion in quantity of exports to Canada of some of the leading commodities on which Canadian duty reductions were granted, was proportionately greater than the expansion of our exports of those same commodities to the rest of the world. These facts seem significant because Canada's economy closely parallels our own. The second largest part of the $106,000,000 increase occurred in the exports of farm products, other than cotton, to the Netherlands, which rose by $28,000,000, or by 224 percent. An examination also shows that the increase took place in items upon which the Netherlands duties were reduced by the terms of the trade agreement. Further, the third largest increase occurred in exports to Belgium, which rose by $19,-000,000, or an increase of 208 percent. These are some examples of the increases in agricultural products to agreement countries which gave us important concessions.

It is readily understood why some trade-agreement countries do not show equally favorable results with respect to agricultural products; several agreement countries themselves are primarily agricultural. Superficially unfavorable situations with respect to individual countries and specific items of trade can and have been found by critics of the program, who are primarily interested in discounting the wholesome effects of increased trade on our economy. I have alluded to some of them.

Literally hundreds of concessions for our agricultural products have been obtained from foreign countries. The list is too long to attempt to enumerate. Those who wish these details are referred to the hearings before the Senate Finance Committee on March 1939, in connection with the proposed oil and fats taxes. A mere listing of these items covers 12 pages in the printed hearings. Now it is realized that not every one of these concessions has worked out 100 percent as was hoped and expected. But many concessions, such as the increased pork quota and removal of duty from lard by the agreement with Great Britain, are of tremendous importance to agriculture.

TRADE AGREEMENTS NOT ENDANGERED BY BILATERALISM

In view of the recent treaty for exchange of agricultural products for critical war materials with the United Kingdom, it has been suggested that the trade-agreements program has "washed-up" and that we are forced to follow the methods of the dictators in order to dispose of our surpluses. To my mind, that is a hasty and not a well-considered conclusion. In the first place, the proposed exchange of cotton for rubber relates to only two products; the arrangement was entered into as an emergency means of reducing surplus cotton and laying up war stores; the matter of forcing blocked exchange, as is the usual practice in barter deals, is not involved in the arrangement with the United Kingdom.

There have been some suggestions that countries trading on the narrow barter or compensation method have gained a greater proportion of trade than the United States: that we cannot cope with their methods. A recent release from the Department of Commerce shows that imports from the United States into 16 countries with which reciprocal-trade agreements were in effect prior to 1938 expanded on an average of approximately 40 percent in value in the years 1936, 1937, and 1938 over the 2 years, 1934 and 1935, while imports into those same countries from Germany increased by an average of about 2 percent in value. In terms of dollars, the release shows that the average annual gain in imports from the United States was approximately $297,746,000, while that of Germany was only $12,244,000. After all necessary qualifications in the listing of countries, I believe those figures are significant. The advantage to the United States may be even more pronounced than revealed by statistical results when account is taken of the heavy export subsidies paid by Germany on many commodities. The system of exchange of goods for goods or barter, clearing, compensating, or other similar trade programs upon first trial seem attractive to other countries, but this method of trading in reality limits the expansion of international commerce. One of the main difficulties to be encountered by countries embracing barter agreements is the creation of large blocked balances which can be liquidated only by the purchase of products in the particular country. American concerns at the present time which have done some bartering on their own are having trouble in liquidating their balances in Germany. It has been necessary for some countries to accept inferior merchandise at higher than competitive prices in order to liquidate their balances arising through barter arrangements. This system of trade may also lead to economic domination of smaller countries by the larger trading nations.

To follow that system is to follow a system of further regimentation. The trade-agreements program is the very antithesis of regimentation. It is based upon the fundamental proposition that trade flows more freely with less restrictions. Barter arrangements and bilateral balancing agreements are negotiated under the conditional most-favored-nation principle. This system has been proposed for the United States. It seems rather odd that those who have opposed further regimentation for the United States oppose trade agreements and favor a policy which would regiment our foreign commerce to the *n*th degree.

REPUBLICANS SUPPORT UNREGIMENTED TRADE

I find that numerous Republican papers and leaders understand the difference between freeing trade and regimenting it. Those in favor of less regimentation support the trade-agreements program. In a recent editorial the Toledo Blade (June 19) commented on Secretary Hull's invitation to the dictator countries to join in his program of unregimenting trade and stated:

If Chancelor Hitler reacts in character, he will spurn Secretary Hull's invitation. However, the world has not forgotten Hitler's recent speech in which he asserted Germany must export or die. The food-ration cards give indisputable evidence of the failure of the Nazi plan of enforced economic self-sufficiency.

Trick currency schemes and subsidies on exports by the Reich do not have much guarantee of permanency. Meantime, the dictators are quick to complain that they are cut off from raw materials. The American reciprocal-trade plan shuts off no nation from any supplies if that country is willing to enter into the plan.

Those in the United States who have been skeptical about the merits of the Hull plan may do well to take a look at the figures. * * *

These figures have arguments which will force attention even in autocracies walled in by propaganda.

While on the question of Republican support, I want to point out that several of my colleagues, Congressmen Rankin, Coffee of Washington, and Kitchens have indicated several of these endorsements in their remarks on trade agreements during the present session of Congress. I do not wish to further burden the Record with these expressions and intend to mention only one or two.

The following excerpts from the Journal-Times of Racine, Wis.—June 23—is typical of the expressions of Republican papers favoring trade agreements:

These trade pacts have been successful. The countries involved—ours, as much as theirs—have experienced mutual benefits and are willing to go further along the same line by lowering a few more of the barriers blocking trade.

Last year, according to the Department of Commerce, we exported 9 percent of our production of movable goods of all sorts. It was the best year since 1930. That may sound like a small market to be concerned about, but it makes the difference between profit and loss for many industries. If the 9 percent can be increased and varied even a little, it will mean benefit to more industries and to the whole country.

The trade pacts are based on the recognition that we must sell abroad if we are to keep up our own standard of living and keep our own production thriving, and also that we cannot keep on selling unless we buy more goods or raw materials from foreign countries.

INTANGIBLE RESULTS OF THE TRADE-AGREEMENTS PROGRAM

There are more or less intangible but important results of the program which cannot be statistically measured. Under this program, policies of retaliation and ill will toward American products have been replaced by policies of good will and commercial cooperation in many parts of the world. The United States, I believe, is today exerting a profound influence in the direction of trade liberalization which is somewhat in keeping with our responsibility. Costly discriminations against American products have been eliminated, and guaranties have been secured against future discrimination not only in the countries with which agreements have been concluded but in countries which are not now in the orbit of these agreements. Through the most-favorednation principle these countries have modified their treatment of our commerce. It would seem evident that the effect of the broad American program must be world-wide and profound in its implications. In the words of Secretary Hull:

The program * * * offers the only practical alternative to a drift toward the anarchy of economic warfare, with all its disastrous consequences for the peace and progress of man. Its workability has been demonstrated beyond a shadow of a doubt. It can be embraced by all nations alike, without exception, and to the benefit of each and all.

As a matter of fact, it might be said that this program holds out the olive branch to all countries which care to engage in fair trade, carried on in accordance with the golden rule of commerce.

An important intangible result of the trade-agreements program is the favorable attention it has received throughout the world. The several conferences among the American countries have generally endorsed the economic principles of the present Secretary of State. The basic principles of the program are being put into operation by countries that have not yet negotiated agreements with the United States.

The International Chamber of Commerce, representing business organizations of many countries, has expressed the desire to follow the leadership of the United States in its efforts to mitigate existing trade barriers. This organization strongly advocates trade agreements with strict observance of unconditional most-favored-nation policy.

It is interesting to note that in his annual report as reported by the New York Times, former Governor Winant, of New Hampshire, Director of the International Labor Office and an outstanding American citizen who has favored the Hull policy, stated:

Economic isolation is not the solution of the problems presented by the unequal distribution of natural resources and by needs for markets unless the workers are prepared to work longer hours, eat less and a lower quality of food, and live in poorer dwellings.

The Economic Intelligence Section of the League of Nations, which incidentally is still performing an important function as a clearing house for information and making important studies relative to economic matters, has endorsed the program and calls attention to the gains in trade derived from its operation.

TRADE AGREEMENTS A PEACE EFFORT

There has been some criticism because sponsors of the present program have maintained that it is related to peace. It has been suggested by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish] and others that the peace talk has been brought in order to gain public support of this broad program. It is not a mere coincidence that practically all of the peace organizations of the United States endorse this phase of our foreign policy. The real basis for this program, as it relates to peace, may be found in a speech of the present Secretary of State made in this House more than 20 years ago-February 1919. If one fairly examines the basic principles of this program, the connection is not at all farfetched. Removing the causes of conflict, the basic principle of trade agreements would seem to be a fundamental to world peace. The dangers of the present regime of world trade arise out of systems of special privileges and arbitrary favors. Special bargaining arrangements, arbitrary allotments of quotas, unnatural diversion of trade allotments or markets to special customers all constitute fertile soil for international conflict. The equality of treatment principle tends to remove the preferential trading which is a prime cause of dissatisfaction and conflct between nations. Gen. Hugh Johnson, who is an outstanding critic of the present administration, said of the foreign policy of the United States, November 1938:

It is based on a recognition that a sound trade structure must be restored to the world to appease the handicaps imposed upon less favored nations by the vicious instruments of economic war. This is fundamental. There are few military wars in history that cannot be traced to some economic cause. The World War did not cease at the armistice. It merely changed its form from military war to economic war through the imposition of impossible reparations and the scramble toward economic self-sufficiency by tariffs, quotas, subsidies, currency manipulation, and dumping. Mr. Hull's patient effort to restore economic peace is a necessary prelude to political peace in the world. That is point No. 1 in the foreign policy of the United States, its very foundation.

The unfortunate case of Czechoslovakia has been alluded to by our critics as an example of what a trade agreement permits or does not do. It is said that we had a trade agreement with Czechoslovakia, but that it did not save that country. The point would not be worth answering if it had not been uttered by a leader of the opposition. This, of course, is a short-sighted and superficial position to take regarding the peace angle of trade agreements. Naturally a mere trade agreement with one country, when the people of a third country need markets and has a starving population, will not prevent a march to war if the necessities cannot be obtained by peaceful commerce; when nations, with teeming populations can no longer get access to markets peaceably they will attempt to take them by force; human beings are not willing to starve nor see their offspring suffer from want if they think they can obtain food by conquest or forced trading. With the world divided up into tight tariff compartments we can expect little but freebooting tactics such as have been practiced on Manchuria, Ethiopia, and Czechoslovakia. A statesmanlike trade-agreements program inaugurated 20 years ago might have prevented some of the recent conquests of markets and raw materials. But the world has for at least two decades gone in the wrong direction.

Thomas W. Lamont has endorsed the trade-agreements program as a peace measure in the following language:

As a lifelong Republican I am strongly for the work the present Secretary of State has done. His are distinct and helpful steps in building up the trade which is necessary to peace. We must make sacrifices. We must welcome lower teriffs, so in that way the standard of history will have contact the large trade of his large trade of history will have contact the large trade of history will have contact the large trade of history will have contact the large trade of history will be a large trade of history will be a large trade of the large trade of history will be a large trade of the large trade of history will be a large trade of the large trade of history will be a large trade of the large trade of history will be a large trade of the large trade of the large trade of history will be a large trade of the large trade of ard of living will rise and the threat of war will be lessened.

In spite of the various interpretations placed upon the words of the great Republican President McKinley regarding the particular kind of reciprocity treaties or agreements he advocated, I believe he must have had the peace angle in mind when he said:

Commercial wars are unprofitable; reciprocity treaties are in harmony with the spirit of the times; measures of retaliation are not. COMPACTS OR AGREEMENTS AMONG STATES ON THE ATLANTIC OCEAN

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 139) to authorize compacts or agreements between or among the States bordering on the Atlantic Ocean with respect to fishing in the territorial waters and the bays and inlets of the Atlantic Ocean on which such States border, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. MAPES. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman state just what is proposed by this bill?

Mr. BLAND. When an identical bill was on the Consent Calendar yesterday Mr. Wolcott asked that it be passed over. He has since withdrawn his objection.

All that is proposed is consent to the States bordering on the Atlantic Ocean, for any two or more States to enter into compacts with respect to the fisheries, and particularly dealing with migratory fish, and if they cannot agree upon compacts they have to come back to the Congress for ratification.

Mr. MAPES. I have no objection.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given to any two or more of the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida to enter into compacts or agreements not in conflict with any law of the United States, for cooperative effort and mutual assistance for the uniform, common, or mutual regulation of fishing or of any species of fish, mollusks, or crustacea in the territorial waters and bays and inlets of the Atlantic Ocean on which such States border or to which their jurisdiction otherwise extends and of anadromous fish spawning in the inland waters of those States.

Sec. 2. The consent of Congress is hereby granted to States other than those specified but which have jurisdiction over inland waters frequented by anadromous fish of the sea to enter into compacts frequented by anadromous fish of the sea to enter into compacts or agreements authorized by this act.

SEC. 3. The consent of Congress is hereby given to any of the aforementioned States to establish such agencies or authorities, joint or otherwise, as they may deem desirable for making effective compacts or agreements herein authorized. Sec. 4. Any compact or agreement herein authorized shall become binding or obligatory only upon those signatory States whose legislatures shall have approved such compact or agreement.

Sec. 5. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this joint resolution to hereby expressly recovered.

is hereby expressly reserved.

The joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, a few moments ago the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Lambertson] criticized the Rules Committee for not bringing in a rule on the wage and hour bill.

I want to say to him and to the House that the Rules Committee brought in every rule that a regular legislative committee of this House asked for. I regret very much that the last two rules which the committee brought before the House for consideration, the lending bill and the housing bill, were defeated. That was very important and beneficial legislation, but it got nowhere. And I noted that the gentleman from Kansas voted against both of those bills.

Now, the gentleman from Kansas shows a deep interest in the wage and hour bill, which contemplates the destruction of benefits voted the American wage earner during the past session. Bear in mind that the Labor Committee never asked for a rule on this bill. In my opinion the Rules Committee was exceeding its authority in granting a rule, and although I was bound as chairman of the committee to accept the majority vote to grant a rule, because I feel that such action is against all precedents and rules of the House, I have refused to call same up. If anyone is to be criticized for such action it is me, and not the leaders of the House.

Mr. LAMBERTSON rose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair thinks the Chair should recognize the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Lambert-

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I call the attention of the gentleman from Illinois to the fact that I did not criticize the Rules Committee. I said that the Rules Committee had reported the three proposed bills and that the House had every reason to believe that they would come up before we adjourned, but that the leadership of this House was denying the House the chance in this session of Congress to vote on any amendments aside from this one exempting the rural telephone exchanges; that the House, if it had a chance would pass the Barden amendments. I did not say the Rules Committee had not reported the rule.

Mr. SABATH. Did not the gentleman vote against both rules brought in by the Committee on Rules which would have meant a great deal to agriculture, one, day before yesterday, and one today?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Yes. Neither the spending nor the housing bill means anything to agriculture-only a drain. What it needs is rain.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection it is so ordered.

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I have had many requests through the mail for extracts from the writings of ex-Senator John James Ingalls. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein a eulogy on Ben Hill, of Georgia, paragraphs from Blue Grass and the sonnet Opportunity, and to insert them at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, the object of this brief sketch is to again call the attention of the Congress and the public to the superlative literary productions of Hon. John James Ingalls, former United States Senator from Kansas, who a half century ago was the most colorful figure in the public life of the Capital and the most eloquent orator of his time as well as a great poet and essayist. I can give only very brief quotations from his most noted productionsone from his eulogies, one from his essays, and one from his poetry.

Upon the death of Senator B. H. Hill, of Georgia, in 1883, Senator Ingalls delivered one of his greatest eulogies, from which I quote:

Ben Hill has gone to the undiscovered country.

Whether his journey thither was but one step across an imperceptible frontier, or whether an interminable ocean, black, unfluctuating, and voiceless, stretches between these earthly coasts and those invisible shores, we do not know.

Whether on that August morning after death he saw a more glorious sun rise with unimaginable splendor above a celestial horizon, or whether his apathetic and unconscious ashes still sleep in cold obstruction and insensible oblivion, we do not know. Whether his strong and subtle energies found instant exercise in another forum, whether his dextrous and disciplined faculties are now contending in a higher Senate than ours for supremacy, or whether his powers were dissipated and dispersed with his parting breath, we do not know.

Whether his passions, ambitions, and affections still sway, attract, and impel; whether he yet remembers us as we remember him, we do not know.

These are the unsolved, the insoluble problems of mortal life and human destiny which prompted the troubled patriarch to ask that momentous question for which the centuries have given no answer: "If a man die, shall he live again?"

Every man is the center of a circle whose fatal circumference he cannot pass. Within its narrow confines he is potential, beyond it he perishes, and if immortality be a splendid but delusive dream, if the incompleteness of every career, even the longest and most fortunate, be not supplemented and perfected after its termination here, then he who dreads to die should fear to live, for life is a tragedy more desolate and inexplicable than death.

Of all the dead whose obsequies we have paused to solemnize in this Chamber I recall no one whose untimely fate seems so lamentable, and yet so rich in prophecy of eternal life, as that of Senator Hill. He had reached the meridian of his years. He stood upon the high plateau of middle life, in that serene atmosphere where temptation no longer assails, where the clamorous passions no more distract, and where the conditions are most favorable for noble and enduring achievements. * * *

He was competitive and unpeaceful. He was born a polemic and no more distract, and where the conditions are most lavorable for noble and enduring achievements. * * *

He was competitive and unpeaceful. He was born a polemic and controversialist, intellectually pugnacious and combative, so that he was impelled to defend any position that might be assailed or to attack any position that might be entrenched, not because the defense or the assault were essential, but because the positions were maintained and that those who held them became by that fact alone his adversaries. This tendency of his nature made his orbit erratic. He was meteoric rather than planetary, and flashed orbit erratic. He was meteoric rather than planetary, and flashed with irregular splendor rather than shone with steady and penetrating rays. His advocacy of any cause was fearless to the verge of temerity. He appeared to be indifferent to applause or censure for its own sake. He accepted intrepidly any conclusions that he reached, without inquiring whether they were polite or expedient.

His oratory was impetuous and devoid of artifice. He * * * His cratory was impetuous and devoid of artifice. He was not a posturer nor phrase monger. He was too intense, too earnest, to employ the cheap and paltry decorations of discourse. He never reconnoitered a hostile position nor approached it by stealthy parallels. He could not lay siege to an enemy, nor beleaguer him, nor open trenches, and sap and mine. His method was the charge and the onset. He was the Murat of senatorial debate.

But in the maturity of his powers and his fame, with unmeasured opportunities for achievement apparently before him, with great designs unaccomplished, surrounded by the proud and affectionate solicitude of a great constituency, the pallid messenger with the inverted torch beckoned him to depart. There are few scenes in history more tragic than that protracted combat with death. No man had greater inducements to live. But in the long transcripts adverses of an insidiate and mortal struggle against inexorable advances of an insidious and mortal malady he did not falter nor repine. He retreated with the aspect of a victor; and though he succumbed, he seemed to conquer. His sun went down at noon, but it sank amid the prophetic splendors of an eternal dawn.

With more than a hero's courage, with more than a martyr's fortitude, he waited the approach of the inevitable hour, and went to the undiscovered country.

Ingalls has received the admiration of the Englishspeaking world for at least three of his superlative compositions: The inimitable prose poem, Blue Grass; his unsurpassed eulogies; and his incomparable sonnet, Opportunity. Upon the rugged granite boulder which marks his last resting place is a bronze plaque bearing this epitaph, a part of a sentence from his masterpiece of prose, Blue Grass:

When the fitful fever is ended, and the foolish wrangle of the market and forum is closed, grass heals over the scar which our descent into the bosom of the earth has made, and the carpet of the infant becomes the blanket of the dead.

In the limit of this brief and faltering sketch I have time only for one paragraph of Blue Grass, the gem-like, polished beauty of which gives a hint of its character:

Grass is the forgiveness of Nature—her constant benediction. Fields trampled with battle, saturated with blood, torn with the ruts of the cannon, grow green again with grass, and carnage is forgotten. Streets abandoned by traffic become grass-grown like rural lanes, and are obliterated. Forests decay, harvests perish, flowers vanish, but grass is immortal. Beleaguered by the sullen hosts of winter, it withdraws into the impregnable fortress of its subterranean vitality, and emerges upon the first solicitation of spring. Sown by the winds, by wandering birds, propagated by the subtle horticulture of the elements which are its ministers and servants, it softens the rude outline of the world. Its tenacious fibers hold the earth in its place, and prevent its soluble components from washing into the wasting sea. It invades the solitude of deserts, climbs the inaccessible slopes and forbidding pinnacles of mountains, modifies climates, and determines the history, character, and destiny of nations. Unobtrusive and patient, it has immortal vigor and aggression. Banished from the thoroughfare and the field, it abides its time to return, and when vigilance is relaxed, or the dynasty has perished, it silently resumes the throne from which it has been expelled, but which it never abdicates. It bears no blazonry of bloom to charm the senses with fragrance or splendor, but its homely hue is more enchanting than the lily or the rose. It yields no fruit in earth or air, and yet should its harvest fail for a single year, famine would depopulate the world. the world

Shakespeare did everything better than anyone else-Shakespeare, who opened wide the portals of the human mind and soul and invited all the earth for guest; Shakespeare, who whispered into the vocabularies of the world the sweetest words that ever filtered through the hearts of men. Shakespeare did everything else better than anyone else. until Ingalis wrote Opportunity. Opportunity is the master sonnet of the English tongue. In poetry the sonnet is probably the most mechanical and artificial form of verse. consisting always of just 14 lines, a sort of automatic poem. It is the easiest kind of poem to write, and therefore it is most difficult to write a superior one. There are only a few worth remembering. Shakespeare, Milton, Wordsworth, and Elizabeth Barrett Browning wrote some good ones, but a better judge of literature than myself said that when he looked for one superior to Ingalls' Opportunity he looked in vain. On the walls of my office in Washington I have a facsimile in his own handwriting.

Critics have nagged at this poem as sinister in its gesture to fatalism, and many have attempted to answer Opportunity with another sonnet declaring that every morning opportunity knocks; but their music fades in the splendor of Ingalls' orchestration, for, say what you will of the philosophy of Ingalls' sonnet, the stately march of its majestic music sets all the orchestras of the soul to singing.

OPPORTUNITY

Master of human destinies am I! Fame, love, and fortune on my footsteps wait. Cities and fields I walk; I penetrate Deserts and seas remote, and passing by Hovel and mart and palace—soon or late I knock unbidden once at every gate! If sleeping, wake—if feasting, rise before I turn away. It is the hour of fate, And they who follow me reach every state Mortals desire, and conquer every foe Save death, but those who doubt or hesitate. Save death; but those who doubt or hesitate, Condemned to failure, penury, and woe, Seek me in vain and uselessly implore. I answer not, and I return no more.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, on roll call No. 152, I was unavoidably absent from the Chamber on official business. Had I been present I would have voted "nay."

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

CITY OF PIERRE, S. DAK.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 6446) amending section 4 of the act entitled "An act to authorize the city of Pierre, S. Dak., to construct, equip, maintain, and operate on Farm Island, S. Dak., certain amusement and recreational facilities; to charge for the use thereof; and for other purposes."

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, has the bill been reported?

Mr. MUNDT. Yes; the bill has been reported. It was called on the Consent Calendar last Monday and objected to by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Schulte]. I have since gone over the bill with the gentleman from Indiana and he has withdrawn his objection.

Mr. COCHRAN. Will the gentleman explain the bill

Mr. MUNDT. This bill simply corrects legislation passed in the last session setting up a game refuge in the Missouri River. That legislation was inadvertently drawn so stringently that it prevented the game wardens from controlling predatory animals. This bill corrects that situation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4 of the act entitled "An act to authorize the city of Pierre, S. Dak., to construct, equip, maintain, and operate on Farm Island, S. Dak., certain amusement and recreational facilities; to charge for the use thereof; and for other purposes", is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "Nothing herein shall be construed to prohibit the said Island from removing therefrom, by such means as it may deem appropriate or advisable, such wild bird or other animal, except migratory birds, unless authorized by a permit issued pursuant to the Migratory Bird Treaty Act, that may become detrimental to the maintenance of said island as a wild game refuge, park, or forest."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. Johns asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection.

There was no objection.

Mr. Speaker, when the gentleman from Georgia asked to have legislation passed by unanimous consent exempting 500,000 employees of telephone exchanges from the Wage and Hour Act, we were led to believe that we were going to have other amendments to the Wages and Hours Act considered. Had we known that it was only going to be the telephone exchange operators who were to be covered and that the administration was only in favor of that kind of legislation, I question very much if that bill would have gone through for the reason if objection had been registered we might have obtained additional legislation so far as amendments to the Wages and Hours Act are concerned. When the majority leader says we will have no such legislation, the majority party is responsible for that kind of action.

INDUSTRIAL RECONSTRUCTION

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Keller]?

There was no objection.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of directing the attention of the public and of the Congress to the need for careful study of the grave problem of mass unemployment, I have this day introduced a bill, H. R. 7480, that may well serve as a working basis for our normal legislative processes of committee consideration, public hearings, amendment, and debate. It is in no sense an emergency measure, although the conditions that call it forth cry out for remedy; but if we have learned anything in the past 5 or 6 years, it is that the unemployment problem is not to be tackled as is a four-alarm fire.

Shortly after the Congress recesses I am sailing for Europe, at my own expense, to acquaint myself with what they are doing over there, especially in Sweden and Norway, in their efforts to deal with this most important problem of unemployment, and I hope to bring back with me some information that may be helpful to the Congress when this bill, and measures with similar objectives, shall be taken up at the next session of Congress.

The bill for an Industrial Reconstruction Act presents a detailed plan to require American industry to function in the public interest on the basis of an economy of abundance, with employment for all able and willing to work. It provides an administrative body, planning agencies, guarantees of the cost of increased production under expansion programs, credit facilities, and a Federal licensing system applicable directly to the major industries in and touching interstate commerce. It creates a Capital Issues Banking System, paralleling in structure the Federal Reserve Bank System, which will underwrite and market all securities affecting interstate commerce and place a prohibitive tax on private investment banking.

The plan is complete, worked out within the framework of democracy and the present American business system. It is not destructive of capitalism, the profit incentive, and/or individual initiative. It is based upon the findings of economists, industrial engineers, and other experts that a coordinated expansion program under governmental direction is practicable, and that through it we can realize full utilization of our productive capacities, natural resources, manpower, and available credit and capital reservoirs.

The plan is a constructive proposal whereby we may effect a permanent recovery from an era of panic, depression, industrial stagnation, and mass unemployment. Mass purchasing power, through employment for all, with higher wage and salary levels for those in the lower brackets, will keep pace with the controlled, ever-ascending spiral of increased production, with a national income of one hundred and thirty to one hundred and thirty-five billions as an attainable goal. The gradual elimination of Government spending for pump-priming purposes will accompany this development, and the augmented Federal revenues due to the increasing national income will make possible lower taxes, a balanced Federal Budget, and the reduction of the public debt.

There should be no hasty criticism of this plan. Prejudice should not speak prematurely. Let the captains of industry and finance and all others who will instinctively oppose it first make certain that they have a more sound and more workable substitute. Let them be definitely concrete in their counter proposals. The people of the United States are long wearied of specious generalizations about "restoring confidence in the business world," "business appeasement," "starting the flow of investment capital," "Budget balancing," "lowering the tax burden," and all such. The people want to be told exactly how these things are to be done and precisely what results may be expected to follow therefrom.

In the closing days of the first session of this Seventy-sixth Congress we have rejected the recovery-lending program and the increased housing program. We have curtailed the work-relief and direct-relief appropriations to such an extent that it is necessary to drop from relief rolls almost a million people at a time when still another million are certified as eligible and are waiting to get on the rolls if they are to be permitted to live. Of what, in God's name, can we be thinking? Does anybody believe that the way to recovery lies on "Unemployment and Starvation Highway No. 1"?

Obviously there can be found a safe and sound way out of the morass in which we have been struggling for now a decade. To deny that is to indict our civilization and the intelligence of our people, and to admit the utter failure of democratic processes and institutions. And the way out must not be a way by which a fortunate few escape from the morass by trampling the less fortunate under foot. It must be a way that is wide enough for a whole people, available to all, and affording equal security to all.

Such a way, I believe, may be constructed through the bill I have introduced.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, my colleague from California, Mr. Thomas F. Ford, was unavoidably detained. Had he been present this afternoon, he would have voted "yea" on the consideration of the rule for the so-called housing bill.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Appendix of the Record on the subjects of The Farmer Pays the Bill and The Agricultural Merry-Go-Round.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Murray]?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Schulte] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MAPES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHULTE. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MAPES. Would the majority leader, who is now occupying the Speaker's chair, care to say what the program for tomorrow will be?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Unless the bill authorizing a housing census is taken up tomorrow, the Chair knows of no business. The Speaker, who will be here tomorrow, may, of course, recognize someone. It is the intention now to bring up a bill authorizing the housing census, and that is all.

Mr. MAPES. That is the bill that provides for incorporating into the regular census a census of housing utilities, electrical equipment, and so forth?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is my understanding.

Mr. MAPES. The Committee on Rules has reported a rule?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Yes.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHULTE. I yield to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks on the polar exposition bill at the point in the Record where that bill was passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. Rogers]?

There was no objection.

Mr. SCHULTE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Sabath] may be granted the privilege of extending and revising the remarks he made today.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Schulte]? There was no objection.

MILK INVESTIGATION

Mr. SCHULTE. Mr. Speaker, some time ago a resolution was introduced in the House by the gentleman from Virginia asking for an investigation of the milk situation and all relations thereto in the District of Columbia and the milk shed surrounding the District. This resolution was referred to the District of Columbia Committee of the House which handles the affairs of the District. It was my privilege to serve as a member of the Subcommittee on Health, that considered the resolution and we went into it very thoroughly and extensively. As is well known, the committee was blocked in its every effort. Various Members tried to do everything they possibly could to throw obstacles in our way. In spite of that, Mr. Speaker, we continued on. At that particular time some of the gentlemen from Virginia were very anxious and very excited about the fact that we were going to bring milk in from other parts of the United States. The claim was made that the District of Columbia belonged to 800 farmers living in Virginia and 635 farmers living in Maryland, that no other farmer had the right to sell his products in Washington. It was claimed that just those patent-leathered, kid-gloved, limousine-riding farmers who occupy the territory adjacent to the District of Columbia should have this privilege, denying the right to all the other farmers in the State of Maryland and in the State of Virginia. These people virtually said, "No, my friend, you cannot bring your milk in here or your products. We have the sole right. Why, you might contaminate some of the people in the District. They might be poisoned by your milk."

They made the same statement to the farmers of Pennsylvania. They made the same statement to the farmers of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and all the other States. They said, "Your milk is not any good."

Let us consider as exhibit A, my good friend the gentleman from Wisconsin? He was raised on Wisconsin milk.

Let us consider as exhibit B, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Keefe] and my good friend from Illinois [Mr. Dirksen], my good friend from Indiana [Mr. Gille], and myself. Contrast those gentlemen with the gentleman from Virginia. [Laughter and applause.] Which goes to prove, Mr. Speaker, that we produce very good milk in other States, as well as Maryland and Virginia.

Mr. Speaker, I want to make one point. Mr. MURRAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHULTE. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.
Mr. MURRAY. Does the gentleman think that the Congressmen from Virginia and Maryland would really have voted for that trade barrier when it came right down to it?

Mr. SCHULTE. I am not able to speak for them, but I know some of the Representatives from Maryland and Virginia resent that trade barrier just as much as you and I.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCHULTE. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin. Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. A few of those Maryland and Virginia Representatives voted for the million-dollar Eskimo pork project. They did not seem to have any conscience about permitting reindeer mlk to come in here and compete in the Washington milkshed.

Mr. SCHULTE. I do not know anything about their thoughts, but I am quite certain, after talking with several of them, that they had intended to vote for the Schulte milk bill which has as its purpose to break down that most vicious barrier that exists around the District of Columbia.

Just recently one of the national magazines, which is sent all over the United States, carried quite a story about the monopoly that has been developed by the patent-leather farmers around the District and some of the distributors in the District of Columbia. We tried to hurry through the Schulte bill so we could have it enacted into law, but because of certain parliamentary tactics that were used it was impossible to do so. I told you at that time that they were going to try to break several independent distributors. We have that spectacle today. Right now the Maryland-Virginia patent-leather-shoe and limousine farmers are selling it to the Richfield Dairy at 17 cents a gallon. They are selling it to Sylvan Seal for 17 cents a gallon. While these distributors can buy at this price, yet their consumers still pay the same high price. Yet the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy must pay 271/2 cents a gallon. They are out in the fields right now trying to take away from the Embassy-Fairfax the farmers who are supplying them their milk, with the sole intent of breaking the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy because this dairy has the audacity to try to sell milk at a reasonable price to the consumers in Washington. This entire fight came on because Embassy and Fairfax Dairies were selling milk to the people of Washington at reasonable prices, to wit, 12 cents per quart for grade A milk.

Mr. SCHULTE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. SCHULTE. Mr. Speaker, that is just a part of what is going on. They say, "Oh, we feel sorry for the farmer." This patent-leather farmer that I am talking about, this limousine farmer who drives over his fields in his automobile and does no work, claims that he cannot supply milk unless he gets 28 cents a gallon. He must have at least that. He has proved conclusively that he can manufacture and produce milk for 17 cents. If not, why is he selling to these particular dairies? The point I am trying to make is that they are getting on an average four and one-quarter cents for the milk sold to Richfield and Sylvan Seal. If the Maryland and Virginia producers, these limousine farmers, can sell milk to Richfield and Sylvan Seal for 41/2 cents a quart, then why can they not sell it to the little children on the streets who are white and anemic? This same group, this same outfit, these same vultures, are denying milk to these little tots right today. They say to them, "You are going to pay 14 cents a quart or we are going to let you rot on the streets."

Mr. Speaker, I hope and feel that the Members of this House are very much in sympathy with me in trying to break down this trade barrier that lies around the District of Columbia. I hope that when we come back next year we can prove to the people that we are sincere, that we realize and appreciate the plight in which they find themselves, and that we will say to the people who live in Washington, "We are going to bring down the price of milk," in spite of the ruthless tactics of Mr. Derrick, who heads the Maryland-Virginia Association, and who has been successful in selling himself and his racket to these producers at the expense of a lot of anemic little children and poor families in the District of Columbia. I do hope the people of Washington will help me in this fight by buying milk only from the independent dairies in Washington, who are giving their assistance to the people in this fight for lower-price milk.

PRICES FOR FARM CROPS

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

There was no objection.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, the tragedy of an attempt by the Federal Farm Board to support farm prices by buying surpluses is history. It now appears that history may repeat that tragedy in the loans of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

It must be apparent that the farm problem will not be solved until we establish a self-creating and self-financing market for surplus farm products. Such a solution is possible. Perishable surplus crops can be converted into fuel alcohol to supply the demands of a motor age for an improved motor fuel-an alcohol-blend gasoline.

In this way oats and corn that horses no longer eat will be consumed by the engines that have replaced them. In this way acres producing surplus cotton can grow sorghums, and sorghums will make motor fuel.

Such a solution will pay its own way and injure nobody. The increased purchasing power of the farmer will increase the demand for motor fuel and offset any shrinkage in gasoline consumption, and at the same time protect our diminishing oil reserves against the increased rate of consumption.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and include therein the outline of a measure to accomplish this purpose, which I propose to introduce.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

There was no objection.

HEALTH INSURANCE

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I am today introducing a bill to provide health insurance to certain workers in severe economic distress, which I ask to have referred to the Committee on Finance, to which previous proposals affecting health matters have been referred in the past.

Because it is so late in the session I shall not, of course, press for action at this time. The general question of health insurance is one, however, which is being considered by several committees of Congress at the present time, and which is engaging the attention of many persons outside of Washington. This is, therefore, an appropriate time to make a proposal of this sort, so that it may receive the consideration of officials and interested citizens.

The inspiring advance which medical science has made in recent years should not make us unmindful of the fact that every survey reveals a deplorable amount of bad health in the United States. It is true, moreover, that to a marked extent poverty and sickness go hand in hand. In this connection, the President's Technical Committee on Medical Care, a nonpartisan body, has pointed out that one reason why persons of precarious means and small earnings do not receive proper medical care is that they are unable to pay for it.

Whether for reasons of pride or of unfamiliarity with our existing health system, the fact is that there are many who will not take advantage of the generous willingness of American doctors and hospitals to supply medical care free of charge. It is high time that some plan be devised which will, first, enable these persons to help themselves, and, second, reduce the heavy load of free cases which our medical men so uncomplainingly carry.

I am, therefore, proposing an amendment to the Social Security Act which will provide health insurance for those who are in severe economic need. Under the terms of my bill, unemployed workers who have contributed to their own protection through pay-roll taxes are eligible to receive as much as $100 to pay doctor and hospital charges. The total cost of this plan in 1940 will be less than a million dollars, which is a mere fraction of the tremendous old-age fund from which the payments shall be made.

I hope this measure will be acceptable to the Congress and to all Americans who acknowledge their stake in the development of a healthy America. The needy will receive immediate relief. The taxpayer will not be affected, for there are no new taxes involved. Doctors and hospitals will receive compensation for furnishing medical care to those whose slender resources hitherto have not been able to stand the strain of essential medical assistance.

This measure does not regiment. In all cases the initiative rests with the individual. He himself chooses his own doctor and his own hospital. The Federal Government merely gives full recognition to the work of private enterprise, and simply sets up the machinery whereby the self-respecting man may help himself. Question of medical personnel and hospital standards remain where they now are, in the devoted hands of professional physicians. The part played by the State and local governments is recognized and enhanced. There is no invitation to haste and waste.

We have taken important steps looking toward the establishment in recent years of a well-rounded, integrated socialsecurity program. Workmen's compensation for many years has provided financial aid to those who have suffered from injuries sustained during the course of their employment. Unemployment compensation aims to protect the unemployed from loss of wages. Old-age pensions should be developed which will safeguard our people from the hazards of insecurity. A well-conceived health-insurance program should bring measurably nearer the day when the American people will be physically fit.

This bill is a humble first step toward this inspiring goal.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance, and that there may be also printed in the RECORD, as part of my remarks, a summary of its provisions.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be received and appropriately referred; and, without objection, the bill itself, and the summary referred to by the Senator from Massachusetts, will be printed in the RECORD.

The bill (S. 2963) to provide health insurance to certain workers in severe economic distress, was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on Finance, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE ROAD TO PEACE

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, I have received a copy of resolutions adopted by two Kansas Granges in the past month—Chester Grange, No. 23, and Manhattan Grange, No. 748—urging nonintervention in Old World affairs as the best road to peace for the United States to travel.

I desire particularly to direct attention to the final paragraph of the resolutions, which reads as follows:

And finally be it resolved, that we believe the internal difficulties of our country at present are sufficient to occupy the full attention and effort of our Government, without attempting to assume a guardianship over the whole world.

I wish to agree 100 percent with that statement; and also with another statement in the resolutions, that—

We protest most forcibly against adventures in international power politics by our Government.

Mr. President, this session of Congress, in my judgment, has done three things preeminently worth while:

First. Congress refused to approve the Bloom resolution, which would have authorized and directed the President to intervene in Old World disputes at his own pleasure.

Second. Congress took a long step toward cleaning up a very bad political mess by enacting the Hatch bill to prohibit pernicious political activities.

Third. Congress saved the country a lot of grief when it refused to pass the latest lending bill, which would have in effect taken from Congress and turned over to the Executive purse-string control through authorizing the Executive to raise funds by borrowing instead of having to come to Congress for appropriations.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point, as part of my remarks, the resolutions adopted by these two Kansas Granges.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Hon. ARTHUR CAPPER, Senator from Kansas,

Washington, D. C. Dear Sir: At their last regular meeting, Chester Grange, No. 23, P. of H., being also convinced, that if the rulers of the other nations can be convinced that the United States cannot be pulled into another world war, the chances of such a war occurring will be much less, voted to join with Manhattan Grange, No. 748, P. of H., whereas certain high officials of our National Government have recently made public statements showing very plainly their intention of involving the United States in an European war, should one occur; and

Whereas it is plainly evident that the despots which have enslaved the people of Russia are now attempting to precipitate a war between Japan, Germany, and Italy on the one side and England, France, and the United States on the other; a war that would probably leave all six powers exhausted and an easy prey to Russian imperialistic conquest: Therefore be it

Resolved by Chester Grange, No. 23, Patrons of Husbandry, that we protest most forcibly against any such adventures in international power politics by our Government, and that we demand that Congress of the United States exercise its constitutional prerogative and serve notice on the executive branch of the Government, and that we demand that the property of the constitutional prerogative and serve notice on the executive branch of the Government, and that we demand that the property of the constitution of the constituti ment, in unmistakable terms, that no such adventures will be tolerated; and be it further Resolved. That we protest against the plans already formulated for establishing a dictatorship in this country under pretense of providing for "industrial mobilization," "conscription of wealth," or any other specious pretense. We hold that the history of our country proves that it is not necessary to surrender the republican form of government in order to conduct a victorious war of national defense, and that no other form of war is to be tolerated; and we further hold that our present laws give public officials ample power to prevent profiteering, if they so desire; and, finally,

Resolved. That we believe that the internal difficulties of our country at present are sufficient to occupy the full attention and effort of our Government without attempting to assume a guard-ianship over the whole world.

Adopted July 6, 1939.

W. M. PACKETT, Master. EMMA EBERHARD, Secretary.

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, these provisions do not infringe on any citizen's constitutional rights. Instead they protect him in the exercise of his constitutional rights.

The Hatch Act does more than this, however.

It prohibits administrative officers of the Federal Government from-Threatening, intimidating, or coercing a voter.

From depriving, or threatening to deprive, any one of a W. P. A. job because of poltics, race, color, or creed.

From taking, or allowing to be taken, any money appropriated for relief purposes to use for political purposes.

There, in brief, are the provisions of the Hatch Act, which consider one of the most important pieces of legislation, from the long-range viewpoint, enacted in many years.

May I add that I hope the State governments will enact similar statutes dealing with State and municipal employees. I expect the next session of Congress to bring under protection of the Hatch Act those public employees—such as those in State highway departments—as are paid in part from Federal funds.

If we are to preserve uncorrupted our representative form of government, State highway department employees-all State and municipal employees—must be protected against coercion, intimidation, and enforced contributions to political campaign funds, just as W. P. A. workers and Federal employees.

PURCHASE AND DISTRIBUTION OF SURPLUS PRODUCTS OF THE FISH-ING INDUSTRY

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5681) to authorize the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation to purchase and distribute surplus products of the fishing industry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. When the Senate took a recess yesterday the RECORD shows that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DANAHER] had the floor, and that he had an amendment ready to submit, but that it had not been formally offered. The Chair thinks he should recognize the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I offer an amendment to House bill 5681, and ask that the clerk formally state the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated. The CHIEF CLERK. On page 1, line 3, it is proposed to strike out "any part."

On page 1, line 7, after "amended", it is proposed to insert "not to exceed $1,500,000."

On page 1, line 8, after "surplus", it is proposed to insert "edible fresh, frozen, salted, or dried but not canned."

On page 1, line 9, it is proposed to strike out "shellfish" and insert in lieu thereof "mollusks and."

On page 1, line 9, it is proposed to strike out "and similar forms of aquatic life and."

On page 1, line 10, it is proposed to strike out "byproducts thereof.".

On page 2, after line 7, it is proposed to insert the follow-

SEC. 2. (a) From the fund authorized to be transferred by section SEC. 2. (a) From the fund authorized to be transferred by section 1 hereof, the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to transfer to the Secretary of Commerce sums as follows to be maintained in a separate fund, $75,000, which shall be used by the Secretary of Commerce to promote the free flow of domestically produced fishery products in commerce by conducting a fishery educational service; and $100,000, which shall be used by the Secretary of Commerce to develop and increase markets for fishery products of domestic origin. domestic origin.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I take it that the question now is on the pending amendment as stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is the pending question

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it. Mr. PEPPER. Observing this amendment, I inquire whether it is all one amendment. Will it be voted upon all together, as one amendment, or will it be voted upon separately in part?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Any Senator has a right to have the amendments voted upon separately if he so requests. Otherwise, they would be voted on en bloc.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the amendment limiting the amount available to $1,500,000 has already been adopted by the Senate, so I am sure the Senator does not care to press that amendment any further.

The amendment beginning on page 2, line 2, being section 2, is, I believe, a good amendment, and I have no objection at all to it; but in order that we may vote upon the various parts separately, I request that there be a severance, and that the amendments be voted upon separately.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President-

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Maine.

Mr. WHITE. May I ask what the second amendment is which has been assented to by the Senator from Florida? I could not hear his statement.

Mr. PEPPER. The amendment which was adopted yesterday afternoon was to limit to not to exceed $1,500,000 a year the amount of funds that may be made available for these purposes.

Mr. WHITE. I understand that; but I thought there was a second amendment of which the Senator indicated ap-

Mr. PEPPER. No; that is the only amendment I have offered.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, perhaps I can clear up the situation. The Senator from Florida did say-I am sure the Senator from Maine did not hear him—that he would be agreeable now to the acceptance of section 2, which appears on page 2 of the pending amendment. Is not that

Mr. PEPPER. That is correct.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, with that thought in mind I ask that the Chair put the question on agreeing to the amendment on page 2, so that section 2 may be agreed upon, and we may dispense with further discussion of it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the portion of the amendment known as section 2.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. I will say to the Senator further that, after conferring with some of my colleagues on this side of the Chamber who are in favor of the bill, I believe we have no objection to the amendment on line 10, page 1, which reads:

On page 1, line 10, to strike out "byproducts thereof."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator, in order to make the language conform, to agree to the proposal in line 8 of the pending amendment, that is, to strike out the words "and similar forms of aquatic life and."

Mr. PEPPER. I will ask the indulgence of the Senator just a moment.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator

Mr. DANAHER. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Does the Senator mean that he would strike out everything except fish and shellfish? I understood the Senator to mean fish meal and fertilizer, and things of that kind, which are not used for food purposes. I see no reason why the Surplus Commodities Credit Corporation should be buying those particular products. But where fish is used for food purposes, as it seems to me it is used in connection with the products stated in the remainder of the brackets, I do not think the argument in reference to the byproducts applies to those other items.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, to reply to the Senator from Washington, the way the bill was introduced it provides that surplus fishery products will include, in line 8, "fish" and, in line 9, "shellfish, crustacea, and similar forms of aquatic life." I say to the Senator from Washington that the words "and similar forms of aquatic life" should be stricken out in view of the fact that we would then include fish, shellfish, and crustacea. Is not that obvious?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. Does the Senator think the amendment would have the effect, if it were enacted, of excluding from the benefit of the legislation lobsters, crawfish and oysters? Mr. DANAHER. Of course not. The word "crustacea"

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I think perhaps the Senator is correct, and we could very well say "including shellfish and crustacea."

Mr. PEPPER. If the species which I mentioned would not be construed as being excluded, then I would have no objection. I should like to have my colleague express his

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, I would like to ask the Senator from Connecticut if he is sure the word "mollusks" would include shrimp.

Mr. DANAHER. Obviously it would. Shrimp is one of the crustacea.

Mr. ANDREWS. With that understanding, I have no objection.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, having won 99 percent of his amendments, I think the Senator could save much time if he would stop here, having won the victory he wanted. I am not interested in the bill except that I held hearings on it, and reported out the Senate bill, but I have tried, and I know both Senators from Florida have tried, to meet every reasonable request the Senator from Connecticut has made, and I think he might well retire in glory now, as he has won the main portion of the amendments he wanted.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I am grateful to the Senator from Washington for his interest in the suggestion, but fifty-six one-hundredths of the battle remains, the other 44 percent having no more than narrowed the issue. In order that the record may be made straight, I ask that the amendment with reference to line 8 on page 1 be stated that we may have a record vote.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 1, line 9, after the word "crustacea", it is proposed to strike out "similar forms of aquatic life and."

Mr. PEPPER. I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, that resolves the issue into only one thing, that is, whether or not, in the first place, the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation should be authorized to buy fish at all, and, collateral to that, the kind of fish or fish products it should be authorized to buy, if it is to be authorized to buy any.

It seems to me that the bill as introduced by the Senator from Florida is fatally defective in that it conflicts very vitally with the principle upon which section 32 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act was enacted. The Senator from Washington says he held hearings on the bill and reported it out. Let me point out to the Senator that the bill to which he refers is only one of three which would purport to accomplish the objective sought by the Senator from Florida. Another bill was introduced by the Senator from Florida which would go even to the length of authorizing the purchase of seaweed, and include any fisheries' products or forms of shells and aquatic life of whatever type. Happily, that phase of this matter has been eliminated by the amendments upon which agreement has been reached.

We now come back to the question whether or not we should as a matter of permanent policy authorize a corporation which is an agency of the Department of Agriculture to purchase fish products. The country's greatest fisherman went fishing last week end, and, according to the press, he spent all day Saturday in a school of blue marlin and did not catch one. The press faithfully reported that on Sunday, on the other hand, he caught a 70-pound blue marlin, although it was dutifully recorded that the average size is only 60 pounds. I cite this to show that if he had been in a school of fish on Saturday which had been biting heavily, there was a time of the day when he could have stopped catching fish, after he had caught enough. In other words, a surplus is controllable. It is not like an agricultural crop, in the raising of which a man puts his thought and physical services and money, with the vicissitudes attendant on such endeavor. That is not this situation. A person does not have to fish. One can stop fishing at any time, and therefore not produce a surplus and load onto the United States and the taxpayers of the country the burden of buying the surplus.

When I submitted the amendment, it was with the purpose of limiting the effect of the pending bill to edible fish. The bill, in fact, does not limit the effect to edible fish, but the amendment I submitted would limit it to edible, fresh, frozen, salted, or dried, but not canned fish.

The reason for interpolating the words "but not canned" is that when the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation undertakes to buy canned products and send them broadcast, perhaps make them available to the holders of blue and orange stamps in this country, the moment those things are put into the marts of trade, the market for everything which is normally sold at a reasonable price is depressed. It is perfectly apparent that if the Government is to take these canned surpluses and introduce them into groceries and markets and at distribution points all over the United States, make them available to those who are eligible under the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation plan, then the market for the products in which people have legitimate stock investments will be depressed, and, far from achieving the purpose of liquidating the surpluses, it will produce an additional surplus; far from assisting the fishermen, it will injure their markets.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. DANAHER. I yield.

Mr. ANDREWS. The object of the original bill (S. 2110) which I introduced was to put fish and edible fish products on the same basis with agricultural products; nothing more and nothing less. As to agricultural products, the law was enacted not only for the benefit of the consumer, but for the benefit of the producer. If the Surplus Commodities Act were not for the benefit to the producer, it would not have been suggested. As a matter of fact, the Surplus Commodities Corporation buys canned surplus products of the farm, the same as it buys other products. This bill would put fish and edible fish products on exactly the same basis as agricultural products. Fish is a very perishable commodity. All kinds, as described in the bill, are very perishable products. There is no reason, I can see, why they should not be put on exactly the same basis as farm products.

As a matter of fact, as the Senator [Mr. Danaher] just stated, one may limit his catch, if he is fishing, perhaps, with a line, but when men go out with a seine, for instance, and there is a run of mullet, they may catch a hundred pounds, or they may catch 300 pounds, or they may catch 3,000 pounds. The catch cannot be controlled. They do not know how many they are going to catch. The result is that the market may become flooded, and the fishermen get nothing or little, unless they are able to store them, and when they place them in cold storage or can them, they have a surplus. That is the only instance in which the Government steps in, and the Surplus Commodities Corporation are very cautious, as the Senator knows, about stepping in and taking up any surplus. Of all the trades or calling of men it seems to me the fishermen are about the only ones who have been forgotten, and they have been forgotten too long. They give us one of the most wholesome and wonderful foods that we enjoy. The object of this bill is an attempt to help them through a crisis, along with others who have been assisted.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, everything the Senator has said would apply with equal force to those who make tin cans in Pennsylvania. There is not a word the Senator says that would not apply to the manufacturer who had hoped to sell an additional supply of tin cans to take care of the surplus fish the Senator from Florida hopes to see sold. This is not a relief bill, this is not a bill introduced with the idea of taking care of merely the fishermen. Why is there not a bill to take care of lawyers or a bill to take care of doctors? Why is there not a bill to take care of people who manufacture too many fish forks, if it is expected the people of the United States are going to buy fish, and hence will need fish forks? Oh, no; nothing like that is proposed. Fishermen can always stop fishing; that much is certainly true. There is no reason in the world why there should be special legislation requiring the taxpayers to spend their money in order to take care of a surplus which is controllable by the fishermen themselves.

Mr. President, let me point out that twice before the Government has experimented with the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation with respect to fish. It did so in 1937, and at that time approximately 12,057,000 pounds of fish were distributed, at a total cost of $698,771. In 1938 it was tried again, and at that time there were purchased 3,615,000 pounds of fish, and the Government distributed them at a cost of $290,000.

When the committee was conducting its hearing in this particular the Acting Secretary of Agriculture wrote a letter to the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], chairman of the Committee on Commerce, dated May 19, 1939, in which he pointed out that holdings of frozen fish as of February 15, 1939, totaled 54,000,000 pounds, which compares with the record holdings of 87,000,000 pounds on January 15, 1937. He said further:

Canned-salmon inventories on the Pacific coast are less than those of a year ago, and present prices for fresh landings of most species of a year ago, and present prices for fresh landings of most species of ground fish in New England area, in most instances, are higher than prices of the surplus season of 1937. This would indicate that a higher level of prices may prevail than when the two previous programs were conducted by the Corporation.

In addition, the Acting Secretary of Agriculture pointed out that the Director of the Bureau of the Budget advised the Department of Agriculture under date of May 11, 1939, that the proposed legislation would not be in accord with the program of the President.

Mr. President, that is the situation which confronts us. We have no right, it seems to me, to take the taxpayers' money and devote it to the absorption of manufacturers'

Whatever merits there may have been in the theory of taking care of this type of surplus which the fisherman himself cannot readily dispose of, on the ground that it is perishable, let me say with reference particularly to the Gulf Coast States, which produce shrimp, that almost all of the shrimp which is transported to the Northern States-and some Senators may not realize it—is in a frozen form. It is brought up in boxes. It comes into my house in boxes. and the shrimp are so solidly frozen that one cannot separate one shrimp from another. If one orders shrimp in the Senate restaurant today that is the sort of shrimp he will get. People do not want canned shrimp; they want fresh shrimp. If it is desired to give relief to the fishermen, Mr. President, the only adequate way in which it can be given is to take the unsalable surplus off the market.

The measure should be limited to something that can be justified on the basis that it is a consumers' bill. If it is on any other basis in principle it cannot be justified.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield.

Mr. WHITE. The bill is not mandatory in its terms. It does not require the Surplus Commodities Corporation to buy a single pound of fish, whether they be current supplies or whether they be surplus fish. It simply gives the authority to do it. I had supposed that we must assume that this authority would be exercised with some degree of intelligence, and that it would be exercised only when there were depressing surpluses upon the market. If that is not so, there is force in what the Senator from Connecticut has been saying. If it is true, then I am not very much impressed with what the Senator from Conencticut has been saying.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, let me answer the Senator from Maine by pointing out that the language of the amendment I have submitted would authorize and make possible a purchase by the Surplus Commodities Corporation of edible surpluses, whether fresh or frozen, salted or dried. Would not the Senator from Maine expect that that authorization normally would include all that type of fish and shellfish and Crustacea which ought to be available to the market?

Mr. WHITE. I do not know what has happened to the amendment in which the term "edible fish" is used.

Mr. DANAHER. That is pending.

Mr. WHITE. The Senator from Connecticut has said that the fishermen could stop fishing when they wanted to. I say that as a practical proposition that is not so. The fishing fleet are fitted out, and they start from the Pacific coast and go up into the Alaskan area, and the fishermen fish for the halibut and the black cod and the salmon of that section. The boats go out from New England ports-Boston, Gloucester, and other ports up and down that coast, as well as from the ports in the southern waters, the South Atlantic. Literally hundreds and thousands of such boats go out every fishing season, and no one knows until the fishing season has been concluded, and all the boats have brought their products to the market, whether there will be a surplus or whether there will be a deficiency of supplies.

Mr. President, they simply cannot stop fishing, because it is a continuous process which is undertaken. The boats are outfitted and sent into the seas; they stay there during the fishing season, and return, bringing back what they have caught, utterly without knowledge as to what other vessels are bringing in as a cargo of fish.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHITE. No; I sit down.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I should not like to have the Senator sit down just now. I should like to have him answer a question. Does the Senator know that we have statutes on the books forbidding the taking of halibut above a fixed maximum?

Mr. WHITE. I do not know what statute the Senator from Connecticut has in mind, but I do know that, as a practical matter, when the halibut boats start out from Ketchikan and other Alaskan ports, as well as from ports on the northern Atlantic seaboard and the southern Atlantic seaboard, they go into the various waters and catch what halibut they can.

Mr. DANAHER. And violate the law? Mr. President, does the Senator mean that?

Mr. WHITE. I would have to be shown the statute before I would know of any limitation put upon the catch of any particular fisherman or any fishing boat. If the Senator has such a statute in mind, I should like to see it.

Mr. DANAHER. Pursuing that line of inquiry just a moment more: is there not a limitation in Maine with reference to the size of chicken lobster, so-called, which may be taken by the fishermen?

Mr. WHITE. There is a limitation upon the size, but there is no limitation upon the poundage the fisherman may catch and the number of lobsters he may catch. And there is no limitation of law, so far as I know, anywhere upon the number of cod or haddock or halibut that a fisherman may bring in out of the water when he goes out to fish.

Mr. DANAHER. If the fisherman catches lobsters that are too small, what does he do with them?

Mr. WHITE. He puts them back.

Mr. DANAHER. The Senator does not suppose that he takes them over the line and has them canned in some other country?

Mr. WHITE. If he does that, he does it at his peril, and, in my opinion, he does not do it. Canned lobster, which we are getting in the United States are very largely lobsters which are caught in the Canadian waters and shipped here.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, the Senator from Maine has implied that notwithstanding the existence of statutes which limit the catch of halibut, fishermen go out and indiscriminately catch halibut, and if they bring back a surplus they want to have the United States buy the surplus. Is that the understanding the Senator wishes to convey?

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, the Senator has not yet quoted me the statute which limits any fisherman with respect to the number of halibut or the poundage of halibut he may catch. I do not know of any such statute and I do not believe there is such a statute.

Mr. DANAHER. I can assure the Senator-

Mr. WHITE. If it exists it only applies to one species of fish.

Mr. DANAHER. To halibut.

Mr. President, of course the whole question as to the honesty of the Maine fishermen arose because of the implication of the Senator from Maine that if there be a statute—never mind whether he is assured as to its existence—if there be a statute, he, nonetheless, would have the United States buy the surplus. Is that it?

Mr. WHITE. No; I did not say that. The Senator knows perfectly well that I did not say that. The Senator is nimble-witted, but not accurate.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I can assure the Senator that I am at least sufficiently accurate to know that there is such a statute, that I can call it to his attention, and presently will do so.

But to return to the point, Mr. President. There is no longer need for dwelling interminably, it seems to me, on this particular subject. The fundamental of the thing is simply this, that if the United States of America is going to take the funds of the taxpayers and buy what are obviously controllable surpluses, there is no reason in the world why we should not take the same money and go into Pennsylvania and buy the surplus-mined coal there. The miners there do not know how much coal people are going to buy, and they sometimes mine too much. The miners in West Virginia do not know how much bituminous coal is going to be needed, and they may sometimes mine too much. As a matter of fact, there is much more justification for buying coal than there is for buying fish, because coal is a vegetable product, and at least would come within the intendment of the A. A. A. which deals with vegetable and farm produce.

Mr. President, I submit that the law should not be extended, and we should not undertake to enter a brand new field of exploitation. The bill would in effect amount to an entering wedge by means of which ultimately the funds of the tax-payers would be devoted to a socialization of distribution. I do not think the Congress should take such a step.

I ask that the amendment be adopted, Mr. President.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, may the amendment be stated? The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 1, line 8, after "surplus", it is proposed to insert "edible fresh, frozen, salted, or dried but not canned."

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, I ask that the amendment be rejected. Let us put fish on exactly the same basis as other products, and treat the fisherman in the same way as other producers are treated. Fishing is like farming or any other calling which depends on the weather. No fisherman knows what he can do until he tries, and when he is lucky let us not lay it up against him.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment on page 1, line 8.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, there is one other amend-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Apparently there is an amendment on page 1, line 9.

Mr. ANDREWS. I think all the other amendments have been disposed of.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 1, line 9, it is proposed to strike out "shellfish" and insert in lieu thereof "mollusks and."

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, that particular language was adopted after a conference between the Senator from Florida, the Chief of the Bureau of Fisheries, and myself. It is claimed that the word "mollusks" is much more accurately descriptive than the word "shelifish"; and the word "crustacea" should have before it the word "and", in view of the elimination to which we agreed this morning.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, I thought we agreed this morning that the language "including fish, shellfish, and crustacea" included everything.

Mr. DANAHER. I think the Senator is incorrect, and that the Record will so show. The word "mollusks" includes the type of shellfish which the Senator from Florida has not included in the language as drawn. The word "mollusks" actually applies to clams, oysters, and things of that kind.

Mr. ANDREWS. Are they not shellfish?

Mr. DANAHER. The word "shelifish" is commonly synomymous with "crustacea."

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, I am not arguing over the terms. I realize that every amendment added to the bill, which is a House bill, will cause some delay. We are in the last hours of the session, and we are very anxious that the bill be passed. It seems to me those words include everything.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, in order to avoid any possibility of error, is the Senator from Connecticut agreeable not to striking out the word "shellfish", but to adding "mollusks" after the word "shellfish", so that there can be no question about it? If so, I have no objection to the amendment.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, the suggestion of the Senator from Florida is equivalent to saying "left eye and right eye" instead of "eyes." If it will satisfy the Senator from Florida, I will agree to the modification.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment on page 1, line 9, as modified.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question now is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the hill

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, almost everything I have had to say so far applies to the bill itself. I am opposed to the extension of this principle. It should not be done, as the letter from the Department of Agriculture to the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] pointed out. I have read the letter into the RECORD. The bill is outside the recommendations of the Bureau of the Budget. It authorizes a program which should not be undertaken. We should not extend a purely agricultural surplus disposal act to include a controllable surplus such as fish or the fish products enumerated in the bill.

Mr. President, I ask that the bill be rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question now is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I ask for a division.

On a division, the bill (H. R. 5681) was passed.

CONTINUATION OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON THE TAXATION OF GOVERNMENTAL SECURITIES AND SALARIES

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to consider Senate Resolution 172, Calendar 1161, a resolution continuing the Special Committee on the Taxation of Governmental Securities and Salaries. I have discussed the matter with both the majority leader and the acting minority leader. The resolution has been approved by both the Senate Finance Committee and the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Michigan?

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 172) submitted by Mr. Brown on July 27, 1939, was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That Senate Resolution 303, Seventy-fifth Congress, third session, establishing a Special Committee on the Taxation of Governmental Securities and Salaries, agreed to June 16, 1938. is hereby continued in full force and effect until the expiration of the Seventy-sixth Congress, and the time for making the report required by such resolution is hereby extended to such date of

NATIONAL MONETARY AND BANKING POLICY

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Calendar No. 1165, Senate Resolution 125.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be stated by title.

The CHIEF CLERK. A resolution (S. Res. 125) providing for a study and determination of a national monetary and banking policy, reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, with an amendment.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President-

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate Resolution 125?

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I understand the request is for unanimous consent. I wish to enter an objection to the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Kentucky.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider Senate resolution 125 submitted by Mr. WAGNER on April 17, 1939, reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency with amendments on June 15, referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate and on August 3, reported from that committee by Mr. BYRNES with an additional amendment.

The amendments were on page 1, at the beginning of line 3, to strike out "determine" and insert "consider and recommend"; in line 6, after the word "to", to strike out "determine" and insert "consider and recommend"; and on page 2, line 20, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$25,000 $100,000" and insert "$25,000", so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That the Committee on Banking and Currency is authorized to conduct a study and to hold hearings to consider and recommend a national monetary and banking policy by which the monetary and banking authorities of the Federal Government shall be guided and governed, and to consider and recommend the character of governmental machinery best calculated to carry out such policy. The committee shall report to the Senate as soon as practicable the results of its study, together with its recommendation for the enactment of any legislation it may deem necessary.

SEC. 2. (a) For the purposes of this resolution the committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such hearings, to sit and act at such times and places during the sessions and recesses of the Senate in the Seventy-sixth Congress and subsequent Congresses as it deems advisable.

(b) The committee is likewise authorized to call upon any of the agencies of the Government to present evidence with respect the agencies of the Government to present evidence with respect to the subject matter of this inquiry, which is within the administrative jurisdiction of such agency under existing law or which may be assigned to such agency by the committee.

(c) The committee or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof is authorized to employ such experts, and clerical, stenographic, and other assistants and to take such testimony and make such expenditures as it deems advisable. The cost of stenographic services to report such hearings as may be held shall not be in excess of 25 cents per 100 words. The expenses of the committee which shall not exceed $25,000 shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon youghers approved. from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the committee.

The amendments were agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the resolution as amended-

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Senator from North Carolina desires to express some views on the resolution. I do not wish to deprive him of that privilege.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I am opposed to the resolu-tion and I should like to be heard briefly upon it.

I know of no necessity for investigating the banking and currency situation of this country. I know of no reason for proceeding with such an investigation. On the other hand, all such investigations tend to disturb everybody concerned. I think they all tend to distract the minds of the American people from the real difficulties with which they are confronted.

What will be the effect in this instance? If I may argue from past experience, the effect will be just what it has been in the past. We have had no end of investigations. We had them all last year, all the year before, and all the year preceding that. I do not know that anything has come of them except that business has been disturbed.

If this resolution should be agreed to and the investigation proceeded with, I expect that practically every banker in the United States will wonder what on earth the Senate is up to. It will tend to make him afraid to proceed with his business. It is like the Government of the United States putting a gun upon the mark pointing at him day after day. I do not know anything that could be more disturbing to the banking situation than notice to be given by the Senate that we are going now to proceed to investigate the banks. We will be sending for bankers. They will not know what we are driving at. We may have the very best intentions; but they will have no reason to infer that from past experience; on the contrary they will have some reason to think the intentions are not quite so good.

Mr. President, what is wrong with the banking situation that it should be investigated? Who is bringing an accusation here against the banks?

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BAILEY. Yes; I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I think the Senator is entirely mistaken in his views with reference to this proposal. This is not a proposal to investigate banks. I may say that I have conferred with the head of the American Bankers Association and other prominent bankers who favor this sort of a study. The resolution does not propose an investigation at all, but a study of proposals which have been before Congress year after year as to what changes should be made in our monetary policy to aid in bringing about recovery and a better functioning of our monetary policy.

The demands by legislators who have asked the committees to act upon monetary legislation proposed by them has culminated in this particular resolution. There was a similar resolution submitted by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Townsend], another one by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], another one by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead], and one by another Senator whose name I do not recall at the moment. The Committee on Banking and Currency considered this proposal and reported by unanimous vote. It was clearly understood then and it is clearly understood now that this is not a proposal to call banks before the committee and pry into their business affairs at all; it has no relation to that subject.

During recent sessions of Congress a large number of bills have been introduced that have been referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency, dealing with proposals to overcome the country's economic difficulties by monetary action.

Among the proposals that are currently before Congress, many are based on the belief that our difficulty is in the lack of an adequate supply and control of money. Some would remedy this situation by the issuance of currency, either directly by the Treasury or through the Federal Reserve banks, some would retire Government bonds by issuing paper money and thus not only increase the supply of currency but also reduce or retire altogether the interestbearing public debt. Others believe that the remedy lies in monetization of silver at a high price, and the issuance of silver certificates to add to the supply of money. Still others believe that what is needed is a stimulus to the use of money through some system of stamp script that would result in a penalty on money that is not promptly spent. Another group of measures aims to correct conditions by changing the ownership and management of the Federal Reserve System and by requiring 100-percent reserves against demand deposits. Another proposed remedy would establish a new system of banks to supply intermediate and long-time capital, particularly to small business.

Still others think that the monetary system now in existence should be corrected by the elimination of silver purchases, by the establishment of a fixed price for gold, and by the reintroduction of gold coins into circulation. They contend that the elimination of currency uncertainties would restore confidence and result in economic revival. There are some who believe that the flow of capital into enterprise is retarded by what they consider as an artificially low level of money rates and others who argue that the Government absorbs too large a part of the country's savings through the sale of its own securities.

These opinions and proposals cover a wide range, and seek legislative action on matters of vital importance to the welfare of the Nation.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, let me interrupt my friend to say that I hope and pray to kind heaven that the proposed investigation is not going to open up all the crackpot propositions he is talking about.

Mr. WAGNER. I think we can rely upon the committee

Mr. WAGNER. I think we can rely upon the committee to limit the inquiry and the evidence to be introduced to a well-thought-out plan and to limit the field within proper bounds.

While the objectives are, of course, desirable, and Senators having these proposals have pressed for action, the Banking and Currency Committee is not prepared to act upon them without a more thorough study. We, of course, favor the fullest utilization of the country's human and material resources to bring about a better economic day.

There are those who contend that there is a sufficiently existing supply of money but say its utilization has not been availed of, while others contend the supply is insufficient to bring about a fairer commodity price.

There are those who contend that stabilization and production in employment is the more satisfactory objective in public policy than price stability.

The committee, therefore, has unanimously voted for a study and an examination of this problem to recommend some legislative action if it is needed.

The Federal Reserve Board in its report of 1938 pointed out that our present system of regulation and supervision over money and banking is still defective in many respects. The 15,000 banks today are subject to conflicting and overlapping laws and jurisdictions which result in discriminations against certain groups of banks and in a confusion of duties and responsibilities among different Federal and State authorities. It is stated that Federal supervision of banking itself is distributed among several governmental agencies without clear delimitation of the respective powers and responsibilities of these agencies.

I take it that it is desirable to make our banking and monetary mechanism effective that there be a clear division of responsibility and that there should not be conflicting jurisdiction and supervision over banks through which the monetary system operates. For that reason it is proposed, if this resolution is passed, to study and recommend what objectives should guide our monetary and banking authorities and the validity of the different plans proposed, and if there be a change, what Government machinery would be best calculated to carry out the acts of Congress in this important field.

I think it very important that this study may be made, to the end that Congress may have the benefit of a study of this important subject by one of its standing committees.

I have stated all that is proposed by the resolution. There is not anything, I assure the Senator, in the mind of the committee contemplating an investigation of banks. Otherwise I am sure the bankers would not have offered not only their support but complete cooperation in our efforts.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, it is some relief to know that the broad powers of the resolution are not intended to be used with respect to banks, and I shall rely upon that assurance.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator may well do so.

Mr. BAILEY. I have no question of faith in the Committee on Banking and Currency; I have a great deal of respect for it.

Now we are told that the whole object is to investigate the monetary system of the United States. What is wrong with the monetary system of the United States? What is there to prevent any Senator here from studying the monetary system without the expenditure of $25,000? I have been studying it very hard for several years, and, while I do not claim to know anything about it, my studies have not cost anybody anything.

There are Senators here who have been studying it ever since old man "Coin" Harvey founded his "financial school." I sometimes think they started wrong, but that does not matter. I heard a Senator say the other day that he swallowed "Coin's" financial school whole when it was first published. That explains much.

I will not quote what the majority leader has just said to me, but he has made a very apropos remark. What is the idea of studying the monetary system? What is the use of spending $25,000 on this proposed investigation? The whole theory of investigations by Congress is founded upon the contemplation of legislation. We do not investigate with a view to anything else except to aid ourselves in our function of legislating.

What legislation is to be attempted? What legislation have we had? We have had a very considerable amount and variety of legislation on the monetary question. I know there are a great many people in this country who are complaining that there is something wrong with the monetary system. If cotton goes to 8 cents a pound somebody blames the monetary system. If wheat goes to 60 cents they always blame the monetary system. Mr. President, that has been the policy of political quackery for at least 200 years. I do not know that anything has ever been done by way of solving the difficulties of a depression by operations on the monetary system.

I get much monetary propaganda through the mail. I understand what the authors of it are driving at. There are a great many people who would like to destroy the monetary system or blow it out with inflation. We would then have very high prices; we would have very high times also, and we would not have a Government when we finished. We have a managed currency now in the United States. We have a first-class Federal Reserve Board. I have rather admired its policies. It has told us in plain language-and I put their statement in the RECORD about 6 weeks agothat we do not need any additional currency; and I think that is true. I think that is true. I know the average man thinks we do. We have more money in circulation today than we have ever had before, except at the bottom of the depression. I think the figures are around $7,000,000,000, about $2,000,000,000 more than we had in 1926, which is considered a normal time. The proposition seems to be just to make a general investigation with a view to some legislation about our monetary system. All right; start it. During the 5 or 6 months that we shall be at home-

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BAILEY. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. Suppose we have this study, will any of those who make it know anything more about it when they get through than they now do?

Mr. BAILEY. No; and they will not be any more agreed on the facts; and, what is more, when the report is printed we shall have great difficulty in finding any Senator who ever read it or knew it was printed. That is my experience here about reports.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAILEY. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.
Mr. BORAH. Is the Senator discussing Senate Resolution

125?
Mr. BAILEY. I am discussing the resolution to appoint a committee to spend $25,000 to investigate the monetary system, and the banks, as I understood; but the chairman of the committee says he does not intend to investigate bankers or banks, but does intend to investigate the monetary system.

Mr. BORAH. May I ask the chairman of the committee a question? What is the resolution intended to cover in the way of an investigation?

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator that it is not to be an investigation at all. The word "investigation" is not used anywhere in the resolution, so far as I recall. It is proposed to be a study. A number of proposals have been made with reference to the management of our monetary policy, and there has been a demand among Senators and outside organizations that some action should be taken upon those proposals. They are different ones. They are in conflict. The American Farm Bureau Federation, for instance, and one other large labor organization, have also urged that this study be made; so if there is anything to the contention that our monetary policy is not properly aiding our recovery program, at least we ought to study the question. A number of resolutions have been introduced by Members of this body who have also urged, rather than having immediate action upon their legislation, that the committee at least study the question, and receive the opinions of those who have specialized in the subject. In addition to that, some legislation has been introduced attempting to cure conflicts of jurisdiction in different agencies over the banks of our country with reference to the examina-tion of their loans and other matters. One of the bankers who talked to me on this subject, the head of the American Bankers' Association, expressed their willingness to cooperate in this particular study. So if there is any conflicting jurisdiction by different agencies, that matter ought to be looked into and remedied; and that is the purpose of this particular resolution.

Mr. BORAH. The resolution says the Committee on Banking and Currency is authorized to conduct a study and to hold hearings to consider and recommend a national monetary and banking policy. Of course, if the resolution properly indicates its purpose, it is the most important resolution that has been submitted to this body in a long time. If there is going to be a study and consideration for the purpose of recommending a monetary policy for the United States, hardly anything more important than that has come before this body. The question which occurs to me is this: Is the resolution broad enough to cover a real study and consideration of the monetary policy of the United States?

Mr. WAGNER. I think it is.

Mr. BORAH. What I mean is, Do we want to enter upon a study of this question and confine the jurisdiction to a committee of the Senate? Ought not a special committee be created for that purpose?

Mr. WAGNER. Of course the Banking and Currency Committee has always had these problems before it, as a standing committee of the Senate.

Mr. BORAH. I am not criticizing the Banking and Currency Committee for the discharge of the duties which properly devolve upon the committee; but, in my judgment, the resolution proposes to enter upon the study of a great national policy which lies at the basis of all questions connected with the return of prosperity in this country. Is it satisfactory to build a committee to study that subject out of Members of the Senate alone? We should have a broad, scientific, nonpolitical committee, a special committee.

Mr. WAGNER. There is something to the Senator's suggestion. I thought, at any rate, the committee might begin its study and investigation. We should have to consider that question.

I may say that the committee, both the Democratic members and the Republican members, was unanimous in its view that this study should be made. They were anxious to have the study made because we have before us constant demands to have hearings upon particular bills, and complaints that we have not acted upon them; and the reason why we have not acted upon them is because we have not had sufficient time to study the questions involved in the proposals so as to make intelligent reports upon them.

I agree with the Senator. I think the study will be a very important one if it is conducted sensibly as a study. This is not the sort of an inquiry that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Balley] had in mind at all. It is not a question of self-exploitation, or anything of that kind.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I wish to assure the Senator that I did not think there was any self-exploitation about it.
Mr. WAGNER. I thought that was implicit in what the Senator said.

Mr. BAILEY. But I think the resolution is sufficiently sweeping to authorize the committee to investigate everything connected with banking and currency. I thought the Senator meant to investigate the banks. He says he does not.

Mr. WAGNER. I assure the Senator that the resolution states just what is intended by it. It is always very difficult to put in a resolution words which will limit it to the particular study we have in mind. I thought, by using the word "study," we were making very clear the intention of the committee.

The Senator from North Carolina says there is nothing the matter with the monetary policy. I may agree with the Senator, but there are others who differ; and I think it is time to study the question, so that we may bring to the Senate for its consideration at least whatever consideration and recommendation we may make as a result of the study.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I should like to conclude. I yielded to the Senator from New York and the Senator from Idaho, and was glad to do so. This is what I have in mind:

What this country needs above all things is a period of relative stability. The Congress, the Senate—I may speak of the Senate, and I do not mean to be critical—for 8 or 9 years, to my certain knowledge, has been the center of no end of alterations and proposed alterations. Men cannot carry on business when a Government, as powerful and farreaching as ours is, is forever changing—changing the currency, changing the taxes, changing the laws, changing the regulations. As the Senator from Georgia [Mr. George] said here the other day, none of us now knows what the law is or is going to be. We passed one recently, and the President comes forth and interprets it. That is well; he has a right, I suppose, to interpret. His duty is to administer it.

When one of our acts is brought before the Supreme Court, and no one here can ever again undertake to say what is constitutional and what is not. I do not expect ever to see the time when a Senator can rise again on this floor and say that a proposed act is constitutional or that it is unconstitutional. The fountainhead has become uncertain. We did have a body of doctrines in the Supreme Court reports upon which we could rely. All of us here have taken pleasure in sitting and listening to the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Borahl, hearing him expound the doctrines laid down in the great decisions. That is all gone. The Senator from Idaho cannot tell us now. The reports have lost much of their value.

I believe I will give my colleagues an instance. Yesterday we adopted an amendment to the tobacco section of the Farm Act. Very few in the Senate knew about it. I suppose most of the Senators did not know it was adopted. The Supreme Court held that the act we passed last year, or the year before, was constitutional. We imposed a penalty by pounds upon the sale of tobacco in interstate commerce in excess of allotments. The Supreme Court said that that was not control of agriculture, that it was control of commerce. But every Senator here who understood the bill knew that it controlled agriculture; every farmer who produced tobacco in North Carolina knew it was controlling agriculture. The Supreme Court did not know that. They said it was control of commerce, and they upheld the act. We had some stability at any rate. But yesterday we adopted another amendment, and we took the whole tobacco program off the basis on which the Supreme Court had held the law to be constitutional. We did have allotments in pounds, but under the new act we have them in acres. One does not ship acres in interstate commerce, one does ship pounds.

We had a penalty in terms of percentages of the amount sold, but now we have a flat penalty of 10 cents, and that is more than confiscatory. The old penalty was 50 percent, and anyone who knows anything about tobacco knows it sells by grade. One grade sells for 6 cents, another for 10 cents, another for 20, another for 25, another for 50. We put a penalty of 10 cents a pound on tobacco regardless of price, which is absolutely prohibitive, and we make allotments in acres, not pounds.

I am not complaining about that. The bill passed by unanimous consent. This is my point: We utterly changed the whole agricultural set-up so far as tobacco was concerned, and that notwithstanding the fact we had just gotten an opinion from the Supreme Court upholding the law. We so changed it that there will not be a farmer in the whole southern Tobacco Belt who will now know whether the new law is constitutional or not; and I afraid to say.

I would not speak of the Supreme Court disrespectfully. I do not intend as long as I live to do so. I stood here for its independence, and God knows I will stand for its independence until I die. I sometimes think I would rather die than to see its independence destroyed.

Mr. BORAH rose.

Mr. BAILEY. Let me say to the Senator, it was a new Justice of the Supreme Court who spoke of the Supreme Court as being "reconstructed." I would not do so.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, in reference to what seems to be the gloomy outlook of the able Senator touching the decisions of the Supreme Court, I may say that in my opinion the changes which are now supposed to be taking place in the opinions of the Supreme Court and its attitude toward current questions are not greater than the changes which it was charged took place under Marshall. are not greater than they were supposed to be under Taney, who succeeded Marshall, and not nearly so great as changes which took place following the Civil War. Those were really revolutionary periods in the history of constitutional law. I am of the opinion, in the light of subsequent history, that the attitude of Marshall upon the questions before him served really to lay the foundation for permanency in this Government, although they were regarded at that time as revolutionary and destructive. Great and distinguished statesmen declared they were violative of the whole theory of our dual system of government. The changes wrought by Taney in his decisions were of undoubted and transcendent benefit to the people of this country, although they were regarded as in a measure overthrowing Marshall's opinions in many respects and destructive of what had come to be accepted as vital principles. They came in time to fit into the laws as previously announced.

I cannot say so much for the decisions which followed the Civil War. They stand out in some respects rather by themselves. They were tainted in some respects, in my judgment, by the passions and the hatred which existed at that time, and for which there was no remedy except time. But we are all thankful that time has erased some of the mistakes made.

I do not feel that the supposed revolutionary current decisions of the Supreme Court will in the end work to the detriment of this Government. I do not see in them the destructive tendency some do. Frightful errors are being made. That is always true in great economic upheavals.

It would be strange indeed if errors did not creep into the decisions of our highest courts. But may we not hope and may we not believe that under the sway of time and reason all serious errors will be righted and the old Republic will continue its assured course as a government of law. The people are still there, loyal in heart and steady in purpose, and above all they are devoted to our institutions. Let us have confidence in the people and faith in our institutions. The errors which come like scum to the surface in time of storm are not the criterions by which to judge the trend and worth of a nation.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I thank the Senator, and I do not know that I disagree with him about those matters, I was arguing that we had reached a stage of great uncertainty, and that the Senate has pursued a policy of instability consistently.

The foundation of recovery is stability. The first man who rises in America and gives the American people an assurance of stability in the Government will make the greatest contribution to the deliverance of this country. Those men who forever disturb the country are doing more to prolong the depression than all the other forces combined, foreign or domestic. That is what I had in mind. I was using this recent act to show how we uprooted a constitutional act and laid the foundation for a new series of actions and more uncertainty.

Now let us go back to the main point. It is proposed now that we investigate the monetary system. That is notice to everyone in the United States, everyone who has an insurance policy—and I am told there are 65,000,000 of them—notice to every man who has a bank account, to every man who has an investment, that we are now beginning to look forward to find some justification for some legislation on that subject. All I am saying is that is instability—that is disturbance. I should think that after 8 years of incessant legislating, and alterations and changes, it would occur to us that we might stop a while and see what a little silence would do for the country. After a thousand investigations we might decide to be satisfied with what we have found out and proceed on that, without trying to find something more.

I believe I will give the Senate an illustration. I inherited about a year ago a $20,000 appropriation from the Congress to investigate labor conditions in the maritime service. Two thousand five hundred dollars of the money had been contracted by my predecessor—and, of course, I speak with the utmost respect of him, and the most affectionate regard for his memory. I think I will pause to say that I believe Dr. Copeland lost his life in the service of his country. My colleagues do not know about that, but I was working alongside of him up until within 40 hours of his death, working on conference controversies. I saw him collapse, not from ill-health but from overwork. So I speak of him with the utmost reverence.

I succeeded to the chairmanship of the Committee on Commerce, and I still have this appropriation to my credit. I could have spent it. I could have plowed a furrow right through the whole labor situation in the maritime industry, and I could have advertised American ships as being in the hands of Communists, and all that. They are not. I could have had a Roman holiday here. I did not have it, and we are doing better by reason of not having it. The situation is ironing itself out. The labor situation is improving. We may make an investigation, but I am not going to spend that money just because I have a right to spend it. It is a small sum, but I am in favor of saving the small sums, as well as the big ones.

But that is not the point. I was just taking in the whole situation. The proposal comes forward in the closing days of the session for an investigation of the monetary situation. It is proposed that we make that uncertain. Everything else is uncertain; we will make that uncertain; and from now until next January the American people will be wondering what sort of monetary system they are going to have.

If one will read the literature which the propagandists are sending out he can see that we would be opening up Pandora's box. I have lived a long time now; I have lived through several depressions; and I have never yet seen a depression come upon us without every crackpot on earth coming forth and blaming the monetary system. I have seen men who were more or less reformed dipsomaniacs blame the monetary system because they were poor.

What are we to do with the monetary system? I have some money to invest, I may say, and I would like to invest it. But am I going to invest it if there is to be an operation on the monetary system? I will wait and see what is to be done with the monetary system before I risk my money, and if I do not do that, I am a fool.

So I take my good friend the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency at his word in this matter. I am opposed to any such investigation on the ground that it would be a further contribution to instability in a very unstable situation. Let us just let the thing lie. Let us give the country a little chance. Let us cease the constant attacks upon the existing status.

Perhaps we did need new laws, but heaven knows we have gotten them. It may be we did need new legislation. Heaven knows we have gotten 400 or 500 acts. I think now and then the passage of a law may be a good thing, but I think in order to be a good thing it has to be worked out of human experience. I have no more faith in most of this legislation as a cure for depression than I have in shin plasters as a cure for cancer, and I have no great regard for statesmanship which is reduced to but one remedy for this depression, and that is the appropriations of borrowed public money. That is about what we are reduced to, except to investigate with a view to seeing what more changes can be made.

Mr. President, that is all I have to say about the matter. I am against the resolution on the ground that it makes for instability at a time when the crying need of the country is a little assurance that men who are trying to work and trying to recover and trying to build industries will be allowed to attend to their own business under a situation in which they can have a little faith.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, what is pending before the Senate?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The parliamentary situation is that the Senate, on motion, has taken up for consideration Senate Resolution 125. The question is on agreeing to the resolution as amended.

Mr. KING rose.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah desire to discuss the resolution?

Mr. KING. There are Senators who will discuss it.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I ask if the Senator will yield to permit the reporting of the third deficiency bill from the Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the matter which is pending would take long to dispose of I would not want to interfere with proceedings to consider the appropriation bill, but I thought we were about ready to dispose of the resolution, and if we could do so, then we could proceed to consider the appropriations bill.

Mr. KING. I think we had better take up the appropriation bill, Mr. President.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, let me say in that connection, supplementing what the Senator from New York has said, that it is not a matter of life and death whether this resolution is adopted or not, but the Committee on Banking and Currency unanimously reported it favorably. It provides only for $25,000 to enable the committee to make a study. It does not provide and it is not contemplated that junkets will be undertaken in the ordinary sense. It simply provides for the use of the money to make the investigation. The committee will have to have some help in making stenographic reports and probably some research on the subject. It does not represent an extravagant outlay. I think it might be helpful to the Senate to have a consideration of this subject, in view of the fact that there are half a dozen or more bills and resolutions pending in the Senate providing for investigations of various kinds dealing with the monetary question. It might be very valuable and helpful in allaying a good deal of agitation if the committee could indulge in this work between now and the next session. I hope the Senator from Utah will not object to its passage.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the Senator from Utah feels that this is no time to engage in a survey of the money question. We have surveyed it and studied it. We have all the information that is available. I think we had better proceed to consider the appropriation bill. Otherwise I shall have to take the floor on the resolution.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, may I inquire what the parliamentary situation is?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to Senate resolution 125, as amended.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, if the deficiency bill is taken up for consideration now it simply means that the consideration of the resolution will be temporarily laid aside?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If by unanimous consent the resolution is temporarily laid aside, it will not lose its position. It will still be the unfinished business before the Senate.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, what is the position of Senate resolution 125?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has stated that Senate resolution 125, as amended, is before the Senate for adoption or for further amendments. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. Adams] desires to report the third deficiency appropriation bill and to ask for its present consideration.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

THIRD DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, from the Committee on Appropriations I report favorably, with amendments, the bill (H. R. 7462) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, and I submit a report (No. 1138) theeron.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be received without objection.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to consider the third deficiency bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Colorado?

There being no objection the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7462) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, in this connection it should be said to the Members of the Senate that in an effort to expedite the closing of the session we are submitting the original copy of the bill. There are not available printed copies of the bill. We have the House bill and the amendments on this copy. I want Senators to understand the

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, the members of the committee who are of the minority of the Senate, who have considered this bill, have indicated to me that under the circumstances that method is satisfactory to them. I am glad to make that statement and to say that I have no desire to interpose an objection to such procedure, under the circumstances.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the first committee amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, after line 2, it is proposed to insert-

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator from Colorado yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. KING. I ask the Senator from Colorado, if a brief explanation of the changes were submitted, whether it would not facilitate the consideration of the bill?

Mr. ADAMS. I will say to the Senator, if Senators will pardon me for speaking from this place in front of the clerk's desk, that I must stay where I can have contact with the only existing copy of the bill. There is no continuity about the bill-that is, there is a series of changes upon different subjects-and I do not think much would be accomplished by an effort to anticipate. I think rather it would save time to take each amendment, as it is reached and read by the clerk, and make the explanation at that point. There is this general statement to be made: That the House bill appropriated some $53,000,000 or $54,000,000. The Senate committee is recommending a very substantial increase. I think the increase recommended by the Senate committee will aggregate $130,000,000. The major item is $119,000,000 to restore the capital of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I regret very much that that amendment has been reported by the committee.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it. Mr. SMITH. As these amendments come up and explanation is given by the chairman of the subcommittee, is it contemplated that we shall vote on them, or what is the proposed

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will say that that is the parliamentary practice.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that it be read for amendment, and that the amendments of the committee be first considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, what was the request?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That the Senate proceed to the consideration of the committee amendments first, and that the bill will then be open to general amendment.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I seek to ask a question before that motion is acted on. I should like to ask the Senator from Colorado if he will yield to me for the purpose of asking whether or not anything was done with reference to the F. H. A. item?

Mr. ADAMS. The item dealing with the F. H. A. was increased in accordance with the F. H. A. request.

Mr. DANAHER. The reason, of course, was that when the committee restored title 1 to the F. H. A. bill the appropriation bill had already been reported.

Mr. ADAMS. The F. H. A. asked for one and a half million dollars-$500,000 under title 1 and $1,000,000 under title 2.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The committee amendments will be stated.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, may we have order in the Chamber, and will Senators speak loud enough so those of us who have places in the back of the Chamber may hear?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I not only wish to second the request made by the Senator from Florida for order in the Chamber, but I also wish to request that the clerks and the Senate proceed reasonably slowly with the amendments on this bill, because Senators not members of the committee are under the disadvantage of not having a printed copy of the bill showing the committee amendments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is disorder both in the Chamber and in the galleries. The Chair has been trying for some time to stop conversation in both places so the Chair may hear fully the request of Senators, which he cannot now do.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Colorado yield for a question?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. Does the House committee print form a basis for following the amendments to be now stated?

Mr. ADAMS. It will be an accurate basis.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I wanted to suggest to Members of the Senate that if they would secure copies of the House bill they would be enabled more easily to follow the amendments which are now to be read by the clerk. The bill is H. R. 7462.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the first committee amendment.

The first committee amendment was on page 2, after line 2. to insert:

Clerical assistants to Senators: Ninety-six additional clerks at $1,800 per annum each, one for each Senator (in lieu of the assistant clerks now authorized by S. Res. 144, agreed to August 15, 1935, which resolution is repealed as of January 1, 1940) for the period January 1, 1940, to June 30, 1940, $86,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title I-General appropriations-legislative", on page 2, after the amendment just agreed to, to insert:

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Government Printing Office," on page 3, after line 17, to insert:

Wannall, messengers on night duty during the first session of the Seventy-sixth Congress, $900 each; in all, $3,600, to be paid from the appropriation for printing and binding for Congress for the fiscal year 1940.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Executive—Independent Establishments—Civil Aeronautics Authority", on page 4, line 25, after the words "in all", to strike out "$3,000,000" and insert "$5,675,000"; so as to read:

Civilian pilot training: For all necessary expenses of the Civil Aeronautics Authority during the fiscal year 1940 in carrying out the duties, powers, and functions devolving upon it pursuant to the authority contained in the Civilian Pilot Training Act of 1939 (Public, No. 153, approved June 27, 1939), including personal services and rentals in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; traveling expenses; purchase and exchange, operation, maintenance, repair, and overhaul of aircraft; purchase and exchange, hire, maintenance, repair, and operation of passenger-carrying automobiles; purchase and exchange of professional and scientific books, books of reference, atlases, maps, and periodicals; in all, $5,675,000:

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Federal Loan Agency", on page 5, line 24, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$333,000" and insert "$500,000" and in line 25, after the word "and", to strike out "$667,000" and insert "$1,000,000"; so as to read:

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Public Health Service", on page 7, after line 12, to insert:

Grants to States for public health work: For an additional amount for the purpose of assisting States, counties, health districts, and other political subdivisions of the States in establishing and maintaining adequate public health services, including the same objects specified under this head in the Treasury Department Appropriation Act, 1940, $3,000,000: Provided, That the amount specified herein shall not be available for expenditure unless and until the increased authorization for grants to States for the purposes of section 601 of the Social Security Act, contained in H. R. 6635 Seventy-sixth Congress is enacted into law.

for the purposes of section 601 of the Social Security Act, contained in H. R. 6635, Seventy-sixth Congress, is enacted into law.

Disease and sanitation investigations: For an additional amount for carrying out the purposes of section 603 of the Social Security Act and section 1 of the act of August 14, 1912, including the same objects and subject to the same limitations specified under this head in the Treasury Department Appropriation Act, 1940, and including the pay and allowances of not to exceed five additional regular active commissioned officers, $81,000: Provided, That the amount specified herein shall not be available for expenditure unless and until the increased authorization for grants to States for the purposes of section 601 of the Social Security Act, contained in H. R. 6635, Seventy-sixth Congress, are enacted into law.

The amendment was agreed to.

LXXXIV—694

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Adams] a question. Does the Senator believe that this additional $2,000,000 plus is required, in view of the fact that the bill itself carries $12,500,000?

Mr. ADAMS. I will say to the Senator that my own information is very scanty. As one member of the committee, I have relied upon the recommendations of the Budget Director and upon the representations of those like the Senator, who are members of the Finance Committee. The social-security bill is in conference, and these provisions are all conditioned upon the approval of the conference report and the final enactment of the bill. I cannot answer as to the details and facts, because I, as well as the committee, have largely had to accept the recommendations which came from those who were supposed to know.

Mr. KING. I might add to the statement the Senator has just made that the conferees upon the social-security bill, which has been in conference for approximately 20 days, have signed the report, and the bill will be reported to the House, probably this afternoon.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment on page 8.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Federal Works Agency," on page 8, after line 19, to insert:

Construction of public buildings outside the District of Columbia: For further carrying out the program for the acquisition of sites and construction of public buildings authorized by the paragraph under the caption "Emergency construction of public buildings outside the District of Columbia," contained in the Third Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1937, approved August 25, 1937 (50 Stat. 772), and increased by the Federal Public Buildings Appropriation Act of 1938, approved June 21, 1938, $1,000,000.

The agreement was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, after line 7, to insert:

PUBLIC ROADS ADMINISTRATION

Inter-American Highway: For the continuation of cooperation with the several governments, members of the Pan-American Union, in connection with the survey and construction of the inter-American highway as provided in Public Resolution No. 104, approved March 4, 1929 (45 Stat. 1897), as amended or supplemented, and for performing engineering service in Pan-American countries for and upon the request of any agency or governmental corporation of the United States, the Public Roads Administration is hereby authorized to expend not to exceed $40,000 to pay all costs incurred for such work from the administrative funds provided under the act of July 11, 1916 (23 U. S. C. 21), as amended or supplemented, or as otherwise provided.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Colorado, with regard to the various increased authorizations which were made by the Senate in the amendments to the Social Security Act, with relation to public health, increased grants for the care of maternal and child health, and for vocational rehabilitation, whether or not the committee in all instances incorporated in the bill the Budget recommendations with regard to the items I have mentioned, contingent upon the enactment of those amendments into law?

Mr. ADAMS. I believe that in each instance the Budget estimate was incorporated in the bill literally as it came to us from the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. McKELLAR. Without any change whatsoever.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment on page 9, after line 7.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, after line 25, to insert:

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE WRITING OF THE STAR-SPANGLED BANNER

To provide for participation by the United States in the celebration to be held at Fort McHenry on September 14, 1939, in celebration of the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the writing of The Star-Spangled Banner, as authorized by Public Resolution No. —, approved August —, 1939, fiscal year 1940, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 10, after line 21, to insert:

NATIONAL CAPITAL PARK AND PLANNING COMMISSION

For an additional amount for each and every purpose requisite for and incident to the work of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission necessary toward carrying into effect the provisions of the act entitled "An act for the acquisition, establishment, and development of the George Washington Memorial Parkway along the Potomac from Mount Vernon and Fort Washington to the Great Falls, and to provide for the acquisition of lands in the District of Columbia and the States of Maryland and Virginia requisite to the comprehensive park parkway and play-Virginia requisite to the comprehensive park, parkway, and play-ground system of the National Capital," approved May 29, 1930; personal services, including real estate and other technical services, at rates of pay to be fixed by the Commission and not exceeding those usual for similar services and without reference to civilservice rules and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended; travel expenses; expenses of surveys and searching of titles, purchase of options, and all other costs incident to the acquisition of land; operation and maintenance of passenger-carrying vehicles for official use; fiscal year 1940, $150,000, to be expended in carrying out the provisions of section 1 (a) of said act, and to remain available until expended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 10, after the amendment just agreed to, to insert:

SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION

For an additional amount for five Commissioners and other personal services in the District of Columbia, and for all other authorized expenditures of the Securities and Exchange Commission in performing the duties imposed by or in pursuance of law, including the employment of experts when necessary, fiscal year 1940, $110,000, including the same objects specified under this head in the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1940.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 11, line 12, under the heading "United States Coronado Exposition," to strike out "$175,000" and insert "$250,000" so as to read:

For all expenses necessary to carry out the provisions of the act entitled "An act authorizing Federal participation in the commemoration and observance of the four-hundredth anniversary of the explorations of Francisco Vasquez de Coronado," approved July 17, 1939, including personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere without reference to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, and printing and binding, $250,000, to remain available until expended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 11, to strike out lines 14 to 25 and lines 1 to 5, both inclusive, on page 12, as follows:

UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION SESQUICENTENNIAL COMMISSION

United States constitutions sesquicentennial commission

For compiling and publishing a history of the formation, the signing, the ratification, and the establishment of the Constitution, including such historical facts and data as the Commission may deem pertinent relative to the commencement of the First Congress of the United States under the Constitution; the proceedings and ceremonies in connection with the inauguration of George Washington as the first President of the United States under the Constitution; the adoption and ratification of the Bill of Rights, and the first meeting of the Supreme Court of the United States; including therein also a final report of the activities of the Commission during the Nation-wide observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the formation, ratification, and establishment of the Constitution, fiscal year 1940, $40,000.

Mr. KING. I inquire if further on in the bill there is any appropriation carried for this item.

Mr. BYRNES. No; there is nothing else in the bill about it. Mr. KING. Is there any reason for this item being elimi-

Mr. BYRNES. The committee was of the opinion that at sometime, somewhere, the appropriation for this purpose should come to an end.

Mr. KING. I agree with the Senator.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment last stated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 20, after line 12, under the subhead "Settlement of Claims", to insert:

For the payment of the claim of M. M. The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 38, line 25, under the heading "Department of Labor, Office of the Secretary", to strike out "$15,500" and insert "$21,750."

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I ask to what does that item refer in the office of the Secretary of Labor?

Mr. ADAMS. It refers to contingent and miscellaneous expenses of the Labor Department as specified in the Department of Labor Appropriations Act.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does the Senator mean by the "Department of Labor Act" the Wage and Hour Act, or does he refer to the various other activities of the Labor Department?

Mr. ADAMS. I suggest that the clerk read the provision. The legislative clerk read as follows:

Contingent expenses: For an additional amount for contingent and miscellaneous expenses of the offices and bureaus of the Department, including the same objects and under the same conditions specified in the Department of Labor Appropriation Act, 1940, $21,750.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 39, line 9, to strike out "$227,000" and insert "$339,500", so as to read:

Traveling expenses: For an additional amount for traveling expenses, except traveling expenses incident to the deportation of aliens under the Department of Labor, fiscal year 1940, $339,500.

Mr. BRIDGES. Does that item have reference to the wage and hour law?

Mr. ADAMS. It has reference to the Wage and Hour Act. It is a provision for additional traveling expenses, which it is felt is required in enforcing the act

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 39, after line 17, under the subhead "Immigration and Naturalization Service," to Transporting Filipinos to the Philippine Islands: The unexpended balance of the appropriation of $150,000 contained in the First Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1937, for all authorized expenditures necessary to enable the Secretary of Labor to administer the provisions of the act of July 10, 1935 (49 Stat. 478), as amended, and continued available for the same purposes during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, and to and including December 31, 1939, but the First Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1939, in the First Deficiency Act, 1 1938, by the First Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1938, is hereby further continued available during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and to and including December 31, 1940, to enable the Secretary of Labor to administer the provisions of the act of July 27, 1939.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, do I understand from the chairman of the subcommittee that this provision will allow the department to send back to the Philippines Filipinos who are here illegally? Why should we pay their expenses?

Mr. ADAMS. No. They are in part here legally, and under this provision Filipinos in the United States are being returned to their homes. The policy has been carried on for several years, and this item makes available the existing appropriation for the current year. It does not increase any appropriation or change the purpose of the law.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I ask the chairman of the subcommittee what is the total increase in the Senate bill over the appropriations contained in the bill as passed by the other House?

Mr. ADAMS. Roughly, I think the increase is $131,000,000. Mr. SMITH. That is the increase over the appropriations provided by the House?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes, sir. Mr. SMITH. Including all items?

Mr. ADAMS. That is correct.

Mr. McKELLAR. I will say to the Senator from South Carolina that of that amount $119,000,000 are for the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 39, under the subhead "Children's Bureau," to insert the following:

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after the amendment last agreed to, to insert the following:

Grants to States for maternal and child-health services, Children's Bureau: For an additional amount for grants to States for the purpose of enabling each State to extend and improve services for promoting the health of mothers and children, as authorized in title V, part 1, of the Social Security Act, approved August 14, 1935, as amended: Provided, That an allotment to a State pursuant to section 502 (b), as amended, shall not be included in computing for the purposes of subsections (a) and (b) of section 504 an amount expended or estimated to be expended by the State, fiscal year 1940, $1,510,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, following the amendment last agreed to, to insert:

Grants to States for services for crippled children, Children's Bureau: For an additional amount for the purpose of enabling each State to extend and improve services for crippled children, as authorized in title V, part 2, of the Social Security Act, approved August 14, 1935, as amended, fiscal year 1940, $760,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to insert, following the amendment last agreed to, the following:

Grants to States for child-welfare services, Children's Bureau: For an additional amount for grants to States for the purpose of enabling the United States, through the Children's Bureau, to cooperate with State public-welfare agencies in establishing, extending, and strengthening public-welfare services for the care of homeless or neglected children, or children in danger of becoming delinquent, as authorized in title V, part 3, of the Social Security act (42 U. S. C., 721), as amended, fiscal year 1940, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, is the same condition annexed to this appropriation as well as to the preceding one?

Mr. ADAMS. There is a blanket condition referring back to three or four of these items. I ask the clerk to state the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. Following the amendment last agreed to, it is proposed to insert the following:

The foregoing items of appropriations for the Children's Bureau shall not be available for expenditure unless and until the proposed amendments to title V of the Social Security Act, as contained in H. R. 6635, are enacted into law.

In the administration of title V of the Social Security Act, as amended, for the fiscal year 1940, payments to States for any quarter of the fiscal year 1940 under parts 1, 2, and 3 may be made quarter of the fiscal year 1940 under parts 1, 2, and 3 may be made with respect to any State plan approved under such respective parts by the Chief of the Children's Bureau prior to or during such quarter, but no such payment shall be made with respect to any plan for any period prior to the quarter in which such plan is submitted to the Chief of the Children's Bureau for approval.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 40, under the subhead "Wage and Hour Division", in line 19, to strike out "$762,-500" and insert "$1,143,750", so as to read:

Salaries: For an additional amount for all personal services for the Wage and Hour Division in performing the duties imposed upon it by the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, fiscal year 1940, $1,143,750.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I ask the chairman of the subcommittee to state the amount which the Senate committee added to the amount appropriated by the House.

Mr. ADAMS. Approximately $400,000. Mr. PEPPER. May I ask the chairman a further question? In order to offer an amendment to appropriate the amount of the Budget estimate—that is, $2,000,000—what should be the variation of the figure? I desire to offer an amendment for that purpose.

Mr. ADAMS. I think the fact is that the bill as reported appropriates the entire $2,000,000. When the different items are cumulated, I think the Senator will find that the $2,000,000 is included.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is true.

Mr. PEPPER. I do not want to have any misunderstanding about the matter. Of course, I will accept the assurances of the very able Senators from Colorado and Tennessee. The Senators know what happened. Two million dollars was requested by the Budget Bureau, but only $1,000,000 of the $2,000,000 requested by the Budget Bureau was allowed by the House. Then the witnesses came before the Senate Appropriations Committee and asked for the remaining $1,000,000. Do the Senators say that that request was granted and is embodied in the bill?

Mr. ADAMS. That was the intention of the Senate committee, and I think it is the fact.

Mr. PEPPER. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the next amendment reported by the committee.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the heading "Navy Department, Office of the Secretary", on page 41, line 12, after the word "in", to insert "Senate Document Numbered 103, and"; and in line 13, after the word "Congress", to strike out "$341.93" and insert "$4,183.93", so as to read:

Claims for damages by collision with naval vessels: To pay claims for damages adjusted and determined by the Secretary of the Navy under the provisions of the Act entitled "An act to amend the act authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to settle claims for damages to private property arising from collisions with naval vessels," approved December 28, 1922, as fully set forth in Senate Document Numbered 103, and House Document Numbered 413, Seventy-sixth Congress, $4,183.04.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 41, after line 13, to insert:

The applicable appropriations provided for the naval establishment for the fiscal year 1940 are hereby made available for expenditure, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Navy, for chartering and commissioning the S. S. Bear as a vessel of the United States Navy for the purposes of the survey of the Antarctic regions to be made by the United States Antarctic Service as authorized by the Urgent Deficiency and Supplemental Appropriation Act, fiscal years 1939 and 1940, approved June 30, 1939, Public No. 160, 76th Congress: Provided, That such expenditures shall be in addition to the amounts appropriated for this purpose for the Department of the Interior under the head of purpose for the Department of the Interior under the head of "Expenses, Division of Territories and Island Possessions" in the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1939, approved May 2, 1939, and the Urgent Deficiency and Supplemental Appropriation Act, fiscal years 1939 and 1940, approved June 30, 1939.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 43, after line 5, to strike out:

BUREAU OF AERONAUTICS

Aviation, Navy: For an additional amount for aviation, fiscal year 1940, as follows: Toward the construction of a rigid airship authorized by the act approved May 17, 1938 (52 Stat. 401), $300,000, and, in addition, the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized to enter into obligations for this purpose to an amount not in excess of $1,700,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Marine Corps", on page 43, after line 20, to insert:

Alterations to naval vassels: For an additional amount under this Anterations to havai vassels: For an additional amount under this appropriation title, as contained in the Naval Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, to acquire and convert two motor vessels, as authorized by section 2 of the act approved July 25, 1939 (Public, No. 212, 76th Cong.), fiscal year 1940, $2,500,— 000, to remain available until expended.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield. Mr. KING. Was any additional evidence adduced before the Senator's committee which was not brought before the committee in the House when it considered this item?

Mr. ADAMS. The Acting Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Charles Edison, appeared in advocacy of the amendment.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the matter arose after the House passed the bill. That was the reason for the action that was taken.

Mr. KING. I will state to the able Senator from South Carolina that I assume that most of these augmentations were the result of evidence which was not brought before the House committee.

Mr. BYRNES. And because it was shown that the necessity had arisen after the House acted. I will add that many requests were refused because those making them could not make such a showing.

Mr. ADAMS. I will say to the Senator that the committee sat long hours and heard many, many individuals who came before it in reference to the various matters. It was really a more extensive hearing than is often had, and no one was denied an opportunity to come.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the next amendment reported by the committee.

The next amendment was, on page 46, line 1, after the heading "Department of State," to insert:

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

Claims for personal injury and death arising in foreign countries, act of February 13, 1936, Department of State: To pay a claim for injury and death adjusted and determined by the Secretary of State under the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide for the adjustment and settlement of personal injury and death cases arising in certain foreign countries," approved February 13, 1936, as fully set forth in Senate Document No. 104, Seventy-sixth

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on the same page, after line 16, to insert:

Payment to Government of Panama: For payment to the Government of Panama for the fiscal years 1934 to 1940, both inclusive, in accordance with the provisions of the treaty signed between the United States and Panama on March 2, 1936, $2,010,000, together with the unexpended balance of $250,000 for this purpose for each of the fiscal years 1939 and 1940, and the amount of $250,000 from each of the accounts "Outstanding Liabilities, 1937," and "Outstanding Liabilities, 1938." Checks drawn on the Treasurer of the United States for payment to the Government of Panama dated February 24, 1934, February 26, 1935, February 26, 1936, February 26, 1937, February 26, 1938, and February 27, 1939, Nos. 27530, 34602, 48769, 63123, 67232, and 70612, respectively, shall be canceled and the amount of check No. 70612 shall be credited to the appropriation from which drawn.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Miscellaneous", on page 46, line 24, after the word "fiscal", to strike out "year" and insert "years 1939 and", so as to read:

Agrarian Claims Commission, United States and Mexico: For the expenses of participation by the United States in the settlement of claims of citizens of the United States against the Government of Mexico on account of expropriations of agrarian properties since August 30, 1927, as authorized by and in accordance with the act of April 10, 1939, fiscal years 1939 and 1940, $85,000.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, that item, as I recall, refers to the so-called Agrarian Claims Commission.

Mr. ADAMS. That is correct.

Mr. KING. May I ask the Senator, what has become of the two commissions which were set up a number of years ago? My understanding is that both of those commissions have ceased to function and that no other commission is now in existence. Am I right in that?

Mr. ADAMS. I understand that a new commission was created by the present Congress.

Mr. KING. What claims were they to consider-the expropriation of oil lands as well as farm lands?

Mr. ADAMS. I do not think the jurisdiction of the commission included oil lands. I think it was intended to include just agrarian lands—that is, farm lands and grazing lands. I am speaking without any recent familiarity with the statute.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 46, after line 24, to insert:

Second Inter-American Radio Conference, Santiago, Chile: For the expenses of participation by the United States in the Second Inter-American Radio Conference, to be held at Santiago, Chile, in 1940, including personal services in the District of Columbia or elsewhere, without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended; stenographic reporting, translating, and other services by contract if deemed necessary, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U. S. C. 5); communication service; rent; travel expenses; local transportation; transportation of things; hire, mainpenses; local transportation; transportation of things; hire, mainpenses; local transportation; transportation of things; fire, mantenance, and operation of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles; purchase of necessary books, documents, newspapers, periodicals, and maps; stationery; equipment; official cards; entertainment; printing and binding; and such other expenses as may be authorized by the Secretary of State, including the reimbursement of other appropriations from which payments may have been made for any of the purposes herein specified, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of State, fiscal year 1940, $16,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 46, after the amendment just agreed to, to insert:

ment just agreed to, to insert:

Meeting of Treasury Representatives, Guatemala, Guatemala: For the expenses of participation by the United States in the Meeting of Treasury Representatives, to be held at Guatemala, Guatemala, in 1939, including personal services in the District of Columbia or elsewhere, without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended; stenographic reporting, translating, and other services by contract if deemed necessary, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U. S. C. 5); communication service; rent; travel expenses; local transportation; transportation of things; hire, maintenance, and operation of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles; purchase of necessary books, documents, newspapers, and periodicals; stationery; equipment; official cards; entertainment; printing and binding; and such other expenses as may be authorized by the Secretary of State, including the reimbursement of other appropriations from which payments may have been made for any of the purposes herein specified, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of State, fiscal year 1940, $2,750.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head "Treasury Department, Office of the Secretary", on page 47, after line 2, to insert:

Restoration, capital impairment, Commodity Credit Corporation: To enable the Secretary of the Treasury, on behalf of the United States, to restore the amount of the capital impairment of the Commodity Credit Corporation as of March 31, 1939, by contribution to the Corporation as provided by the act approved March 8, 1938 (Public, No. 442, 75th Cong.), fiscal year 1940, $119,599,918.05.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. ADAMS. I do.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Can the Senator give me a general estimate of the total appropriations made at this session for agricultural purposes?

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator cannot.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Will the Senator just make a stab at it? It is a very large subject, and a stab might hit it.

Mr. ADAMS. Notwithstanding the fact that it is a large subject

Mr. VANDENBERG. It is a large sum. I would like to know about what it is.

Mr. ADAMS. I am going to ask the Senator to excuse me from making an estimate.

Mr. KING rose.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Is the Senator from Utah prepared to testify?

Mr. KING. It is over $1,460,000,000.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I understood it was about a billion and a half dollars.

Mr. KING. That does not include, as I recall, perhaps a hundred million or a hundred and fifty million dollars which will accrue to the fund from customs duties, which automatically will be transferred to this department.

Mr. ADAMS. The Agricultural Appropriation bill I think carried roughly a billion and a quarter dollars.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Do I understand that, although the distinguished Secretary of Agriculture has a billion and a half dollars to spend on his divers and sundry schemes for saving the farmer, he asserts that unless he has this final $113,000,000 he cannot possibly save them?

Mr. ADAMS. I do not believe I am quite qualified to relate to the Senator what the Secretary of Agriculture may have said. He has said before the committee that unless this appropriation were made, he was apprehensive there would be a very serious decline in agricultural commodities.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That is what I understood he said. What I want to know is, if he is going to use this $119.000,000 to sustain prices, what is he going to use the other billion and a half for?

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, it is provided by Congress what he must do with it, and this amount is necessary in order to hold up the prices of wheat, corn, and cotton under acts of Congress which he is required to execute.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I thought he was going to hold those prices up by making loans.

Mr. McKELLAR. No; it was not that way at all. I am not sure but that the Senator voted for the bill in 1938.

Mr. VANDENBERG. It does not make the slightest difference what I voted for; I am trying to find out what is going Mr. McKELLAR. The loans were for the purpose of stabilizing the prices of cotton, corn, and wheat.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I have not sufficient evidence to enable me to say that that will not work, or whether the problem will have to be met through this device, or this $119,000,000.

Mr. McKELLAR. There were no appropriations made previously, in the general bill, for this purpose, to give the Commodity Credit Corporation the money with which to operate on the new crop.

Mr. VANDENBERG. What I want to know is, do we find ourselves in the position that the Secretary of Agriculture is going to say to the country that if he does not get this final $119,000,000 the responsibility rests at that point for the failure of his agricultural program?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I do not know that the Secretary said it was a final $119,000,000; but this was the statement, as I recall. He said that the Commodity Credit Corporation, created for the purpose of making loans which were mandatory under the agricultural acts upon certain crops, in accordance with formulas included in those acts, upon either three or four major crops, made loans, which were not compulsory, in order to maintain the market prices of other crops, but in making the loans on the major crops, which I think were cotton, corn, and wheat, they had lost the capital of the Commodity Credit Corporation, which was originally $100,-000,000. Then under an act of Congress $94,000,000 was restored some time ago, and they are now $119,000,000 short, so that in order to restore the capital the $119,000,000 appropriation is required.

They have, in addition to the capital, as the Senator doubtless knows, a lending capacity of $900,000,000. It was originally $600,000,000 and Congress has increased it to $900,000,-000. Loans have been made until practically all the lending capacity has been either exhausted or has been committed. There was some confusion in the statements before the committee. At one point we were told that there were $131,000,-000 not yet committed, but accompanying that was a statement that there was some kind of a quasi commitment which really had consumed all but $9,000,000. The Secretary said that there were certain other loans, notably on cotton and corn, which could not be made unless the capital was replaced: that if it were not replaced there would have to be a prorating of the lending capacity among various crops, which would leave most of them deficient.

I am giving the Senator simply a summary of the statement, as I recall it, from the Secretary and from the President of the Commodity Credit Corporation, who also appeared before the committee.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for his statement. I was merely trying to find out precisely what was meant by the quotations attributed to the Secretary in the news reports. As I interpreted those quotations, they left the impression that this final hundred-odd-million dollars appropriation is the sine qua non of the success of his entire agriculture program. I did not want to be put in the position of voting against an appropriation of $119,000,000 and providing him with an alibi.

Mr. ADAMS. I do not think that is quite an accurate statement. What he did say was that he was very positive that unless this money was provided there might be a very serious decline, if not a crash, in agricultural products.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Does that work both ways; if he gets the money, do we have another assurance that there will not be a crash?

Mr. ADAMS. That was not included in the statement.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, in all fairness to the Secretary of Agriculture, I think the situation which confronts him should be made clear to the Senate.

There is a statutory provision which requires that on a certain date each year there must be an evaluation of the assets of various governmental corporations, including the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Mr. McKELLAR. On the 31st of March.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. And that Congress thereupon must replace or restore the capital of any one of these corporations in case its operations are estimated to have impaired such

The loans in question upon certain commodities are mandatory and were so made by the Congress in the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938. Therefore, the loans have been made in accordance with that act. However, the Secretary feels that unless Congress acts upon the requirement to replace the capital of this corporation estimated to be impaired he is, therefore, no longer justified in continuing to make any loans in the future.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I will yield in a moment. Many farmers have come into this program for this year upon the assumption that Congress would provide for the mandatory loans, and I do not think that the Secretary of Agriculture, in all fairness to him, is to be criticized if he directs the attention of Congress to a situation which confronts him under statutes enacted by Congress.

I now yield to the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Is it not a fact that under the lending program of the Commodity Credit Corporation great benefits have been received by the growers of wheat, growers of cotton, wool growers, and others who are engaged in the production of agricultural commodities?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. With the permission— Mr. O'MAHONEY. Will not the Senator answer the question? That is a fact, is it not?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Yes. I now wish to take the time to read a letter which the Secretary of Agriculture addressed to me, at my request, when I became alarmed over the situation which seemed to have been produced by the House of Representatives failing to provide the necessary appro-

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Before the Senator puts the letter into the Record, may I ask just one other question? Does it not follow, from the situation which has been described-and I am very happy the Senator from Wisconsin has described it—that if the capital of this corporation were not restored, it would be impossible for the Secretary properly to continue to make loans?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. As I understand the Secretary's position, it is that unless Congress restores the capital of the Commodity Credit Corporation as provided by law he must then assume that Congress has, in effect, by negative action, disapproved any further activity in this direction.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think the Senator is exactly correct. Mr. LA FOLLETTE. And I personally believe that the Secretary, instead of being criticized for taking this position, should be praised for the meticulous manner in which he regards his responsibilities under the law.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. As a matter of fact, he came before the committee and made a perfectly frank and accurate statement of the financial condition of this corporation.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wisconsin yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator has stated with great accuracy exactly the position the Secretary of Agriculture took before our committee. The Congress passed this law, the Secretary is faithfully and earnestly and sincerely trying to carry it out. The Congress passed the act which required that this fund be replaced. The Secretary told the committee just what was necessary to be done, and he has carried out the act of Congress-our act-first.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LA FOLLETTE. In a moment. I desire to read a few excerpts from the letter of the Secretary, and then I shall ask to have the letter incorporated in the RECORD as a part of my remarks. The Secretary states in the letter:

My responsibility with regard to the Commodity Credit Corporation and commodity loans is derived from the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, the Commodity Credit Act of 1938, and the fact that the Congress, under the President's Reorganization Order No. 2, transferred the Commodity Credit Corporation to the Department of Agriculture on July 1, 1939. Because this transfer was so recent I, as Secretary of Agriculture, did not have an operativity for the President Secretary of Agriculture, and not have an operativity for the President Secretary of Agriculture, and an adversarial Secretary of Agriculture, and adversarial Secretary of Agriculture, and adversarial Secretary of Agriculture, an portunity to appear before congressional committees before July 1 so as to emphasize the importance of the activities of the Cor-of the Commodity Credit Corporation is vitally necessary to the success of the farm program. At present only $9,000,000 is available for new loans on agricultural commodities. This appropriation able for new loans on agricultural commodities. This appropriation is neither for the purpose of embarking upon any new undertaking nor for financing any transactions other than those already authorized and directed by the Congress. Moreover, these funds would not be expended but would be used for making loans with farm commodities as collateral. In other words, the appropriation is merely to restore the capital of the Corporation in order that it may continue to carry out the program specifically assigned to it by existing legislation.

The Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 makes it mandatory the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 makes it mandatory under certain circumstances for the Corporation to offer loans to producers of corn, wheat, and cotton. In accordance with this requirement, a loan program has already been announced with respect to the 1939 wheat crop. Wheat is now being marketed and, largely as a result of the loan, the price of American wheat is very substantially above world prices.

As a matter of fact, Mr. President, the other day when the Finance Committee was considering the amendments to section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, which provide for action by the President after the Tariff Commission has made an investigation, to prevent commodities coming in over the tariff wall and destroying domestic programs, the committee was informed that for certain types of hard wheat the prices are now within 2 cents of being at the point where wheat of those particular types, will start to come in in large quantities.

Unless the $119,000,000 appropriation is made, the wheat loan probably could not be continued through this season. If the loan on wheat should be discontinued, a precipitate drop in American wheat prices is almost certain to follow.

In the case of corn, arrangements for a loan normally would be made in September, and it is virtually certain that a loan on the 1939 crop will be mandatory. Moreover, if lack of funds should make it impossible to provide a loan on the 1939 corn crop, the effect would have widespread and disastrous results on the whole of agriculture. The extremely low corn prices which would follow such action would in turn bring about sharp reductions in the prices of hogs, beef cattle, poultry, and dairy products, cottonseed, other feed grains, and fats and oils.

So, Mr. President, in my opinion, the Secretary was fully justified in making the statement that unless the appropriation were made there would result not only a serious decline in prices of commodities upon which loans under certain circumstances are mandatorily made by the Corporation, but, because of the interrelation of many of these prices and products, a precipitate decline in the price of those products would affect practically the whole structure of the agricultural situation in the United States.

Under conditions as they are at present, a loan on cotton is not mandatory. But inability to make such a loan, through lack of funds, could easily contribute to a price decline which would, under ordinary circumstances, make the loans mandatory.

Mr. President, without taking further time to read from the letter, I ask unanimous consent that the entire letter be incorporated in the RECORD at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. O'MAHONEY in the chair). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The letter is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, Washington, August 3, 1939.

Hon. Robert M. La Follette, Jr., United States Senate.

United States Senate.

Dear Senator La Follette: In accordance with your request, I am sending you the following information with respect to the item for the restoration of the capital of the Commodity Credit Corporation that was omitted from the third deficiency bill as approved by the House of Representatives.

My responsibility with regard to the Commodity Credit Corporation and commodity loans is derived from the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, the Commodity Credit Act of 1938, and the fact that the Congress, under the President's Reorganization Order No. 2, transferred the Commodity Credit Corporation to the Department of Agriculture on July 1, 1939. Because this transfer was so recent I, as Secretary of Agriculture, did not have an opportunity to appear before congressional committees before July 1, so as to emphasize the importance of the activities of the Corporation to the general farm program.

The appropriation of $119,000,000 requested to restore the capital of the Commodity Credit Corporation is vitally necessary to the success of the farm program. At present, only $9,000,000 is available for new loans on agricultural commodities. This appropriation is neither for the purpose of embarking upon any new undertaking nor for financing any transactions other than those already authorized and directed by the Congress. Moreover, these funds would not be expended but would be used for making loans with farm commodities as collateral. In other words, the appropriation is merely to restore the capital of the Corporation in order that it may continue to carry out the program specifically assigned to it by existing legislation.

priation is merely to restore the capital of the Corporation in order that it may continue to carry out the program specifically assigned to it by existing legislation.

The Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 makes it mandatory under certain circumstances for the Corporation to offer loans to producers of corn, wheat, and cotton. In accordance with this requirement, a loan program has already been announced with respect to the 1939 wheat crop. Wheat is now being marketed and, largely as a result of the loan, the price of American wheat is very substantially above world prices. Unless the $119,000,000 appropriation is made, the wheat loan probably could not be continued through this season. If the loan on wheat should be discontinued, a precipitate drop in American wheat prices is almost certain to follow.

In the case of corn, arrangements for a loan normally would be certain to follow.

In the case of corn, arrangements for a loan normally would be made in September, and it is virtually certain that a loan on the 1939 crop will be mandatory. Moreover, if lack of funds should make it impossible to provide a loan on the 1939 corn crop, the effect would have widespread and disastrous results on the whole of agriculture. The extremely low corn prices which would follow such action would in turn bring about sharp reductions in prices of hogs, beef cattle, poultry and dairy products, cottonseed, other feed grains, and fats and oils. Under conditions as they are at present, a loan on cotton is not mandatory. But inability to make such a loan through lack of funds could easily contribute to a price decline which would, under ordinary circumstances, make the loans mandatory.

During the past 6 years the Commodity Credit Corporation has made loans on these commodities: Cotton, corn, wheat, butter, wool, mohair, tobacco, rosin, turpentine, figs, peanuts, rye, prunes, raisins, pecans, and hops.

raisins, pecans, and hops.

The existing loans, and estimated commitments now outstanding, leave only $9,000,000 available to the Corporation for additional programs, including loans on the 1939 crops of corn, cotton, and several other commodities whose producers will undoubtedly be in serious need of loans this year.

In planting their crops this year, the farmers naturally had reason to believe that at least all the loans which Congress made mandatory under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 would be made available. To fail to provide for these loans would be regarded by the producers, and rightly so, as a breach of faith.

It would appear difficult, if not impossible, for the Secretary of Agriculture to take responsibility for incurring additional commitments on loans, even though such loans are mandatory under the Agricultural Adjustment Act, if the Congress should fail to make Agricultural Adjustment Act, if the Congress should fail to make the appropriations contemplated under the Commodity Credit Corporation Act to make such commitments secure. The Commodity Credit Act of 1938 makes it clear that Congress must replenish the capital stock of Commodity Credit as of March 31 each year if it expects Commodity Credit to remain active. This view is substantiated by the hearings in the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency on February 14 and February 21, at which time the Commodity Credit Corporation was severely criticized for making an emergency arrangement last year with Reconstruction Finance Corporation so that in case of need it could make loans beyond its capital and authorized borrowing power. I do not believe that the Members of Congress expect or desire a Cabinet officer to take a responsibility that properly belongs to the Congress.

Abandonment of the farm-loan programs would remove an im-

Abandonment of the farm-loan programs would remove an important part of the entire farm program, cause a sharp decline in farm prices, seriously impair the credit resources of farmers, and greatly reduce their ability to pay outstanding debts to banks and Government agencies. The impact of such a blow to American agriculture could be expected to have repercussions on the economy of the entire Nation. I do not think it would be an exaggeration to say that inability to continue and make loans on agricultural commodities for the remainder of 1939 would be a national calamity. Sincerely yours,

H. A. WALLACE, Secretary.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I now yield with pleasure to my distinguished friend, the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, the Senator suggested that I have been criticizing the Secretary. It was not in that spirit that I presented my interrogatory at all. I think the Secretary is living scrupulously within the law. and I think the Secretary is a very scrupulous administrator always. I have a very high regard for him. I was simply challenged by the repeated statements I have received from the Secretary that this final, comparatively small appropriation was necessary in order to keep the entire agricultural-relief situation from bogging down, and I was trying to find out how he could keep it from bogging down with $119,000,000 if he could not keep it from bogging down with one and one-half billion dollars which he already has.

Mr. President. I was seeking a little light rather than heat; and, so far as the technical status of the amendment is concerned, I thank the Senator from Wisconsin for fully vindicating it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I thank the Senator from Michigan for making his statement, and if the reference to heat was to anything that I said, Mr. President, I think the Senator is mistaken. All I have tried to do is to speak above the hubbub, the confusion and conversation which emanates from the floor and the galleries of this Chamber. Let the Senator rest easy. Nothing was intended except a desire on the part of the Senator from Wisconsin to be heard.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. ADAMS. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DANAHER. Bearing on the observations of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] and in order that the fact may appear, I should like to read from the report of the committee:

The first appraisal to determine the net worth of the Corpora-The first appraisal to determine the net worth of the Corporation was made upon the basis of prices prevailing on March 31, 1938, which indicated that during the period of operation of the Corporation its capital had been impaired to the extent of $94,-285,404.73. That amount was restored by an appropriation contained in the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1938, approved June 25, 1938. The pending estimate is in consequence of an appraisal upon the basis of prices obtaining 1 year later, March 31, 1939, and represents a further impairment of $100,134,-474 owing to depreciated values, and an amount of $19,465,444 resulting from commodities taken over and disposed of adminisresulting from commodities taken over and disposed of, administrative expenses, and other nonrecoverable outlays. The three amounts named represent a total impairment of $213,885,322 which the Congress has been asked to make good within the space of about 12 months.

Mr. President, while it is perfectly apparent that to an extent of $213,000,000 funds have been paid to farmers as a result of these loans, the fact remains that if we may call them benefits, they have been obtained at the expense of all the taxpayers. I think that should be clearly understood.

I should like to ask the Senator from Colorado if there was anything in this figure of $119,000,000 which represented a subsidy on exports, so far as the Senator knows?
Mr. ADAMS. I think not. I think this amount of encouragement may be offered to the Senator, that the appropriation of $119,000,000-fixing that as a deficit in the capitaldoes not represent the situation today. There has been an increase of approximately $50,000,000 in assets; so that the actual deficit today would be $50,000,000 less than that, though the statute which we passed required the appraisement to be taken on the 31st of March. So the figures they bring to us are of that day, but their actual financial condition today is $50,000,000 better than it was on the 31st of

Mr. DANAHER. May I observe by way of reply, then, that, as of March 31, the Secretary advised the House committee that he had $157,000,000 available for making or underwriting additional loans upon commodities, and if his position is, as the Senator says, $50,000,000 better as of this date than as of March 31, he has $207,000,000 available.

Mr. ADAMS. Of course, they have made some commitments since that time.

Mr. DANAHER. I am taking the Senator's figure of $50,000,000.

Mr. ADAMS. Let us not become confused between unconsumed loaning capacity and capital. I was talking to the Senator about the capital of the Corporation; that the capital on the 31st day of March was impaired by $119,000,000. That is the official figure. Since that time the capital assets, or, rather, the commodities upon which they are loaning, have increased in value, so that if there were an appraisement as of today the deficiency would be $69,000,000, not $119,000,000. But the law which we passed required the restoration of capital to be made as of the appraisement of the 31st of March. The loaning capacity of $900,000,000 in addition to the capital, whether it be much or little, and the available unconsumed capacity varies as loans are made and loans are paid. I understand there have been some loans paid.

Mr. DANAHER. Or as losses are taken. Is that not a proper interpolation?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes; but the amount available for loans on a certain day may increase or decrease without affecting the capital structure.

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield.

Mr. KING. I should like to observe that I have given some little attention to these loans, and my understanding is that the loans which we have made have resulted in great loss to the Treasury, and have not only impaired the capital of the Corporation to the extent of approximately $213,000,000, but losses have been sustained from the loans which have been made under the authorization of $900,000,000.

So it is obvious that the taxpayers of the United States, because of the operations of the Commodity Credit Corporation, to say nothing of other operations of the Department of Agriculture, will be required to pay, not $213,000,000 but perhaps two or three times that amount.

In reply to the statement made by my friend the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Adams], I wish to say that the prices of the farm commodities upon which loans have been made are fluctuating in value. I do not think that there has been an accretion in value of fifty-odd-million dollars, as indicated by my friend, since the appraisal which was made some time

Mr. ADAMS. That is the statement that was made to us on yesterday by the Commodity Credit Corporation officials.

Mr. KING. But, assuming that there has been an advance in the prices of commodities, with the fluctuations and Mr. ADAMS. That was in cotton largely.

Mr. KING. Yes, but we are told now that the price of cotton will fall; that unless a further stimulation is given by loans from the Federal Treasury the cotton losses will increase and, of course, that will involve the Government of the United States perhaps to the amount of millions or tens of millions of dollars.

Mr. ADAMS. Of course, the Senator knows that the responsibility for that situation rests upon the 435 Members in the House and the 96 Members in the Senate. Perhaps there are some exceptions in each body, among them the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I may say that I regret very much that we have embarked upon a policy something like that upon which Brazil embarked. Brazil and other countries began to stimulate prices, and made loans upon rubber and coffee. The result was that she lost money. So the loans which we are making under what I regret to term the improvident policies of the Department of Agriculture will aggregate hundreds of millions of dollars, which will add to the debts of the United States and increase the burden of taxation upon the American people.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. DANAHER. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator spoke of the uncommitted fund of $131,000,000. I should like to explain that position as it is explained by the vice president of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Some time ago the total funds not committed were $131,-000,000, less additional wheat payments-$100,000,000 had already been committed for wheat-plus funds for the corn program of $20,000,000, plus $2,000,000 for delivery of cotton to England under the act of Congress which was passed a few days ago, under which we exchanged cotton for rubber, making a total of $122,000,000 which must be subtracted from the $131,000,000 not committed. So the balance in the hands of the Commodity Credit Corporation and uncommitted is $9,000,000. That is why this sum has to be

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Colorado a question. Within the past week or 10 days the Commodity Credit Corporation has set up within its own organization a revolving fund in order that the Commodity Credit Corporation may cause those who borrow against crops to self-insure by means of the revolving fund. As a result, a certain percentage has been charged on each of the commodities deposited, whether it be corn, wheat, or some other commodity. Particularly has this revolving-fund insurance plan been made applicable to corn. Does the Senator from Colorado know of any authority previously granted by Congress to the Commodity Credit Corporation under which such a step could be taken?

Mr. ADAMS. I do not pretend to be well enough advised as to the Commodity Credit Act to answer the Senator's question. I should not want to say that I do not know in the sense of conveying the impression that such authority does not exist. I simply cannot answer the question.

Mr. DANAHER. Does the Senator know whether or not, in appropriations for the Commodity Credit Corporation, an amount has been allocated for any such purpose, to permit the Corporation to insure?

Mr. ADAMS. There has been no specific allocation for that purpose. The appropriations have been in lump sums to carry out the purposes of the Commodity Credit Act.

Mr. DANAHER. Let me ask the Senator one further question, if it is a fair question. Does the Senator believe that the Commodity Credit Corporation should be given authority to create an insurance fund within its own operations?

Mr. ADAMS. Does the Senator think the result of that insurance fund will be for the benefit of the Government?

Mr. DANAHER. I think very definitely, "No"; on the basis of the fact that we have been making up impairments of capital, or, as I interpret them, losses.

Mr. ADAMS. Who is being insured?

Mr. DANAHER. It seems to me that what we are doing is very definitely using Government funds, through a Government agency, once more to compete with private business. Hitherto, that business has been written by agents all over the United States, in the State of the Senator as well as in the farm States generally. Their business is being cut into in that fashion.

Mr. ADAMS. There is one part of the business with respect to which I do not think private industry would object to competition. I refer to making loans upon property for more than the property is worth, and without any obligation on the part of the borrower to pay back the loan. The Government takes the risk, and the lender has the benefit, if there is any. I do not think any private industry is being cut out. If so, it is a benefit to the private industry to be cut out.

Mr. DANAHER. I know there has been widespread complaint, and for that reason I bring up the matter at this time. I am certain that the Senator answered my question when he stated that to his knowledge no part of the funds is being used to restore losses which occur by reason of any such program. Is that correct?

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator will have to make the observation as a statement rather than as a question.

Mr. DANAHER. I said, so far as the Senator knows.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator may make it as a statement. I do not wish to assume the responsibility.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] is unavoidably absent from the Chamber at this moment. I desire to have the clerk read a letter addressed to him by the Secretary of Agriculture with reference to the question of what amount is available for the purpose of loans, and the lending capacity of the Corporation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the letter will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Hon. Alben W. Barkley,

United States Senate.

Dear Senator Barkley: Various inquiries now being received by the Department of Agriculture for information with respect to the lending capacity of the Commodity Credit Corporation indicate the necessity that an effort be made to clarify this somewhat complex and technical subject. This letter is being addressed to you with the hope that you may be able to use it for the purpose of meeting the need for a readily understandable explanation of the situation. the situation.

The lending power of the Commodity Credit Corporation is not definitely fixed by statute; but the capital of the Corporation, and the amount which it can borrow on the credit of the United and the amount which it can borrow on the credit of the United States, are fixed by law. The statutes pertaining to the Commodity Credit Corporation, however, make no reference to the power or lack of power of the Corporation to borrow on its own credit. Under the provisions of the Commodity Credit Act of 1938, the Corporation's capital is fixed at $100,000,000 and its maximum borrowing power on the credit of the United States is limited to $900,000,000. Consequently, and aside from major questions of policy, the Commodity Credit Corporation lacks definite congressional authorization to make loans, or guarantee loans made by banks to farmers, in a total amount in excess of the Corporation's unimpaired capital and authorized power to borrow on the credit of the United States.

on the credit of the United States.

Last year the Corporation, in carrying out the mandatory loan provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, made or guaranteed loans in excess of its unimpaired capital and authorized borrowing power on the credit of the United States. In order to keep itself in a position in which in case of need the Corporation could meet all its obligations fully and promptly, it made a temporary arrangement with the Reconstruction Finance Corpoa temporary arrangement with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation under which it could, if necessary, obtain such additional funds as might be required to liquidate its obligations—which are callable on demand by the lending banks—by the sale to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation of $150,000,000 of the loans held by Commodity Credit Corporation.

Subsequently, there was severe criticism in various committee hearings and on the floor of the Senate, not only of the Commodity Credit Corporation for making and guaranteeing a total amount of loans that was in excess of its unimpaired capital and nnancially safe for the Commodity Credit Corporation to so extend its lending power by agreeing, in case of need, to purchase up to $150,000,000 of Commodity Credit Corporation loans.

In order, therefore, under the existing circumstances, for the Corporation to remain in a position to meet its obligations promptly and fully, and to conform to what has been interpreted by some Members of Congress as an intent on the part of Congress that the Corporation shall not incur total obligations in excess of its unimpaired capital and authorized borrowing power on the credit of the United States, it would be necessary for the Corporation to discontinue making loans whenever the sum of its total obligations became equal to its unimpaired capital and authorized borrowing power on the credit of the United States.

The present situation with respect to the Commodity Credit

The present situation with respect to the Commodity Credit Corporation's financial position may be summarized as follows: In keeping its books, the Corporation follows the practice of making an allocation of an estimated amount of the loan that will be incurred under each commodity program at the time a loan is authorized. At the present time the records of the Corporation show unallocated funds of $131,000,000. This takes into account various allocations, including an item of $50,000,000 originally estimated for wheat loans. Since this wheat-loan allocation was made, however, it has been estimated that, primarily on account of improved crop prospects and declining prices, an additional made, however, it has been estimated that, primarily on account of improved crop prospects and declining prices, an additional $100,000,000 would be required in order to complete the loan program on wheat. It is also estimated that two other items which have not yet been recorded on the books of the Corporation (namely, the contemplated program for the rescaling of the 1938 corn and the expense to be incurred for the delivery of cotton and acceptance of rubber under the British exchange agreement recently retified by the Separal would require an edditional $22,000,000. acceptance of rubber under the British exchange agreement recently ratified by the Senate) would require an additional $22,000,000 of funds. Consequently, when the current book figure of $131,000,000 of unallocated funds is adjusted for the sum of the three items noted above—that is, $122,000,000—there remains at the present time a balance available to the Corporation of only $9,000,000 with which to make various loans on 1939 crops, including the 1939 crops of cotton and corn on which, under certain circumstances, commodity loans are mandatory under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 of 1938.

It is clear, therefore, that if the commodity loans, which are a It is clear, therefore, that if the commodity loans, which are a basic foundation in the farm program, are to be carried out in 1939, it is necessary either for Congress to restore the impaired capital of the Commodity Credit Corporation or increase its borrowing power, or for the Corporation to proceed, despite the questions that have been mentioned with respect to both financial policy and the intent of at least some Members of Congress, to incur obligations in excess of its unimpaired capital and its authorized borrowing power on the credit of the United States.

As the responsible Cabinet officer under the law for the activities of the Commodity Credit Corporation. I should be extremely reluc-

As the responsible Cabinet officer under the law for the activities of the Commodity Credit Corporation, I should be extremely reluctant, in view of the considerations to which attention has been called, to direct the Corporation to incur obligations in excess of its unimpaired capital and its authorized borrowing power on the credit of the United States. However, in a letter addressed to the Honorable Robert M. La Follette, Jr., on August 3, 1939, a copy of which is enclosed, I undertook to set forth the disastrous effects that an abandonment of the farm-loan programs could be expected to have on both American agriculture and the economy of the to have on both American agriculture and the economy of the entire Nation.

Sincerely yours,

HENRY A. WALLACE, Secretary.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, if no other Senator desires to speak, I wish to suggest the absence of a quorum, so that we may have a yea-and-nay vote on the amendment.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, there has not been any question raised about it; no Senator has objected to the amendment.

Mr. McKELLAR. I understand that, but I think we had better have a yea-and-nay vote, and I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment reported by the committee, which will be stated. The CHIEF CLERK. On page 47, after line 1, under the heading "Treasury Department", it is proposed to insert:

Restoration, capital impairment, Commodity Credit Corporation: To enable the Secretary of the Treasury, on behalf of the United States, to restore the amount of the capital impairment of the Commodity Credit Corporation as of March 31, 1939, by contribution to the Corporation as provided by the Act approved March 8, 1938 (Public, No. 442, 75th Cong.), fiscal year 1940, $119,599,918.05.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. McKELLAR. I now make the point of order that there is not a quorum present.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I ask that the judgments and audited claims may be treated as one amendment, and passed upon en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado makes a request for unanimous consent that the amendments covering judgment claims be agreed to en bloc. Without objection, it is so ordered, and without objection, the amendments are agreed to en bloc.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, have all the committee amendments been agreed to?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The committee amendments have all been acted on.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment and ask for its adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the proper place in the bill it is proposed to insert the following:

Notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, the rates of pay for persons engaged upon any projects financed in whole or in part by moneys of the United States of America shall not be less part by moneys of the United States of America shall not be less than the prevailing rates of pay for work of a similar nature in the same locality as determined by the Government agency having charge of or which has advanced moneys for such project.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado. Mr. McCARRAN. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. ADAMS. I did not ask the Senator to yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. I move the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran]. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] is recognized.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President-

Mr. McCARRAN. I do not yield.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator cannot have an amendment submitted to the Senate and keep the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. When the question was presented, the Senator from Colorado addressed the Chair, and he now has the floor.

Mr. McCARRAN. I rise to a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. McCARRAN. I offered the amendment, and I certainly have the right to address the Senate on my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator offered the amendment, then asked that the question be stated. The Chair stated the question. When the Senator took that step, he surrendered the floor, and the Senator from Colorado immediately claimed the floor, and was recognized by the Chair.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, did the Senator from Nevada desire to address the Senate? If so, I will ask recognition after he concludes.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, if the Senator from Colorado has a rule to invoke, I ask him to invoke it now, otherwise I am going to ask that the Senate immediately proceed to the consideration of this amendment. I ask for the yeas and nays, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams Downey McKellar Shipstead George Gerry McNary Andrews Smith Austin Maloney Stewart Bailey Bankhead Gibson Mead Taft. Miller Minton Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah Gurney Barkley Hale Murray Tobey Townsend Borah Harrison Bridges Hatch Neely Truman Tydings Vandenberg Van Nuys Brown Bulow Hayden Herring Nye O'Mahoney Overton Pepper Pittman Johnson, Calif. Burke Johnson, Colo. Byrnes King La Follette Lee Capper Wagner Chavez Clark, Idaho Radcliffe Reed Walsh Wheeler Russell Schwartz Clark, Mo. Lodge Lucas White Connally Danaher Lundeen Schwellenbach Davis McCarran Sheppard

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Truman in the chair). Seventy-three Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran].

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I have held the attention of the Senate on many occasions on this particular subject. I shall ask for the attention of the Senate for but a few minutes in the concluding hours of this the first session of the Seventy-sixth Congress. I hope I may have the attention of the Senate to a proposal the adoption of which, to my mind, is vital to the lowly and the humble in the United States today. That I am right in my idea has been emphasized by events which have happened during the past few months.

Mr. President, the toilers of this country builded a structure, and they built it out of their own experience. That structure I choose to call, and American life has chosen to call it, the wage structure of this country. The wage structure of America has been builded out of experience in which the lives of the workers of this country have been expended for more than half a century.

During the first debate on this subject a very able Senator interrupted me to say, "Would you insist on the plumbers of this country receiving $12 a day for their wage?" The answer to that was, "Yes; because the annual average wage for the average journeyman plumber in this country, as disclosed by the records of the Department of Labor, is from twelve to fifteen hundred dollars a year." So when we battle for an hourly wage, when we battle for a standard wage, when we battle for a wage in keeping with that which has been worked out by the workers of this country, we are battling for something which is, perhaps, far less than any one of us in the Senate of the United States would consider worth while working for. Yet the journeyman plumber of today not only supports himself upon an annual average wage of between twelve and fifteen hundred dollars, but he supports the boys and girls who are dependent upon him, his own children, his own dependents.

Mr. President, my amendment proposes to sustain that which has been worked out by the toilers of America through half a century of experience, and prevent tearing down the wage structure of this country, but to maintain it so that American life—and when I say American life, I mean the life of the average worker of this country—shall be sustained in keeping with that struggle which has been made by the toilers of America during all of this period.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I should like to ask the Senator whether it is not his view that if the Government, upon projects identical with those which may be constructed by private industry, pays a wage for similar work which is one-half, or even less than one-half, of the prevailing rate of wage, it will not in time drag down the wages set by years of struggle by the workers in private industry?

Mr. McCARRAN. I am very grateful to the Senator for the question. I propose to answer it somewhat at length, because I had the thought in mind and I desire to follow it up.

Mr. WAGNER. Since the Senator has the thought in mind, let me give him a specific case, so that we will not be talking merely about surmises.

It may very well be that one school project is being built by a municipality under the regular contract system, which requires the payment to bricklayers or carpenters of the prevailing rate of wage, and that a few blocks away another schoolhouse is being constructed under Works Progress, and yet, in spite of the fact that it is built so close to the other project, and that both projects, in a sense, are built for the municipality, in one case the wages may be one-half or even less than one-half the wages being paid on the other school project. I am sure the Senator agrees with me that such a situation cannot be allowed to exist without eventually affecting the wages which private industry pays, and dragging down the standards fixed after years of struggle by the workers in the particular industry.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I wish to express my sincere gratitude to the able senior Senator from New York not only for propounding the question and thus shedding light on the thought, but for his suggestions. His mind and mine have run along this channel together for many years. We worked together when we first started on this great movement to sustain the prevailing wage in America. I know we shall work together in the effort to have it sustained on projects constructed with Government aid.

Mr. President, let me go a little further than the thought which has been suggested by the able senior Senator from New York. The Government of the United States is today and will be for some time to come, the greatest employer of labor in the world. I am not taking in too much territory when I say that it is the greatest employer of labor in the world. If the greatest employer of labor on all the earth is about to step in and even inferentially to tear down the wage structure which has been builded out of blood and brawn and determination for half a century, then what will become of private industry? Of course private industry, the minor factor, as compared with labor, the major factor, will immediately say, "Well, if the Government will not pay this wage why shall we pay it? If the Government will not pay a dollar an hour to plumbers in America why should private industry pay it?" Notwithstanding the fact that the jour-neyman plumbers in America may be only earning the meager sum of $1,500 per year.

Mr. President, I appeal to the Senate today to say that none of the excuses which have heretofore been offered shall prevail against the amendment because now we are confronted with a question which requires two-thirds of the Senate to set aside a rule.

Mr. President, in the name of America, in the name of the toilers of the country, in the name of the greatest glory of those who work, let two-thirds of the Senate set aside the rule, so that the amendment may be adopted by the Senate of the United States, even though at this time I realize that there is scarcely more than a quorum of the Senate present. Many Senators, I am sorry to say, for one reason or another, have gone. The session has been long. But, be that as it may, is it not time for those who are here to respond to this call of labor, that America may announce to the world that labor in this country, which has struggled for over half a century to establish a wage in keeping with the American standard of living, shall not be voted down by the Senate of the United States even under a rule?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the Senator from Nevada has made a motion. He also accompanied his motion originally with a motion to suspend the rule. I ask whether or not that motion to suspend the rule is the matter before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion before the Senate is the motion on the amendment made by the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the Senator by filing his notice of intention to suspend the rule has given notice to the Senate that he knows that his amendment is not proper unless the rule is suspended.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, the only matter pending before the Senate is my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair so rules.

Mr. ADAMS. That is what the Chair ruled. Now, Mr. President, I am on the floor today as the servant of a great committee, of which the Senator from Nevada is an eminent member. That committee has given orders to those who appear upon the floor in charge of the bill as to what they shall do. The rule of the Appropriations Committee is as follows:

Any member or ex-officio member of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate who has in charge an appropriation bill is hereby authorized and directed to make points of order against any amendment offered in violation of the Senate rules on the floor of the Senate to such appropriation bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. ADAMS. No, Mr. President; I cannot yield at this time.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, may we have better order? The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has been trying diligently to obtain order, but there cannot be order in the Senate so long as Senators are to have conferences all over the floor and the occupants of the galleries engage in conversation.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, there is no one in the Senate more skillful in parliamentary procedure than is the Senator from Nevada. There is no one better informed as to his rights. No one knows better than he the embarrassment which he causes the chairman of the subcommittee when he presents an amendment which he knows conflicts with the rule and compels the chairman of the subcommittee to take the floor.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. ADAMS. No; I wish to finish the statement if I may. It is a very brief statement.

Mr. President, I have voted as frequently and as earnestly and as consistently for prevailing-wage provisions as has the Senator from Nevada. I think I voted with him when he made his first motion, and I have since continued to do so. I voted with him when the relief bill was before the Senate a few days ago.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I wish to agree in the statement just made by the Senator from Colorado, if I may do so in his time.

Mr. ADAMS. And I propose to vote with the Senator to suspend the rule. If the rule is suspended, I propose to vote for his amendment. But I am here under orders from him and from 22 other members of the Appropriations Committee. I have the option to surrender my position as the chairman of the subcommittee, to decline to present the bill on the floor as the representative of the committee, or to follow the orders of the committee.

Mr. President, the Senator from Nevada recognizes the propriety and the necessity of suspending the rule by having filed his notice.

Mr. President, there was one way in which the Senator from Nevada could have met the situation. He could have come before the Appropriations Committee and asked that committee to change its rule so as to exempt the chairman of the subcommittee from making his point of order. That is a thing which has been done with some frequency.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. Is it not true that yesterday I filed this very motion and notice of a motion to suspend the rule with the subcommittee and asked that I might be permitted to present the matter to the Senate?

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator was present in the subcommittee and had ample opportunity. The Senator was present this morning in the full committee. The Senator knows that never at any time has he received anything but the fullest hearing and been shown the utmost courtesy on the part of the members of the committee.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, the able Senator does not answer my question. Is it not true that yesterday I presented myself before the subcommittee and presented my amendments and asked that I might be permitted to present them to the Senate?

Mr. ADAMS. Of course, the Senator has that privilege. The Senator did not ask that the Senate Committee on Appropriations should instruct its chairman not to make the point of order.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Is it not a fact that there is a rule of long standing in the Appropriations Committee of the Senate which requires either the chairman of the full committee or the chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the bill, whenever an amendment may be presented which is subject to a point of order, to make the point of order?

Mr. ADAMS. There is such a rule.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. The only option left to the chairman of the full committee or the chairman of the subcommittee, as the case may be, is either to make the point of order or to resign his position as chairman of the committee.

Mr. ADAMS. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Let me ask one further question. As I understand—and the Senator from Colorado can correct me if I am mistaken—no matter what his views may be upon any amendment to the bill reported from his subcommittee, he has no option except to make the point of order, if an amendment is subject to a point of order, or to resign his position as chairman of the subcommittee.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator is absolutely correct.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Or to violate the plain rule of the committee.

Mr. ADAMS. Or to be unfaithful to a great committee of the Senate which has honored him by that chairmanship.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. It has been the custom on occasion for a member of the committee, or for any other Senator, or for the chairman of the subcommittee himself, to request the committee not to require him to make the point of order personally. As I understand the practice of the committee, of which I am not a member, in the absence of such permission by the committee the chairman of the subcommittee or the Senator in charge of the bill is bound by the rule of the committee. Is that correct?

Mr. ADAMS. That is correct, and he is bound by every obligation of good faith to his committee.

Mr. McCARRAN and Mr. PEPPER addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Colorado yield, and if so to whom?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I wish to address an inquiry through the Senator from Colorado, who has the floor, to the able Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I shall be glad to answer the question if the Senator from Colorado will yield and I can answer it.

Mr. McCARRAN. If a member of the Appropriations Committee to whom the rule applies should appear before the committee and submit in writing his proposed amendment and ask that he be permitted to offer the amendment and that the rule be waived in that respect, would the Senator say that the rule had been complied with, so that the able chairman of the subcommittee need not invoke the rule?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, although I do not profess to be an authority on the subject, I should consider that to be a case in which the Senator appearing before the committee had discharged his full obligation by asking leave to offer the amendment. However, unless the committee itself had absolved the chairman of the subcommittee from the rule he certainly would not be absolved from it.

Mr. McCARRAN. I should like to ask one further question.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I shall be glad to answer it if the Senator from Colorado will yield.

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. McCARRAN. Is it not true that the rule is that any matter of legislation attached or attempted to be attached to an appropriation bill must be objected to, and that the chairman must first declare it to be a matter of legislation? I contend that this is not a matter of legislation.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, that is a question to be passed upon first by the Chair, and ultimately by the Senate. I should say that in any situation in which the chairman of the committee or of the subcommittee bound by such a rule felt that an amendment proposed legislation, he would be in honor bound to make the point of order, unless he desired to resign his chairmanship.

Mr. McCARRAN. Through the able Senator from Colorado I should like to ask another question of the able Senator from Missouri, who is one of the outstanding parliamentarians of this body and of the Congress of the United States.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I thank the Senator for his kind remarks.

Mr. McCARRAN. Having presented my amendment to the Committee on Appropriations, was it not then for the Committee on Appropriations to instruct either one way or the other?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I can speak only for myself in that connection in response to such a question. If I were the chairman of a subcommittee bound by such a rule as the Appropriations Committee undoubtedly has, and a member of the committee were to propose an amendment and give notice of a motion to suspend the rule, unless the committee itself relieved me of my responsibility to make the point of order, I should feel bound to make it. I can speak only for myself. There is no parliamentary rule about such matters. They are matters of judgment. I can tell the Senator only what I myself would do. No matter what my own attitude toward such an amendment might be, unless I were relieved by specific authority of the committee, if I were chairman of the subcommittee I should feel bound to make the point of order.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, would it be proper for me to make a parliamentary inquiry as to whether or not the amendment submitted is legislation?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TRUMAN in the chair). The Chair will rule that it is.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. PEPPER. Would it be possible for the Senator from Colorado to ask unanimous consent of the Senate that the chairman of the subcommittee, the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Adams], be excused from making the point of order on the amendment? If so, will the Senator yield for the submission of that request?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the opinion of the Chair that is a matter entirely within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, am I to understand that the committee is not the creature of the Senate, and that the Senate does not have superior authority? The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate may set aside the rules of the committee if it so chooses.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Colorado be excused by the Senate from making the point of order on the amendment.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, in view of the statement from the Chair that the pending amendment is legislation, notwithstanding my holding views which are in favor of the amendment, and notwithstanding my previous votes for it and my intention to vote for the suspension of the rule, I am compelled, under the direction of the committee which I represent, to make the point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed without amendment the following bills and joint resolution:

S. 628. An act to allow the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to extend the period of amortization of home loans from 15 to 25 years;

S. 1617. An act for the relief of John Nicholas Chicouras; and

S. J. Res. 160. Joint resolution to provide for the maintenance for public use of certain highways in the Shenandoah National Park.

The message returned to the Senate, in compliance with its request, the bill (H. R. 5982) for the protection against unlawful use of the badge, medal, emblem, or other insignia of veterans' organizations incorporated by act of Congress, and providing penalties for the violation thereof.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled bill (S. 2) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain land to the State of Nevada to be used for the purposes of a public park and recreational site and other public purposes, and it was signed by the President pro tempore.

THIRD DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7462) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I now move to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI for the purpose of proposing an amendment to House bill 7462, known as the third deficiency appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1939.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Nevada to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI.

Mr. McCARRAN and other Senators asked for the yeas and navs.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia-Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, may I have a ruling as to whether the yeas and nays are ordered?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The year and nays are ordered.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I hope Members of the Senate will listen to me for about 3 minutes, in order that I may give them my views as to what this amendment will

This amendment does not repeal any provision of existing law. It is to be applied in conjunction with the provisions of section 15 of the Relief Act and in my opinion will wreck the entire W. P. A. program and create a preferred class of workers. There has been more confusion about the question of the prevailing wage and the monthly wage than any other matter that I know of that has been before the Congress. There are over 4,000 different schedules of wages that have been paid heretofore under the prevailing-wage provision. There have been three different scales of monthly compensation that are paid in the three areas. The Nation has heretofore been divided into three areas. In the act which passed this year, and which is in effect at the present time, there will be found this language:

The Commissioner shall require that the hours of work for all persons engaged upon work projects financed in whole or in part funds appropriated by section 1 shall (1) be 130 hours per

If we adopt this amendment it will require the payment of the prevailing wage for each hour of the 130 hours in the month. Skilled workers under the old law, did not, in many cases, work more than 40 or 50 hours. I had not seen this amendment until a few minutes ago and I have not had an opportunity to prepare all the figures, but, taking as an illustration a brick mason in New York City, under the old law he was making $1.88 an hour, and he worked 46 hours a month for a monthly wage of $86.48. If this amendment should be adopted, which, in connection with the present law, will require the payment of the prevailing wage for 130 hours a month, the wages of the brick mason in New York City, working on Work Projects Administration projects, will be $244.40 a month.

If Senators want to vote to cut the W. P. A. rolls down to about one-fourth of what they are at the present time, they can adopt this amendment, because it will require the Administrator to give every person on the roll 130 hours a month and require him to pay each worker the prevailing wage. This will increase tremendously the pay of all skilled workers and result in reducing the total number of persons we can help.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield. Mr. BARKLEY. In what respect will that situation differ from the condition that prevailed at June 30, under the prevailing-wage provision of the Relief Act?

Mr. RUSSELL. Perhaps I did not go fully enough into that. Under conditions that obtained prior to July 1, the Commissioner fixed a sufficient number of hours so that each of the skilled craft earned the monthly security wage. In other words, the bricklayer in New York City was only allowed to work 46 hours a month. If this amendment be adopted, he will be required to work 130 hours a month, and he will be paid $1.88 an hour for each of those hours worked.

Mr. BARKLEY. The question I ask is pertinent to me in this respect: When the amendment was offered on the bill of which I had charge a few days ago, I opposed the adoption of the amendment on that bill, but rather encouraged the Senator from Nevada and others who were interested in that proposal to believe that it would be possible to offer it on this bill. I have been under the impression that what the amendment sought to do was to restore the wage situation which existed on W. P. A. projects prior to July 1.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator from Kentucky had better investigate the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada, because it does not undertake to do so. The amendment which is now pending is wholly different from the amendment which the Senator from Nevada offered to the so-called spend-and-lend bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. I was going to ask the Senator to explain, briefly, in what respect the amendment now pending differs from the one offered the other day. Because of that amendment, I feel myself personally obligated to vote to suspend the rule, for I stated on the floor that I was favorable to the original prevailing-wage provision of the Relief Act, and I had voted for it when the Relief Act was under consideration. Now, if the amendment has been changed from what I thought it was, I should like to know in what respect it has been changed.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator from Nevada, of course, can answer that question better than can the Senator from Georgia. But this amendment is not the same amendment which the Senator from Nevada offered to the spend-andlend bill. The amendment offered to the spend-and-lend bill gave the Administrator of the W. P. A. the discretion to fix the number of hours which any person might work within a month, but did require him to pay the prevailing wage for each hour of employment. This amendment-

Mr. BARKLEY. Does this amendment require him to fix 130 hours?

Mr. RUSSELL. No: but the present law does. This amendment does not undertake to strike out that provision from the present law.

Mr. BARKLEY. So that this amendment, in conjunction with the relief act itself-

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator has used the identical language I used, namely, that this amendment, in conjunction with existing law, will compel the Administrator to require members of skilled crafts to work 130 hours per month and to pay them the prevailing wage for each hour of employment, whereas now very few of the members of the skilled craft work over 80 hours a month, and many of them work as few as 40 a month.

The amendment will have the effect, I may say, under the provisions of the law which requires the relief appropriation to be apportioned over a 12-month period, to cut the number of people on the W. P. A. to fewer than one-third of the number on the roll at the present time.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator will permit a word there, I have been laboring under the impression that what was desired by the Senator from Nevada was to restore the situation precisely as it existed prior to July 1. I thought that was satisfactory to everybody; that is what I thought I was voting for on the relief bill, and that is what I thought we had before us the other day when the bill of which I was the author was before the Senate. If there has been a change in the proposal I should like to know what effect it will have.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES. It is a confusing and very technical ques-There was nothing in the bill reported by the House, and which became a law, specifically referring to the prevailing hourly rate, but the bill as reported by the House which became a law provided that every person should be required to work at least 130 hours a month.

Mr. BARKLEY. That has never before been in the law. Mr. BYRNES. It has never before been in the law. The law provides, too, that the Administrator shall fix the monthly earning schedule, which is what we call the security wage. When the monthly earning schedule is fixed for the various regions-$70 or $72.50, for instance, in the city of Washington for skilled workers-and then they are required to work 130 hours, automatically the prevailing hourly wage is | reduced.

The Senator from Georgia is correct in saying that so long as the law requiring a man to work 130 hours remains on the statute books it does affect, as the Senator will see, the amount of money that can be paid for the hourly wage. There is not any question about it. We may as well understand that whatever confusion there may be in the minds of some, the controversy arises out of the provision that a man must work 130 hours; and in the case given, instead of receiving $72.50 he would receive more than that amount. Up to July 1 a plumber in the city of Washington worked 42 hours, earned $72.50, and then knocked off for the month. Now he has got to work 130 hours. That is where the difficulty comes in.

Mr. BARKLEY. May I ask the Senator from Georgia or the Senator from South Carolina or both to advise the Senate how many skilled workers affected by this amendment there are in the country out of the total, say, of 3,000,000 men working on W. P. A.?

Mr. RUSSELL. It not only affects the skilled workers but it affects every worker; it affects the unskilled worker as well. Take, for an example, those employed in the sewing rooms in this country. Under the system which obtained prior to July 1, in the city of Minneapolis, by way of illustration, the women employed in the sewing room, worked 100 hours per month for $55 a month. Under this amendment they would be required to work 130 hours per month, and their compensation would be increased to, in the neighborhood of, $70 a month. If the W. P. A. has to pay $70 from a certain amount of money for a month's work, whereas under the condition that obtained before it paid only $55, it stands absolutely as an incontrovertible fact that it will be necessary to reduce the total number of those on W. P. A.

Mr. BARKLEY. As I understand the Senator, under the law as it now is, all those on relief work are required to work 130 hours in order to obtain a certain wage?

Mr. RUSSELL. Yes; since the 1st of July. Mr. BARKLEY. That is what I mean, under the law as it is now.

Mr. RUSSELL. That is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. So, unless we change that provision, the W. P. A. will be compelled to give them 130 hours work per month, but the workers will do that 130 hours work at the wage provided under the amendment offered now, not, of course, under the security wage.

That difference will be, then, that heretofore the W. P. A. has had discretion to decide how many hours any group might work at the prevailing wage, but under the law as it will exist under this amendment, if adopted, they will still be required to give them 130 hours' work per month, and they will have to pay them at the rate carried by the

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator from Kentucky has stated the case substantially correctly. However, as I have said, the Work Projects Administration has created three different areas. Within each of those areas they pay the same compensation for a month's work. It might be that in one city of 50,000 people, within region No. 1, a skilled worker would receive $70 per month and might be required to work 70 hours a month, while in another city in the same county another skilled worker would draw the same monthly wage, but if the prevailing hourly wage was $1.25 he would work 25 percent fewer hours than the one in the other city.

The wage scale of the Work Projects Administration is a tremendously confusing thing. The only thing that has been standard about it has been the monthly security wage which has been fixed in the 3 areas depicted on the chart which the Senator from Nevada had placed upon the desks of Senators when this question was before the Senate some weeks ago. But there are over 4,000 different prevailingwage scales for different types of work in the different cities and counties of the United States. However, there are only 3 different areas, and they are divided into 5 classifications of monthly compensation, depending upon the size of the city within the county where the wage scale is fixed.

Many Senators do not appear to be clear in their minds as to all the difficulties we have had on the works progress projects. What have been commonly called strikes have grown out of the fact that the Government changed the terms of the conditions of employment. Under the old system, these persons were employed on an hourly basis. They were paid an hourly wage. The skilled crafts in most cases did not work over 60 hours a month. The unskilled workers in most cases worked as much as 100 hours a month, and in many cases as much as 144 hours a month, particularly in the Southern States, where the hourly wage scale and the monthly wage scale were the lowest.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. RUSSELL. As soon as I complete this statement.

On the 1st of July the Government changed from a basis of hourly compensation to a basis of monthly compensation, and required every person employed on Works Progress projects to work 30 hours a week, or a total of 130 hours a month. The strikes grew out of the fact that the hours of labor for the skilled crafts were lengthened from 40 or 50 hours a month to 130 hours a month without increasing the monthly compensation. The same monthly compensation was paid.

Mr. PEPPER and Mr. BYRNES addressed the Chair. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Georgia yield, and, if so, to whom?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield first to the Senator from Florida. Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, in view of the very clear explanation which the Senator from Georgia has given. would his objections be met if this amendment were amended by the addition of words which would eliminate the requirement that the Administrator give all the W.P.A. workers 130 hours' work a month? In other words, his objection would be met if that requirement in section 15. as it now exists, were deleted; would it not?

Mr. RUSSELL. The objection I have outlined up to this time would be eliminated; but I certainly should want to see the amendment in writing before accepting it merely on a brief explanation of that kind. I should want to know what effect it is going to have on other phases of existing law.

Mr. PEPPER. The question apparently has to be decided now, because it is before the body; but is not the Senator aware of the fact that section 15 is not affected at all by this amendment, other than that its general effect might be in antithesis to the provisions of section 15?

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia kindly yield that I may discuss the matter in keeping with the question propounded?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. We now have before the Senate one question; namely, the suspension of the rule. If the rule is suspended, then I may offer my amendment as a substitute for section 15, or the body may amend my proposal as it may see fit; but until we suspend the rule we can do nothing. If we suspend the rule, then I am willing to try to conform to many of the suggestions.

All that I have in mind is that the prevailing rate of wage per hour in America shall be sustained. I am entirely content that the administration may fix a ceiling which it will call the security wage per month. That is all right. No one is objecting to that so far as I am concerned. It is the prevailing wage per hour that has been established by labor that I am trying to sustain. If the rule is suspended, then I may offer my amendment as a substitute for section 15; and, if I do. I take it that with such corrections as the able Senator from Georgia and other Senators may suggest, we may get by with the perplexing question.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield in order to enable me to propound a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield. As I understand, though, I do not have to yield for that purpose. I have always held, from the parliamentary standpoint, that any Member of the Senate has a right to interrupt any other Member of the Senate to propound a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. BARKLEY. The parliamentary inquiry is this:

The Senator from Nevada and other Senators have offered amendments which are subject to a point of order, in order to avoid which notice of a motion to suspend the rules has been given; and the notice of suspension and the motion to suspend set out the amendment which is sought to be considered. If the rule is suspended on the basis of the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada, will he then be permitted under the rules so to perfect his amendment by modification or amendment as to make it possible for the Senate to pass on the modified amendment, or will the Senate have to vote on the specific amendment offered without change?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is the opinion of the Chair that if the Senate sets aside the rule so as to permit an amendment of this kind to be offered to an appropriation bill, and the amendment is therefore placed before the Senate, the amendment will be subject to amendment, provided the amendment to the amendment is germane. If the question is raised that it is not germane, under the rules that question must be submitted to the Senate without debate.

Mr. BARKLEY. I thank the Chair. In other words, when the Senate suspends its rules in order to make an amendment which otherwise would be subject to a point of order, the consideration of that amendment is subject to the same rules that would apply if the amendment were in order in the first instance?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Except as to the question of being germane. If the objection is raised that an amendment to the amendment is not germane, that question must be submitted to the Senate immediately, and decided by the Senate without debate.

Mr. BARKLEY. I thank the Chair. Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I am somewhat disturbed by the statement of the Senator from Nevada that he might offer this amendment as a substitute for section 15. It so happens that some of us here have been very much concerned for 5 years to stand by and see existing in this country a condition under which a wage scale has been fixed in 11 States that was approximately one-half of that which was paid in a number of other States. For 5 years here I have made efforts, on practically every appropriation measure that has been presented to the Senate carrying relief funds, to do something to eliminate the unfair, the unjust, the indefensible discrimination against those employed upon works-progress projects in the Southern States in the matter of their monthly compensation.

Since the adoption of the present provision in the Work Relief Act of 1940 I have seen Senators rise on this floor and have heard them complain, and complain, with some justice, that the compensation of works-progress employees in their States would be reduced on the 1st day of September. How do you suppose those of us feel from the 11 States where our people have been paid in many cases a wage scale of only one-half that which your people have received throughout all of this 5-year period?

When the Works Progress Administration was initiated. the monthly wage scale in some counties of the Southern States was $19 a month to the head of a family, whereby he was supposed to support and feed his family for a period of 30 days. Time after time here I have offered amendments to seek to remedy that condition. Until the present law went into effect, which wiped out any differential other than that based on differences in the cost of living, I never was able to get a single one of my colleagues from any of the States, other than the ones where this low-wage scale prevailed, to stand on the floor of the Senate and say that it was un-American to pay $60.50 to a man rolling a wheelbarrow in New York City for a month's work, and to pay $19 a month to a man doing similar work in a country town in

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I agree with the Senator that that differential cannot be justified. It should not exist. I desire to ask the Senator, however, whether so low a wage as that would be the prevailing rate of wage in that com-

Mr. RUSSELL. I have undertaken to show that the prevailing rate of wage has nothing to do with the monthly compensation.

Mr. WAGNER. I am now speaking of the wages to which the Senator refers as being paid in the Southern States. which he says are so low, and I agree that they are low. They are paid on an hourly basis, too; are they not?

Mr. RUSSELL. They are. Mr. WAGNER. Are those hourly wages below the prevailing rate of wage in those communities?

Mr. RUSSELL. The hourly rate is not. For example, in the city of Atlanta a person employed on a Works Proggress project who is a bricklayer, would receive $1.25 an hour, and he would be allowed 57 hours a month. But when it came to his monthly wage, he was entitled to draw only $73 a month, as compared with $94 for the same type of work in the city of New York.

Mr. WAGNER. If both of them are being paid the prevailing rate of wage, how could that differential exist? I am sure that much of a differential does not exist in the prevailing wages generally between North and South.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I have undertaken to explain that the prevailing rate of pay applies only to the hourly wage.

Mr. WAGNER. Exactly, and I am referring to that. Mr. RUSSELL. The monthly wage, of which I complain, is fixed arbitrarily by the Work Projects Administration. It has no relation to the hourly wage, except insofar as it regulates the number of hours a man works for his monthly

Mr. WAGNER. I do not see what is inconsistent in providing that the workers upon these projects shall be paid the prevailing rate of wage, and also providing by legislation against such rate discrimination. I am sure there should be sufficient ingenuity in this body to cure that, and it can be done by the amendment the Senator from Nevada has

Mr. RUSSELL. It cannot be done if the Senator from Nevada offers it as a substitute for section 15.

Mr. WAGNER. If we suspend the rule, which I hope we will, we can argue that point and certainly agree upon something.

Mr. RUSSELL. I wish to have some assurance in this matter before the rule is suspended. We are in a somewhat better position when it requires a two-thirds vote than when it requires a majority.

Mr. WAGNER. The only assurance I can give the Senator is my own vote, and it certainly will be in support of the contention of the Senator from Georgia that that kind of a differential is not justified and should not exist.

Mr. RUSSELL. I thank the Senator from New York, and I hope he will vote that way if that question is raised, and I am sure he will.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, so far as I am concerned-and I am sure many other Senators agree with me-I do not favor this un-American unfairness toward one section of the country in favor of another. We do not want to be unfair to any section of the country; and if we are short of money, as one Senator has stated, as I understood him, if we have not appropriated a sufficient sum we have ample time and can remain here and increase the appropriation, so that American workmen will have a just return for the work they perform.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, in order that I may relieve the mind of the able Senator from Georgia as to one expression I made just a little while ago, I have conferred with the Senate Parliamentarian, and I am advised that I would not be permitted, under the rule, to offer this amendment as a substitute for section 15. So, with that in mind, I wish to set the Senator right, lest perchance I might be causing him some apprehension.

Mr. RUSSELL. In that case, if the Senator's amendment be adopted, it would require 130 hours of work each month at the prevailing hourly rate of pay. This would so increase the monthly pay that with the limited funds available it would work to reduce by approximately two-thirds the number who can be taken care of on the W. P. A. rolls. It will make a preferred class of the few fortunate enough to be kept on the roll.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will not the Senator state the number of skilled workers affected by the law as it now stands? The number is 225,000 out of two and a half million on the W. P. A. rolls.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I should like to propound a parliamentary inquiry, because it may have some effect on the vote.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it. Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator cannot offer his proposal as a substitute for section 15 of the present Relief Act, but would the Senator, or any Senator, be permitted to offer as an amendment to the amendment the Senator has now proposed, on which we are basing the motion to suspend the rules, an amendment modifying or changing the requirement of the present law that W. P. A. workers must be given 130 hours of work a month?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senate decided that it was germane, it would be in order.

The question is on the motion of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI, so that he may offer his amendment. The yeas and nays have been ordered and the roll will be called.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). I transfer my general pair with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary] to the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. Huches] and vote "nay." I am not advised how the Senator from Delaware would vote if present.

Mr. STEWART (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Oregon [Mr. Holman]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Bilbo] and vote "nay."

Mr. TOBEY (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Guffey]. If he were present, I understand he would vote "yea." If I were permitted to vote, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], who, if present, I am informed would vote "nay." I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier], who, if present, I am informed would vote "yea." So I am free to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], who I understand if present would vote "nay." I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Barbour], who would vote "yea" if present, and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. CONNALLY. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.
Mr. CONNALLY. Regarding the pair just announced by the Senator from Pennsylvania, does it not require two affirmative pairs?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It does.

Mr. CONNALLY. Then I make the point that the Senator from Pennsylvania cannot vote.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, there is no recognition of pairs in the rules of the Senate, and it seems to me that a point of order does not lie. It is purely an arrangement between individual Senators.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, if the point of order urged by the Senator from Texas against the pair of the Senator from Pennsylvania is to prevail and be sustained, then I make the same point of order against the vote of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. Stewart]. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It has always been held by the Chair in the case of a treaty, where a two-thirds vote is required, that when a Senator desires to cast his vote by an exchange of his pair, he must exchange it with two on the other side.

Mr. LUCAS. My colleague [Mr. SLATTERY] is unavoidably detained on important business. I am advised that the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] is also detained unavoidably on important business. If these Senators were present, they would both vote "yea." It is my understanding that the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], who is also absent from the Senate, if present would vote "nay." The Senator from New Jersey and the Senator from Illinois are paired with the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, I announce the pair of the senior Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone] and the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. Gillette] with the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. Hill]. If at liberty to vote, the Senator from Washington and the Senator from Iowa would vote "yea," and the Senator from Alabama would vote

"nay."

I also announce that the Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Gillette], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Green], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Guffey], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Holt], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Slattery], and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers] are detained on important public business. I am advised that if present and voting, these Senators would vote "yea."

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Reynolds] is unavoidably detained. If present and voting, he would vote

"yea."

The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Bilbo], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Hill], and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are unavoidably detained. I am advised that if present and voting, these Senators would vote "nay."

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Hughes], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Lee], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Tydings] are necessarily detained.

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN] has a general pair with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY].

The result was-yeas 40, nays 31, as follows:

THIRD DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7462) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I now offer an amendment, of which notice has been given, and ask that it be

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the proper place in the bill it is proposed to insert the following new section:

proposed to insert the following new section:

SEC. —. Section 15 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939, approved June 30, 1939, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 15. (a) The Federal Works Administrator (hereimafter referred to as the 'Administrator') shall fix a monthly earning schedule for persons engaged upon work projects financed in whole or in part from funds appropriated by section I. Such monthly earning schedule shall be so fixed that the monthly earnings payable under such schedule to any class of workers shall not be less than the monthly earnings of the Works Progress Administration in effect on June 30, 1939. After August 31, 1939, the monthly earning schedule fixed by the Administrator (1) shall not provide for differentials in the monthly earnings of workers engaged in similar work in the same wage area, and (2) shall not provide for differentials between cities or counties within the same wage area upon the basis of the degree of urbanization or any other factor that will tend to discriminate against the less urbanized areas, and (3) shall increase the monthly security wage in region 3 to con-(3) shall increase the monthly security wage in region 3 to con-

(3) shall increase the monthly security wage in region 3 to conform to the monthly security wage rate in region 2.

"(b) The rates of pay for persons engaged upon projects financed in whole or in part from funds appropriated by this joint resolution shall not be less than the prevailing rates of pay for work of a similar nature in the same locality as determined by the Administrator and shall not be less than the current minimum wage required to be paid by private employers under the provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938."

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I take it that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS], the chairman of the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, would undoubtedly do what he has stated he would be compelled to do, as I admit he is compelled to under the rule, to invoke the rule that this is legislation on an appropriation bill. So with that in mind I ask, under my notice, as it has been printed in the RECORD, the rule that paragraph 4 of rule XVI be suspended so that the amendment may be considered. and I ask for the yeas and nays on that question.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Did the Senator file a separate notice in connection with this amendment?

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Nevada to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI so that he may present his amendment.

The Clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. On this vote I transfer my pair with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan] to the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR], and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Rey-NOLDS], and will vote. I vote "yea."

If present the Senator from North Carolina and the Senator from New Jersey would vote "yea," and the Senator from Kentucky would vote "nay."

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before with reference to my general pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary] and its transfer, I vote "nay."

Mr SHIPSTEAD (when his name was called). Making the same announcement concerning my pair as before, I vote

"yea."

Mr. STEWART (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. Holman]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Bileo] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. TOBEY (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY] and the senior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY]. If the Senator from Pennsylvania and the Senator from West Virginia were at liberty to vote, they would vote "yea." If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY], the senior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SLATTERY], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS], and the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Holt] are detained on important public business. I am advised that if present and voting, these Senators would vote "yea."

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] is unavoidably detained. If present and voting, he would vote

"yea."

The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Bilbo], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton] are unavoidably detained. I am advised that if present and voting, these Senators would vote "nay."

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HUGHES], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Typings] are necessarily detained.

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Green] has a general pair with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY].

Also I announce the pair of the senior Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone] and the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE] with the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL]. If at liberty to vote the Senator from Washington and the Senator from Iowa would vote "yea," and the Senator from Alabama would vote "nay."

Mr. LUCAS. My colleague [Mr. SLATTERY] and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] are unavoidably detained. If present and voting, they would vote "yea." They are paired with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton1, who is also unavoidably detained. I am advised that if present and voting, he would vote "nay."

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, in behalf of the senior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY], who has been called away from the Chamber on important business, I desire to announce, if it has not been announced, that had he been present he would have voted in the affirmative.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment stated by the clerk, on which the last vote was taken for a suspension of the rule, be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? Chair hears none, and the amendment may be printed in the

The amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. McCarran is as follows:

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I have on the desk a notice of a motion to suspend the rule in order that I may offer an amendment. I should like to have my amendment stated at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed, at the end of the bill, to insert the following new section:

SEC. . Subsection (b) of section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939 is hereby amended to read as follows: "(b) Employable persons who have been certified as in need of employment for a period of 3 months or more shall have preference in employment over persons who have had active employment status on such works projects continuously for 18 months or more: Provided, That this shall not result in the discharge of a person employed on works projects where he has made a reasonable effort to find suitable private employment nor where project operations would suffer from his discharge nor where unusual hardship would result from such discharge.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I wish to call attention to the fact that my amendment does not vitally affect the act. It merely undertakes to modify the harshness of the rule or provision in the relief act which would require the Administrator summarily to discharge 650,000 employees who have been continuously on the rolls of W. P. A. for 18 months.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it. Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Is the Senator offering his amendment or is he making a motion to suspend the rule?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion is to suspend the rule so that the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY] may offer the amendment.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it. Mr. RUSSELL. If the rule were to be suspended by the Senate for the purpose of permitting the amendment of the Senator from Montana to be offered, would the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] be in order as an amendment to the amendment of the Senator from Montana?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will decide the question of whether or not it is germane.

Mr. RUSSELL. Upon a vote of the majority?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. A majority vote will determine the question of germaneness of the amendment. Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I should like to call attention to the effect of the amendment I am presenting.

The amendment has been before the Senate on several previous occasions; and on each occasion it has been agreed to. The last occasion was when the so-called lending bill (S. 2684) to provide a program of public expenditures which are recoverable was before the Senate. At that time it was agreed to by a vote of 43 to 32. Inasmuch as that bill was lost in the House it now becomes necessary to undertake to have the amendment attached to the pending bill in order to remedy the condition referred to and prevent the harsh results flowing from the arbitrary enforcement of the Relief Appropriation Act.

The Administrator of W. P. A. has written a letter in which he expresses approval of the amendment I am proposing and points out that it is necessary in order to permit him to handle the situation with some measure of discretion. I shall read only the closing paragraph of his letter, which was read into the RECORD at the time the matter was previously before the Senate for consideration. The Administrator says:

The amendment which you propose to section 16 (b) of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939 would modify that section, which now requires the mandatory dismissal of workers who have been continuously employed on the W. P. A. for a period of 18 months or more. Under the present wording of the act, all certified workers, except veterans, who have been employed continuously for 18 months or more must be dismissed by August 31, 1939. This means that by that date the employment of approximately 650,000 persons must be terminated, which will impose severe hardships on many individuals and adversely affect the efficiency of project operations. Although the law provides that workers dismissed under this provision may be reinstated after a 30-day period if they have been recertified, it will be very difficult to accomplish such reinstatement without very considerable delays, especially as the total employment will be diminishing during this period. The amendment which you propose to section 16 (b) of the ing this period.

I believe that it is desirable to give preference in employment to persons who have been certified and awaiting assignment to Work Projects Administration jobs for some time over those who have been employed continuously for long periods. My testimony to this effect appears on pages 22 and 23 and 28 to 30 of the hearings on this appropriation before the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives. Specifically, I suggested that employable persons who had been certified as in need for a period of 6 months or more and had not been given employment should have preference in employment over persons who had been on the W. P. A. for a period of 3 years or more. In this connection I made the following statement:

"There has been discussed here in the committee and in debate the greater workers as they are called the the question of W. P. A. career workers, as they are called, the idea being that the benefits of W. P. A. employment might be rotated. But at the outset, I think the approach to it should be a very careful one, the suggestion I make is only the first step.

be a very careful one, the suggestion I make is only the first step in what might eventually evolve out of this thing, and that is, a preference provision as to employment."

I believe that the amendment which you propose accomplishes the primary purpose of giving preference in employment to persons who are awaiting assignment over those who have been employed continuously for a long period, and at the same time allows sufficient administrative discretion so that the application of the policy would not result in the disruption of the program and the individual hardships which will come about under the present

Following the adoption of this amendment on the previous occasion the Administrator temporarily suspended the instructions which had been issued to lay off W. P. A. workers; and the result of the vote on this occasion will determine whether or not a change is to be made in order to protect innocent and destitute persons who would otherwise be arbitrarily removed from the pay roll of the W. P. A. and denied work.

As I have stated, I have filed a notice of intention to move for a suspension of the rule in order that this matter may be taken up. I now move that the rule be suspended for that purpose.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agree-ing to the motion of the Senator from Montana to suspend the rule in order that he may offer the amendment which has been stated.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, when the relief measure was pending before the Senate I agreed with the proposal which, I think, was offered by the Senator from Kentucky IMr. BARKLEY] and which was substantially the same as what the Senator from Montana now proposes. It was a milder amendment and, according to my view, was a better approach to the problem. In the conference committee the conferees on the part of the House were insistent upon the provision adopted by the House, which is now the law. Since that time there has been considerable criticism of the provision. Even though I did not agree to it when it was first proposed, and agreed only as the hour of midnight approached and the conferees on the part of the Senate were forced to agree or decide that there would be no bill, I wish to say a word about the criticisms which have been directed against the action of the Congress and the provision proposed by the House at that time.

When we speak of innocent people who suffer because they are removed under the provisions of the existing law. we must remember certain facts. Last winter a representative of my committee interviewed 8,000 men in five of the great cities of the country. Of the total number interviewed 81 percent had been on the pay roll continuously from January 1, 1937, until that time. At the time the 81 percent were on the pay roll and had been on the pay roll continuously for 18 months there were thousands and thousands upon the eligible lists who had received no opportunity to be employed at any time during the 18 months. Under the law, as it exists today, men have been removed from the pay roll after they have been continuously on the roll for 18 months. My good friend from Montana, in his generous and charitable spirit, says that that is a hardship on those removed from the roll. But remember that those who take their places have not been on the pay roll. They have been without any help at all; and when the Congress does not appropriate any more money than the President asked for this year, and we are forced to determine what course we shall pursue, I cannot agree that the Congress is properly subject to criticism for saying that after a man has had a job for 18 months he should step aside for 30 days and allow another man, who has never held a job, and who is as much entitled to it as any one else, to come forward and have an opportunity to work on W. P. A. After 30 days the men who are now removed will be eligible to get back on the eligible list.

Difficult as is the problem, we must agree that whenever a man is removed after having been on the roll for 18 months, we are giving the job to a man who needs it and who has never had the opportunity which the other man has had.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BYRNES. Yes.

Mr. PEPPER. If the amendment of the Senator from Montana were agreed to, then, would it not be possible for those who are on W. P. A., and are found to be needy, to continue there, and also for the others to have a chance to go on, too, if application were made and granted in January for additional funds?

Mr. BYRNES. If there were sufficient funds for all of them on the pay roll, yes; that is undoubtedly true; but, Mr. President, and I make this statement only in justice to the position the House of Representatives have taken, and, though I disagree with them, I think the position of the House and of the Congress as the Congress finally agreed to the bill should be presented—here is the situation: If the rule should be suspended in this instance, of course, the amendment of the Senator from Montana would be in order. I am going to vote against it for the reason I will now state. I have served on conferences with House conferees on relief bills heretofore. We were in conference in the hours preceding June 30, and we know the attitude of the House on this proposal. We should be fair and say this amendment proposes legislation, and those of us who have through the years served on conference committees know that when the House conferees say they will consider appropriation items but not legislation on an appropriation bill, and they refuse to yield, it simply means that the conference will extend indefinitely, and I could see no hope of agreeing upon any bill for a long time.

Mr. PEPPER. One more question. Does the Senator agree that it is a sad prospect which will face several hundred thousand of people in the United States if this amendment should not prevail?

Mr. BYRNES. I agree that it would be, but it would be no sadder than the prospect facing men and women who have been seeking for years to get on the pay roll and have not been able to do so. It is an exceedingly difficult problem. I sympathize with the plight of the man who has been on the roll for 18 months, but I also sympathize with the other man who has not been able to get on the roll. It does not affect the total number on the pay roll. It does affect individuals.

Mr. PEPPER. Is it not a fair statement of the case to say that we know if the amendment of the Senator from Montana prevails the effect will be that additional funds will be requested and probably provided by the Congress consistent with the amendment of the Senator from Montana, so that, perhaps, neither of the classes referred to shall be deprived of a decent opportunity to make a security wage.

Mr. BYRNES. I cannot agree with that. I do not think the Senator will disagree with my statement. He must recall that there never has been a time since W. P. A. was established that every man eligible for a job has been given a job. Today and for the last 18 months there have been hundreds of thousands, in fact, more than a million, on the rolls of the various States of the country eligible for a job who have never been given a job. We have never taken the position that the Congress was appropriating funds sufficiently to give every man a job. That would be doing something the Congress has not heretofore done, no matter how desirable it might be in the opinion of the Senator.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, if we were to adopt the amendment of the Senator from Montana, would it not, in substance, be a reversal of the congressional policy by which a very large depletion in the number of W. P. A. employees was required by the last enactment of Congress on the subject?

Mr. BYRNES. No: I submit to the Senator that he has been misinformed about that. There has not been a reduction in the number of persons on the W. P. A. jobs by reason of the section of the law referred to, as the Senator will see from reading it. What has happened is there has been a

Mr. PEPPER. I am not talking about section 15. Mr. BYRNES. We have been considering this matter, and we know that the amendment of the Senator from Montana would accomplish the purpose the Senate had first in mind, but it would not add a man to the rolls.

Mr. PEPPER. I did not have in mind the section to which the Senator is referring, but that the amendment, if adopted, would affect the appropriations to be made.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator means that the Congress would have to appropriate more money.

Mr. PEPPER. Yes; it would be a reversal of the action in reducing the appropriation which was taken by Congress.

Mr. BYRNES. What the Senator would do would be to restore the status that existed prior to July 1, as I under-

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, if I may interrupt the Senator, of course, he recognizes that my amendment gives preference to those who have been on the certified relief list for a period of 3 months or more over those who have been employed on W. P. A. for 18 months or more. So the argument the Senator has just made with reference to the hardship which is imposed on those who are certified and who have been unable to get on the list is answered by this amendment, because it expressly gives them preference.

Mr. BYRNES. It gives them preference whenever, under the provision put in the law by the House, a vacancy is created. That is about all the difference.

Mr. MURRAY. It will require the Administrator to remove those who are on the rolls for a period of 18 months or more and to give preference to those who are certified on the relief list. It merely gives some discretion to the Administrator, which is necessary if we are going to have an efficient, intelligent, and common-sense administration of the W. P. A. It seems to me that this amendment is entirely reasonable and just and would remedy a situation that will obviously create much misery, distress, and confusion in this country.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I desire to say a few words on this amendment. I realize that the question has been debated again and again, and the Senate has passed upon it at least on one occasion during the present session. In all probability, the time has passed when debate can have any effect upon the vote which is about to be taken. Nevertheless, I wish to say that, in view of the inadequate amount of the appropriation, it is inevitable that there will be discharges from the W. P. A. rolls during the ensuing months which are not justified on any basis of fairness and decency to those who are now employed upon the works program.

Under the amendment adopted to the joint resolution passed prior to the end of the last fiscal year the provision there incorporated will result in the wholesale discharge of approximately 600,000 persons in the immediate future, regardless of what their condition of need may be. So it seems to me the issue is very clear. Unless the rule shall be suspended, unless Congress shall adopt the pending amendment and it shall become law, the Congress of the United States will become responsible for the arbitrary dismissal of 600,000 persons in the near future. In addition to those who will be discharged, because the funds Congress has provided are not adequate to take care of those who are in need and are certified for employment.

So far as I am concerned, Mr. President, I do not want to assume any share of that responsibility; I do not want to assume any share of the hardship and cruelty which will be inflicted upon the 600,000 people who will be thrown off the relief rolls without any discretionary power for the Administrator to alleviate or to take care of those hardship cases. Therefore I intend to vote for the motion to suspend the rule. [Manifestations of applause in the gallery.]

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will admonish the occupants of the gallery that it is contrary to the rules of the Senate for the occupants of the gallery to indulge in any manifestation of approval or disapproval.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I merely wish to say that every Senator on this floor has seen the newspaper announcement that, had it not been for the amendment of the Senator from Montana, which was adopted a few days ago, hundreds of thousands of those whom the Senator from Wisconsin describes would already have been let off the rolls. It is owing to the discretionary power of the Administrator in holding up those discharges, pending final congressional action on the amendment of the Senator from Montana, that those people are kept on the rolls today, and if this amendment shall be defeated this afternoon. I see no alternative but that the Administrator will revoke that order, and then these 600,000 people tomorrow will be removed from the rolls.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, I shall not delay very long a vote on this amendment. I merely desire to point out that unless this amendment shall be adopted great difficulty will be encountered in the administration of the various changes in personnel and management which have resulted from the enactment of legislation during the present session of the Congress.

Mr. President, already, as the result of a drastic curtailment of W. P. A. appropriations, we have made it compulsory for the Administrator to reduce the W. P. A. rolls from approximately three million to one million and a half. This cannot be done hurriedly and without disrupting the W. P. A. set-up. While that is being carried on, in the course of the administration of that drastic curtailment, to require, as the result of subsequent legislation, the removal from the rolls of approximately 600,000 additional workers, merely because they have served faithfully for 18 months, is, in my judgment, jeopardizing the efficient administration of the Works Progress Administration.

No time is given to study the problem. No opportunity for moderate and safe reductions in personnel is possible. It will be costly. It will be expensive. It will be cruel. I trust in the interest of better administration, I hope because of the economies that will result, I believe because of the better judgment of Members of the Senate, the amendment offered by the Senator from Montana will prevail.

Here is the very heart and center of the philosophy contained in the Senator's amendment, and I appropriate for my argument in behalf of his amendment the words of the Administrator of W. P. A.:

I believe-

Said the Administrator-that the amendment which you propose accomplishes the primary purpose of giving preference in employment to persons who are awaiting assignment over those who have been employed continuously for a long period, and at the same time—it allows sufficient administrative discretion so that the application of the policy would not result in the disruption of the program, and the individual hardships which will come about under the present law.

Therefore, Mr. President, by reason of the fact that it will not cost an additional dollar, because it will result in improved administration, and for the further reason that it will give the Administrator of W. P. A. time and opportunity to make needed and necessary and compelling adjustments, I trust that the amendment offered by the Senator from Montana will prevail.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I think there has been, both now and the last time this amendment was up, a sufficient discussion of the amendment itself. I desire to discuss a very practical question involved in the present parliamentary situation.

A few moments ago a parliamentary inquiry was propounded as to the result if the present motion of the Senator from Montana to suspend the rule should be adopted; if it would be possible to amend his amendment by a majority vote, and have certain other matters attached to the amendment and voted upon under the suspension of the rule. The ruling of the Chair was that it would be possible.

We all know that there are a number of Members of the Senate who are in sympathy with this amendment, but who, because of the situation in reference to the different rates of pay in one part of the country as compared with another part of the country, were necessarily compelled to vote against the suspension of the rule on the last two votes.

I have voted twice today to suspend the rule. I would have voted for the amendments proposed by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran]. I have voted for the prevailing-wage amendment on every occasion that I have had an opportunity to do so since I have been here. I believe in it. Nevertheless, we are faced with the very practical situation that some Senators are fearful that if they vote for the suspension of the rule in the case of this amendment, which they actually favor, they will bring about a situation in which it will be possible, by amendment of the Murray amendment, to include something which they oppose, and include it upon a majority vote.

I should like, if it were possible, in some way to see the McCarran amendments adopted, or either one of them; but we have had two demonstrations that it is not possible to suspend the rule for those amendments. We know as a practical fact that if this situation is not cleared up, we shall not get the two-thirds vote necessary to suspend the rule upon this amendment. If that situation is cleared up I think there is a very great possibility that there will be a two-thirds vote to suspend the rule upon this amendment. I appeal to those who may be interested to give assurance upon the floor of the Senate at the present time that if the Murray amendment is permitted to be voted upon under a suspension of the rule, that amendment will be voted upon singly, and no amendments will be offered to it.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I have made a promise to a number of Senators who have discussed the matter with me that I would not accept any amendments to the amendment which I am proposing, and that if any amendments are offered and attempted to be attached to my amendment I will withdraw my amendment, so that it may be possible for the amendment to be voted upon separately.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee will state it.

Mr. McKELLAR. After an amendment is presented, and a motion to suspend the rules to permit it to be considered is voted upon and agreed to, may the Senator proposing the amendment withdraw it?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Not after the amendment has been presented.

Mr. McKELLAR. So the Senator from Montana could not withdraw it. He would have no right to do so. Amendments could be offered to it.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Alabama will state it.

Mr. BANKHEAD. In the event the motion of the Senator from Montana is adopted, and the rule is suspended, will that make the bill subject to any other amendments that may be offered on any subject?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senate sets aside the rule and permits the offering of an amendment—for instance, the amendment of the Senator from Montana—it will be open to amendment just as any other amendment would be open to amendment. If the question is raised as to whether or not the second amendment is germane, the Senate will decide that question without debate.

Mr. BANKHEAD. By a majority vote?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. By a majority vote.
Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I submit a unanimous-consent request.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it. Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I ask unanimous consent that in the event the Senate adopts the present motion of the Senator from Montana [Mr. Murray] and suspends the rule and permits a vote upon his amendment as read by the clerk, no amendments to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Montana shall be in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request of the Senator from Washington?

Mr. SMITH. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I understand from the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran] that he has no intention of offering any amendment to my amendment. He does not intend to offer any such amendment.

Mr. McCarran. Mr. President, I exceedingly regret that the Senator from Montana should impose such a matter on the junior Senator from Nevada. I desire, frankly, to say that I stood on my amendments, and that I expect the able Senator from Montana to stand on his; but if amendments should be proposed here which are germane, under the ruling of the Chair, I cannot see why I should be bound against them.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, my reason for voting as I have voted was not entirely because I did not think there was some merit in the request to suspend the rule, but if this question is opened I have given a solemn promise that I would attempt to bring up some matters which are just as urgent as this one. The committee have gone into all these matters, however, and have worked out the best program they could find, and the Senate has practically adopted it. Now, here comes an urgent deficiency bill which opens up debate on the floor of the Senate as to matters which have been settled by the committee.

Now open the door, suspend the rule, and we go back into a regular session of the Senate.

It may be that these things are vitally important, which I do not concede and do not believe. I know how anxious men are to serve their constituents, but it does seem to me that the entire United States are not so vitally in need of these things that we could not wait 5 months. It will be only 5 months before we will be back here, and I do not think any one will starve to death or any one will die from the lack of sustenance. I hope that we may in order obey the behest and acknowledge the work of the committee, and let us not suspend the rule, but consider the matter that is before us.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I do not know whether or not the Senator understood fully the unanimous consent request I made. I was not seeking to limit anyone else except upon this one amendment. The Senator from Montana has asked for a suspension of the rule on his amendment. All I was seeking to do by my unanimous consent request was to see that upon that question we would have a discussion and a vote, and upon that alone. It would not stop any one else from moving a suspension of the rule.

Mr. SMITH. The Senator has been a Member of the Senate long enough to know that, once the rule is suspended, it is not possible to stop any one from offering an amendment. That is our privilege.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. That is the reason why I asked upon this particular vote the suspension be limited to this one particular question.

Mr. SMITH. Exactly; and make a favorite out of this one amendment to the exclusion of other amendments which are as important, and perhaps more important than

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I was not trying to get it to the exclusion of anything else. Anyone else, after this motion was disposed of, could move to suspend the rule on any matter.

Mr. SMITH. We would not have to move to suspend the

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, I have no desire to delay the Senate long. I had not expected to speak on this question, but I am prompted to by the attitude of the senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], which I am certain is quite sincere.

If I understood the Senator correctly, he expressed the thought that no one would starve in the next 5 months, or during the Senate recess. I do not expect anyone will starve, but there will be very serious hardship inflicted upon a great many hundreds of thousands of people if the proposal which the Senator from Montana is seeking to put into the bill is denied.

The Senate has admitted its mistake in connection with this proposal. The Senate was warned, at a time of excitement, when the relief bill was being considered, that the infliction-and it is an infliction-of this part of the law would create a serious hardship. The Senate, in a period of a few weeks, came to realize that that was true: it voted to correct the mistake. This is the last chance we have to prevent the throwing off of the relief rolls, and placing under the stigma of charity, hundreds of thousands of people.

Mr. President, I do not mean to bring up the matter of sectionalism, but this bill more particularly affects the industrial part of the country than it does other parts of the country, and I should like to point out, with some feeling of pride and satisfaction, that the industrial part of the country has not turned its back at all upon the farming and agricultural sections of the country. We have been voting for the most generous farm bills. There are not industrial problems or employment problems in the South or the West as there are in the North and the Northeast. I am very hopeful that the unanimous-consent request submitted by the Senator from Washington may prevail, and that we may have a chance to vote on this seriously important question.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, just a word in reply to the Senator from Connecticut. He takes for granted that his section is the only industrial section. In my State there is as much industry of the character affected by the proposed law as in any other State. That is true of North Carolina. as well as of South Carolina. Even were it not true, what right has anyone to make a difference in the same character of work, as is evidenced in the wage scale?

Mr. President, that was not the question I rose to discuss. I have been here for a long time, but I never expect to see the time when the "bloody shirt" is not waved. When a man desires to appeal to the lower principles which characterize us all, he begins to draw the distinction between sections.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to

Mr. SMITH. Not now. I am worn thin, and I am irritable over this eternal distinction between what will go South and what will go North. I know we paid the penalty for insisting on our right to interpret the Constitution, and I am proud of it. I am proud that we had the grit to appeal to the court of arms. We lost like brave men; we were punished like villains, and have been punished.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President-

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, we might just as well call a spade a spade. With great glee and satisfaction I saw in this hour of transition real Americans, without regard to party or party advantage, march shoulder to shoulder to sustain the principles they love-no North, no South, no East, no West, no Republicans, no Democrats, but real Americans standing for what they believe in.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?
Mr. SMITH. I yield.
Mr. TOBEY. I agree with much that the Senator has said, but he made one statement to which I object. He spoke of the lower principles which characterize us all. I wonder if he will accept an amendment, and make it "the lower principles which are dormant in us all." [Laughter.]

Mr. SMITH. I leave the Senator to interpret it as he sees fit. There is a great deal more than appears on the surface in a good many remarks that are made.

Mr. President, I merely rose to say that I am not one who would oppress the poor or deny men the kind of relief that can be extended in accordance with the law and the Constitution. I am not one who comes here and sheds great gobs of brine over starving humanity, and I guarantee there is not a Senator on this floor who can give us a list of those in his State who are starving. We know what it is for; all of us know what it is for-the ballot box. Everyone here knows that, and we understand all these pleas to the effect, "I hope the boys back home will hear me and remember me on election day." [Laughter.]

We are not worthy of being Senators if we cannot rise above the impelling feeling that we have to come here and put in the RECORD the fact that the people are starving. The constituents of any man who does that ought to rise up and denounce him for belittling his State in that way. There is no one hungry in South Carolina, and no one is going to be hungry there, but someone is hungry here for votes from South Carolina. Oh, that is a different song.

Let us relieve distress where we find it, and where it is open. and we all know it. But to come here and throw out a dragnet of billions of dollars without regard to who comes inthat is different. So long as one is a voter, he can come in.

I have had something to say about this before, and I have sat here and watched my colleagues. I dare say I am moved by the same impulses that move them, but the God whom I will have to meet soon will bear me witness that I have never voted for the imposition of a tax on the American people in order to gain a vote, and, God help me, I will never do it.

We know what is going on. A rather significant thing appeared today in the vote to suspend the rules. I do not charge anyone with regard to it, indeed, I do not, but it did look rather odd that every candidate for a certain office voted to relieve the poor boys.

I believe it was Daniel Webster who said that if he were playing dice and his opponents threw the double six or the double seven, or whatever it is, once, that would be his luck; if he threw it the second time, and the same thing occurred, it would be extraordinary luck. If he threw it a third time, it would be rather suspicious. If he threw it the fourth time, the dice were loaded, and he was a son of a gun. [Laughter.] If these references to the people were made just one time, we would think a man's heart was moved by his appreciation of the merits of the bill, but twice, three times-one can draw his own conclusion.

Mr. President, on account of conditions over which I have no control, I have recently had to be absent from this body, and perhaps it was well I had very little to do with the formation of the legislation, nor did I get the comments, pro and con, and I have not had an opportunity of studying these measures carefully in the light of their possible benefit or injury to the American people, and whether or not supporting them would mean a violation of my oath, as I took it, that I would sustain the Constitution against all enemies both foreign and domestic, without any mental reservation as to how many votes it would affect. I have had very little to say, and possibly I should not have said the little I have said: but the truth is refreshing now and then.

Mr. President, every Senator knows I have spoken the truth. Now let us go on with the bill as the committee has already framed it, and if the millions who are walking down the dark roads to oblivion and starvation do not disappear by next January, let us enumerate them and do the best we can to get them to vote for us next November.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, I am not going to permit the RECORD to show that I waved the bloody shirt. I had no such intention. And I do not believe that I made a distinction between the North and the South. I think I did make some reference to the difference between the agricultural and farming section of the country and the industrial section of the country. It was not in an attempt to stir anyone's passions or emotions. It was trying to point out that the people most seriously affected, and affected in the greatest numbers by this proposal, were the people in the industrial part of the country, where unemployment is greatest.

Mr. President, a few days ago the Senate voted upon a works-financing bill, so-called, but most Senators know that in its final form it was a farm bill. I was glad to vote for that proposal. I was glad to vote for the very magnified farm bill that the Senate passed this year, although I disagreed with portions of that measure.

I dislike very much to have even one Senator assume that I would raise the issue of sectionalism, and I do not want to leave here today or tomorrow with the impression prevailing that that was in my mind. I do not believe the Senator from South Carolina himself sincerely believes that it was. I think he used a figure of speech. The bloody shirt was entirely out of my mind. The last time I heard of it— the bloody shirt or the red shirt—it seems to me, was on election eve in South Carolina, when the Senator himself wore a red shirt. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, I am very hopeful that the Senator, in whose sincerity I believe, will withdraw the objection he has made, because the proposal is not an appeal for votes. I am certain the Senator would not say in a serious moment that he believed that at any time since I came here I cast a vote with the intention of catching votes. It so happens that I have been compelled to vote in favor of his constituents more often than my own. I will do so cheerfully so long as I remain in the Senate, but I hope he will give the stricken, distressed people living in the thickly settled parts of the country a chance to obtain a security wage.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I wish to suggest one matter that I think is faulty mathematics. Personally, I am not in sympathy with the work-relief bill which the Senator from Montana seeks to amend. I prefer the modified form which the Senate adopted. I wish to make a point, however, with respect to the contention that the 18-month provision is going to put off the rolls a large number of people. Colonel Harrington wrote to the Senator from Montana and said the number would be over 600,000, and he wrote to the committee and said it would be 175,000. That difference does not matter at the moment for the purpose of the discussion. There will be some taken off the rolls. But will there not be as many put on? Is it not simply a question as to the personnel on the rolls? Under the 18-month provision those who have been on the rolls for 18 months are taken off, but, on the other hand, those who have not previously been on the rolls are put on. I think we should not make a mistake in the view we take of that matter.

So it cannot be charged that by taking off those who have been on the roll for 18 months and putting others on the rolls who have not been there before, we are not taking care of an equal number on the rolls. There has been that implication. I am interested, as is the Senator from Montana. in having the Administrator do the best he can with the amount of money available, and be allowed to do all he possibly can for the needy of the United States.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, my amendment seeks to prevent hardship and to prevent gross injustice being done. It gives preference to those who are on the waiting list, but permits the Administrator to exercise some discretion, so as not to disrupt the work which is going on by W. P. A., and not work any great hardship on those who may be removed under the arbitrary rule requiring the removal of the entire number of 600,000 persons from the rolls.

Mr. ADAMS. That is exactly the principle on which the Senate committee operated, but when one place existed and two persons applied for it, preference was to be given to the one who seemed to be most deserving, and we felt that, as between someone who had been on the roll for 18 months and someone who had not been on the roll at all, perhaps the one who had been on for 18 months should be removed to make room for the one who had not been on, assuming that there was not money enough to take care of both.

Mr. MURRAY. My amendment does not do otherwise. It merely allows the Administrator some discretion, so as to maintain the efficiency of the administration.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it. Mr. CLARK of Missouri. If the pending motion to suspend the rule to permit action on the amendment of the Senator from Montana should prevail, then that amendment would be subject to any amendment that might be offered on the floor, would it not?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It would be subject to any amendment which might be offered from the floor ex-

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Subject only to the provision of the rule that a point of order might be made against it on the ground that it is legislation on an appropriation measure or on the ground that it is not germane?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is correct.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. May I further inquire from the Chair, in that event, the matter would be submitted to the Senate without debate, and it would be decided by majority

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is correct.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, in view of that situation, may I request the Senator from Washington [Mr. SCHWELLENBACH] again to submit his unanimous-consent request to try to limit this matter so that the real vote may be had on this subject without the injection of any other ques-

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, in order that my position may be made clear I will say that I tried to clarify it by way of an answer to a question propounded to me, as I recall, by the Senator from Montana. I wish to make a statement so my position may be thoroughly understood. My college training was not very extensive, but my athletic training was in football, and when playing in the backfield I was trained to take advantage of every opening in the line. So I want to say that I shall persist and shall take advantage of every opportunity so long as I may have a chance to secure the prevailing wage for America. Any opportunity that is afforded me here by any amendment I shall take advantage of to the best of my ability.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I fully agree with the position of the Senator from Nevada. I want him so far as the prevailing amendment is concerned to take advantage of every opening in the "line," but we all know that there will not be any opening in the "line" if the motion of the Senator from Montana, as submitted, should prevail without some limitation being placed on the amendment. I, therefore, as suggested by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Clark], renew my unanimous-consent request.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will please restate his unanimous-consent request.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that if the motion of the Senator from Montana to suspend the rule is adopted, then no amendment may be offered to the amendment which has been read by the clerk, which is an amendment involving the question of the discharge of W. P. A. employees.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I suggest that under that request there be involved the ruling of the Chair, namely, on the question of the germaneness of that which may be offered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair cannot pass on the question of germaneness.

Mr. SMITH. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina objects to the unanimous-consent request of the Senator from Washington. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Montana to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI so he may offer the amendment which was read at the desk. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Barbour], who would vote "yea" if present. I do not know how the junior Senator from Kentucky would vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before with reference to my general pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary], I vote

"nay."

On this question the senior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER], who would vote "yea," and I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. TOBEY (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Guffey] and the senior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY]. I am advised that if they were present they would vote "yea." If I were at liberty to vote I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. LUCAS. I am authorized to announce that my colleague [Mr. SLATTERY] and the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL are paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. Hol-MAN]. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Two-thirds of the Senators present not having voted in the affirmative, the motion of the Senator from Montana [Mr. Murray] to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI is rejected.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I offer an amendment which is supported by a Budget estimate, but which was received too late to be considered by the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed, at the proper place, to insert the following:

Defraying deficits in treasuries of municipal governments, Virgin Islands: For an additional amount for defraying the deficits in the treasuries of the municipal governments because of the excess of current expenses over current revenues for the fiscal year 1940, municipality of St. Thomas and St. John $30,000 and municipality of St. Croix $40,000; in all, $70,000, to be paid to the said treasuries in monthly installments.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, may I inquire if it is the policy of the Government to pay the deficits of the communities referred to in the amendment?

Mr. HAYDEN. The Government has done so in the past. The municipalities cannot function unless they have this money. The Senator understands the situation in the Virgin Islands, which President Hoover described as a "poorhouse." That is what we have to contend with there.

Mr. BRIDGES. Am I to understand that the situation in the Virgin Islands has reached such a point that municipalities cannot pay their own bills and we have to go into the United States Treasury to make up the deficits?

Mr. HAYDEN. We are doing it to the extent of $70,000.

Mr. BRIDGES. For how many communities?

Mr. HAYDEN. For the two communities, St. Thomas and St. Croix.

Mr. BRIDGES. I ask the Senator whether or not this action would establish a precedent which may mean that we would have to dip into the Treasury for deficits in communities in other possessions of the United States?

Mr. HAYDEN. The Virgin Islands is a "horrible example." I do not know that it has ever been done anywhere else.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, undoubtedly this administration, if it sets out to put this thing through, has the votes to do so. I am probably talking against a blank wall. It seems to me to be a very bad precedent. Personally I am opposed to it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, pursuant to a notice given under the rule, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. At the proper place in the bill it is proposed to insert the following:

To remove the depressing economic effects of excessive farm-mortgage debts, and prevent the further increase of farm tenancy due to mortgage foreclosures, the Secretary of Agriculture shall be authorized, out of any funds of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation as he finds available, to refinance farm mortgages on which the payments periodically due exceed the normal farm income available for debt service. Such loans shall be subject to titles I and IV of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, but may be made without regard to the provisions of section 4 of said act. The Secretary of Agriculture shall administer the provisions of this section and all repayments on account of such loans shall be credited to the account of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that in case the motion to suspend the rule should prevail, no other amendments than the one which has just been read shall be in order.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, may I make an inquiry of the Senator?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator has filed a motion to suspend

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I do not intend to force the Senator from Colorado, for no good purpose, to make the point of order.

I gave the notice; and I recognize that the amendment proposes legislation on an appropriation bill. I shall not go through the form of asking the Senator to make the point of order, because I realize that, as chairman of the subcommittee and responsible to the Appropriations Committee for the conduct of the bill on the floor, he is bound to make the point of order.

Mr. ADAMS. I appreciate the Senator's attitude.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that in case the motion to suspend the rule shall prevail by the proper majority of two-thirds, no other amendment than the one which I have tendered be considered in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. SMITH. I object. Mr. KING. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, my purpose in requesting unanimous consent was in order to allay the apprehensions of those who might be concerned that the amendments to section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, which are pending in the form of a bill, would be offered to my amendment. Personally I do not think they are germane; and if such amendments should be offered I would join in voting that they were not germane to my amendment.

Mr. President, I am sure it is not necessary for me to debate this amendment at great length. It was amply debated when the lending bill was under consideration in the Senate, and it prevailed at that time by a vote of 74 to 8 on a yea-and-nay vote.

No Member of this body who has any farmers in his State will fail to take cognizance of the critical situation confronting the farmers who are being foreclosed because of the fact that their mortgages were made at a time when farm values and farm prices were high. In practically every State in the Union, as demonstrated by statistical data placed in the RECORD by the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler] and myself while this amendment was under discussion, the foreclosures upon farms in the United States are continually rising. This amendment would make available to the Secretary of Agriculture in his discretion the unutilized authorization for the issuance of securities by the Farm Mortgage Corporation. That corporation has an unutilized provision for the issuance of securities, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, amounting to more than $600,000,000. This amendment leaves it in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture to utilize so much of that authorization as he finds available for this purpose.

The loans which would be made to farmers who are threatened with foreclosure would be on exactly the same terms as are provided in the Jones-Bankhead Farm Tenant Act. In short, by this amendment, if it were adopted, we would provide for the refinancing of existing farm mortgages, in order that the farmers who live upon those farms today could continue to live upon them, in the same way that we are now providing for those who are being rehabilitated and established upon farms in order that they may become farm owners under the Jones-Bankhead Act.

Mr. President, I desire again to summarize for the Senate what those provisions are.

First. Section 1 of title I of the Jones-Bankhead Act would prohibit refinancing loans to any person who is not a citizen of the United States, and would prohibit any loans to be made for the acquisition of any farm unless such farm is of a size sufficient to constitute "an efficient farm-management unit and to enable a diligent farm family to carry on successful farming in the locality."

Second. Section 2 of title I of the Jones-Bankhead Act would prohibit any farmer from being refinanced unless a county committee consisting of three farmers residing in the locality find that by reason of his character, ability, and experience he is likely successfully to carry out his undertakings, and that the farm with respect to which the loan is made is such that there is a reasonable likelihood that repayment will be made. The committee would also be required to certify the reasonable value of the farm. No refinancing loan could be made with respect to any farm in which any member of the committee, or any person related to such member within the third degree of consanguinity or affinity has any property interest.

Third. Section 3 (a) of title I would require that the refinancing loans be repaid within a period of not more than 40 years; contain covenants to protect the security and assure that the farm will be maintained in repair, and waste and exhaustion of the farm prevented; provide that, upon the borrower's disposition of the farm without the approval of the Government, the unpaid balance may be declared immediately due and payable.

In the fourth place, section 42 of title IV provides for the appointment of a county committee composed of three farmers residing in the county.

Section 48 of title IV authorizes the Secretary "to provide for the payment of any obligation or indebtedness to him under this act under a system of variable payments under which a surplus above the required payment will be collected in periods of above-normal production or prices and employed to reduce payments below the required payment in periods of subnormal production or prices."

In short, the effect of the reference in the amendment to titles I and IV of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act is to give to farmers who are now farm owners an opportunity to retain their farms upon the same basis that we are already extending assistance under the Jones-Bankhead Act to farm tenants in order to establish them as farm owners in this country.

Mr. President, I think all those who are familiar with the rural and agricultural areas will agree with me when I say that the most menacing thing, so far as the maintenance of democracy in the agricultural areas is concerned, is the alarming increase of farm tenancy. Families that have lived upon farms in some instances for two or three generations are being foreclosed upon: they are being stripped of everything they have; and then, under this inconsistent policy of government, they become eligible to secure a loan under the Jones-Bankhead Farm Tenant Act in order that they may again become farm owners; or they may be picked up by the Farm Security Administration and rehabilitated upon a farm. In many instances the lending agencies of the Government which have these mortgages are foreclosing them and taking a reduction in the principal of the mortgage at the foreclosure sale which, if extended to the present owner, would enable him to fulfill his obligation, make his interest and principal payments, and keep himself and his family upon the farm.

Recently a survey of this situation has been made in my own State by a number of the State agencies. I want to read from it:

However, there are data available showing that the number of farms being foreclosed in the State of Wisconsin is growing at an alarming rate. These foreclosures are in large measure the result of indebtedness to the Federal land bank and the land bank commissioner. Statements are made to us daily that the practices of these quasi governmental agencies are more rigid and practices of these quasi governmental agencies are more rigid and unsympathetic than those of the majority of private creditors. We know many instances wherein the Federal land bank has sold foreclosed farm property for less than the face value of its mortgage without being willing to offer the advantages of this type of mark-down to the indebted farmer, who may have shown satisfactory evidence of ability to conduct a farm by virtue of learn years of overstion. long years of operation.

Citations of such incidents are in several of the attached exhibits. Such practices seem to us in conflict with the stated rehabilitation purposes of other Federal farm agencies, such as the Farm Security Administration, and to evidence a hard-boiled unconcern with the general deflation in values which has set in since the farmer undertook his loan, which lends little more than legal right to the foreclosure, rather than social justice or economic

Mr. President, I do not wish to detain the Senate long; but let me give a few examples.

Here is a farmer in Barron County, one of the best dairy counties in the State of Wisconsin. The farm consists of 120 acres, nearly all of which is under cultivation. The buildings are fair. The fences are good. The property is located on a lake shore. This man bought the farm 34 years ago. At that time the land was all wild. He paid $3,500 for the land. Then he cleared the land, put up the buildings, and so forth. In 1922 he obtained a Federal land-bank loan in the amount of $7,500. For 12 years he paid interest, taxes, and insurance. In 1934 he lost the property by foreclosure and was forced to apply for relief. Later on he was given old-age assistance. After 1934 the Federal land bank sold the farm for $3,500.

I wish I had the ability to picture the reactions of a farmer and his family who have cleared wild land from the wilderness, who have built up their home from a shack into a respectable farm residence, who by their labor have secured sufficient funds to build farm buildings upon it, and then, after living upon that land for 34 years, have it foreclosed, are deprived of it, and then have the humiliating experience of having to accept public assistance. I say that that sort of thing does not have to happen.

That was a rural community. Do that to just one deserving farm family in a county, and you tend to undermine the confidence and respect of the entire community in and for the policies and activities of government.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I was wondering what the approximate interest rate was that the farmer paid on his mortgage.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I have only this information which came to me this morning. I have not anything further. These are brief summaries of the farm experience of a few of these examples that have been investigated

Mr. LUNDEEN. If the Senator will permit me, I should like to say that I think it will be found that the interest rate was somewhere around 5 percent or more; but during that period we were permitting loans to foreign nations at one-tenth of 1 percent, and that fact is in the RECORD. We had better revise our policies in America, and I think of our own American people and our own American farmers.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Here is another farmer in the same county. He had lived on this property for over 40 years. He had purchased the land when it was all wild. Through his efforts the land was cleared, and buildings put up. He obtained a Federal land-bank loan in the amount of $4,000. Because of drought conditions and low farm prices he lost the farm, and the Federal land bank resold the farm to another party for $1,300.

Here is another 40-acre farm in the same county. Twenty years ago this farmer paid $4,500 for the farm. He cleared and plowed 20 acres of the land and put up all the buildings. The buildings cost him over $2,000. His total investment was about $7,000. In 1934 it became necessary to obtain a loan in the amount of $2,000, of which $1,000 was obtained from the Federal land bank and $1,000 from the Federal land bank commissioner. He lost the farm through foreclosure in 1938. In 1939 the bank sold the farm to someone else for $1,500. This farmer is 56 years old. He has today no property whatever.

Here is another farm. The family are old settlers in the community. They owned an 80-acre farm, 40 acres of which was under cultivation. The land is good. The buildings are fair. Years ago the farmer paid $5,500 for this place. In 1933 he obtained a Federal land-bank loan in the amount of $3,000. Because of the depression and drought the place was lost by foreclosure. Later on, the Federal land bank sold the farm to someone else for $1,800.

I could continue almost indefinitely citing such tragic and appealing cases; but I say to the Senate in all seriousness that this amendment will provide relief. It will provide a new opportunity for farmers—good farmers, hard-working farmers-to obtain a refinancing of their farms under the terms of the Jones-Bankhead Act, and thus enable them to retain their farms, to work out their principal and their interest upon the readjusted basis, and to remain what they are today, self-respecting, hard-working citizens of the United States.

Mr. President, I appeal for votes to suspend the rule, and to enable us to provide this relief, for which the Senate has twice voted under amendments offered by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Austin], and voted for on the lending bill by a vote of 74 to 8.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I know that the Senate is not in any mood to listen to any long argument with reference to this proposed legislation at this time. I appreciate the fact that a vote upon the measure at this late hour may not indicate the interest of Members of the Senate in the proposed legislation, and I do not wish to take a great deal of time with reference to the matter. Probably nothing I can say will be as eloquently or as ably said as has been the argument made by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE].

I wish to call attention to the farm situation, and when I speak of it as a farm situation I do not mean a farm situation as it relates to the State of Montana, or to the State of Wisconsin, or the State of California, but I call attention to it as a farm situation as it relates to the State of New York, the State of Connecticut, and to every other State in the Union.

We have been passing measures, and eloquent speeches have been made in behalf of labor, and I have voted for the prevailing wage scale. I voted originally for it, and I fought for an increase in the wages of railway workers and others. But I call attention to the fact that a great many of the farmers of this country are not making as much upon their farms at the present time and getting as much money as the Government is paying out to some of the relief workers in the United States.

Some of the farmers upon farms in the most fertile valleys in the country, some of the farmers in Illinois, some of the farmers in Iowa, some in Wisconsin, some in the Connecticut Valley, notwithstanding the fact that they have investments of from $5,000 to $10,000 in their farms, are not making as much in the way of net income as the man who is on relief is receiving.

City and county and national taxes have been increased, and the cost of everything the farmer buys has risen. He has a mortgage upon his property, perhaps, and the rates of interest have not come down. The railroads of the country can borrow money at the banks at 2 percent, but the farmers are, in some instances, paying as high as 6 or 7 percent, and in others as high as 8 percent, for the money they must borrow.

Unless we do something to keep the farmers upon their farms, and make it possible for them to stay on them, we will have a chaotic condition in this country in the not very distant future.

I know of the prejudice which exists in the minds of some Members of the Senate with reference to attaching this kind of an amendment to an appropriation bill, but I think the Senate and the Congress should set aside their prejudices in considering this particular bill, and suspend the rule, and permit the amendment to be placed upon this appropriation bill. I believe the House of Representatives will accept the amendment if it goes to conference.

Mr. President, I do not believe the Members of the House could go back home and face their constituents and acknowledge that they had refused to vote to relieve the great farming interests, which are the very foundation and the very backbone of this Government, if they had failed to vote for legislation which would help keep the farmer and his wife and his children upon their farm. It is inconceivable to me that that should happen, and I appeal to the Members of the Senate, who voted a few days ago by 74 to 8 on the amendment offered by the Senator from Wisconsin and myself to the spending-lending bill, that they vote to suspend the rule and place this amendment upon the pending bill.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. RUSSELL. I suggest the absence of a quorum.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams Davis Sheppard Andrews Ashurst Downey Ellender Lundeen McCarran Shipstead Smith Austin Bankhead George McKellar Stewart Gerry Gibson Mead Taft Miller Minton Thomas, Okla. Thomas, Utah Barkley Borah Bridges Gurney Murray Tobey Townsend Harrison Brown Bulow Neely Nye O'Mahoney Truman Burke Hayden Van Nuys Herring Byrd Byrnes Pepper Wagner Johnson, Calif. Johnson, Colo. Pittman Walsh Capper Chavez Clark, Mo. Radeliffe King La Follette Reed Russell White Lee Lodge Connally Schwartz Schwellenbach

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Sixty-nine Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, speaking for myself, I wish to make the statement that if the rule is suspended I shall vote against any amendment which may be tendered to the amendment under discussion, because I believe that the other amendments have had their opportunity, and I do not think that one amendment should be denied its right to be considered on its merits because of apprehension by Senators that other amendments which have had their opportunity will be offered to my amendment.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield. Mr. WHEELER. I wish to say that I concur fully in what the Senator from Wisconsin has stated. I would not only vote against any amendment such as he suggests, but certainly I would speak against attaching other amendments to his amendment. I think it would not be fair to the farmers of this country for anyone who is interested in these other amendments whatever they may be, to try to tack them to this amendment.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wisconsin yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. MEAD. I believe that the amendment presented by the able Senator from Wisconsin is one which contains considerable merit, and it should receive the approval of this body. I agree with the statement which has just been made by the Senator from Montana, and I for one shall oppose vigorously any further amendment to the amendment now at the desk. I believe it should stand or fall on its own merits. Therefore, while supporting the amendment, I will object to any amendment to the amendment being offered.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. MURRAY. I wish to say that I consider this a very meritorious amendment, and at this time I desire to state that I will not offer the amendment I presented a short time ago, and I will vote against any amendment which may be proposed which might embarrass the adoption of the Senator's amendment.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. I wish to subscribe to the sentiments expressed by other Senators. I do not think we should lose a little of the good we may get because we cannot get all we would like to have.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. I shall support the amendment, I shall vote for it, but I return to the expression I made not long ago in the Senate, that whenever I have an opportunity I shall endeavor to break through the line so that we may have the prevailing wage amendment presented, and if this amendment affords me such an opportunity, I will take advantage of it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I did not know the Senator was going to "run interference" for the Committee on Appropriations, or I would not have yielded to him.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I reaffirm my belief in the principle involved in the amendment. It is the same principle that was expressed in two amendments which the Senate saw fit to attach to different bills which were offered some time ago. My views have been thoroughly expressed for the Record, and I will not weary Senators by repeating them.

I do, however, wish to make this comment, that while this is in the nature of an appropriation, it does not call for new money, but it does authorize the use of Federal credit for a purpose I think is of a very fundamental character, that is, to give to agriculture, and particularly that part of agriculture which is the most needy at the present time, a stabilizing factor, that is, time. Agricultural products are not turned over with the same velocity which characterizes the turn-over of industrial products, and that is one reason why agriculture gets behind industry and commerce.

It has long been my opinion that if we put the economy of agriculture on a timing basis that harmonized with the timing of nature, that synchronized with the annual development and turn-over of agricultural products, we would afford to agriculture more substantial and permanent benefits than we could possibly do by regimenting agriculture or by granting it bounties.

This measure, if carried out according to the spirit of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, as stated in the amendment, carries with it the principle of security for farmers in respect of two things. One is the reduction of the cost of carrying the debt, and the other is the extension of time in which to amortize and retire the debt.

Time is of the very essence of this amendment, and time is what the farmers need in order to retire and pay off their debts. There is no question about their honesty. There is no question that it is the supreme desire of the farmer, and the farmer's wife and the farmer's children, to pay off the mortgage on the farm. This affords the shield and protection of the credit of the Government for this purpose, and I hope the rule will be suspended so that amendment may be voted upon, and I hope the amendment will be adopted by as large a majority as that by which it was agreed to when last presented.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, no one knows better than I that the Senate does not care to listen to a long discussion, and I promise to limit myself to 2 minutes. I merely wish to call attention to the fact that we are doing a very inconsistent thing. We are furnishing means by which a tenant may buy a farm, but we are putting farmers who own their farms and live on their farms, off their farms. The only purpose of the amendment is to remedy that situation.

The Senate has twice adopted this principle. It calls for no new appropriation. As the distinguished Senator from Vermont has said, it authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to use credit, and that is all. If there ever was a meritorious case which is not inconsistent with a thing that has been done here today, this is that case, and I earnestly hope the Senate will vote to suspend the rule. I join with the Senator from Wisconsin, the senior Senator from Montana, and the junior Senator from Montana, and say that I will oppose any attempt to add anything to the amendment if the Senate votes to suspend the rule.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I believe I am about as simon-pure a farmer as there is in this body. I doubt whether the condition which is being described is brought about by natural causes. If time would allow me I should like to outline what has brought about the present deplorable condition of the farmer. We are not going to cure it by appropriating public funds when we are perpetuating laws which produce that effect. It is just a vicious circle.

I am not here opposing the Government coming in to aid, but I think it ought to start at the right place. I deplore the fact that this amendment comes up at the time it does and in the form it does. I wish it had been offered at the time when all the forces that brought about this condition were at work. But, as I said before, if the rule is to be suspended for the benefit of those who will be provided for under the proposed amendment, then the rule should be suspended so that those who would be affected by the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nevada would also be benefited. That is not all. The minute the Senate opens the door we shall have a flood of amendments the purpose of which is to relieve a condition that may be horribly disastrous within 5 months. We will be back here in 5 months, and then we should legislate in sanity, and not be taking a lot of piecemeal bites at the thing. I as a farmer and a representative of that class of wonderfully worthy people am going to vote against the suspension of the rule, not because I would not like to see this relief handed out, but because I do not believe the time and place and circumstance warrant it. We may take the action contemplated under the amendment, but also we may take action on other things not now contemplated. Despite the fact that such eloquent pleas have been made for it, and although I am perhaps more personally interested in the effect temporarily than is any other Senator on the floor, I urge that the rule not be suspended.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follette] to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI so that he may offer his amendment. On that question the yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia, who is absent.

If present he would vote "nay." The senior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier] and myself are paired with the senior Senator from Virginia. If the senior Senator from North Dakota were present he would vote "yea," and if I were at liberty to vote I should vote "yea."

Mr. STEWART (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. Holman] and the Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone], both of whom if present would vote "yea." I transfer that pair to the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. TOBEY (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Guffey] and the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. Slattery]. I understand each of these Senators if present would vote "yea." I transfer my pair to the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. Tydings] and will vote. I vote "nay." I am advised that if present, the Senator from Maryland would vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. I do not know how he would vote if he were present. I transfer my pair to the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Barbour]. I do not know how he would vote if he were present. I allow my vote to stand.

Mr. CONNALLY. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it. Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Pennsylvania just stated that he had a pair with some other Senator and that he did not know how he would vote if he were present. Then he transferred his pair to another Senator and announced that he did not know how that other Senator would vote if present. How can that be done? How can a transfer of pairs be made unless there is some understanding as to how the Senators would vote if present? I make a point of order that that vote cannot stand.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Pennsylvania wishes to relieve himself of the pair on a question the decision of which requires an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the Senators voting. If he were voting in the negative it would only require the transfer to one Senator. If he were voting in the affirmative, it would require the transfer to two Senators who would not vote as he would if they were present and voting.

The Senator has transferred his pair, so the Chair understands, to some other Senator. It is a matter with the Senator as to whether or not he believes that the other Senator is on the other side of the question.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Bilbo], the Senator from Washington [Mr. Bone], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. Brown], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. Clark], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. Gillette], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Green], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Guffey], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Hill], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Hughes], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Holt], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Maloney], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. Slattery], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Tydings] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Reynolds] are unavoidably detained.

Mr. HARRISON. Making the same announcement with reference to my general pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary], I vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. AUSTIN. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary] is necessarily absent. His pair with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Harrison] has been stated.

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY] has a general pair with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. Green].

The result was announced—yeas 38, nays 30, as follows:

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Less than two-thirds of the Senators present having voted in the affirmative, the motion of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] to suspend paragraph 4 of Rule XVI is rejected.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the yea-and-nay vote and the announcements in connection therewith appearing on page 10295 of the Con-GRESSIONAL RECORD of July 28, 1939, be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? Mr. BURKE. I object.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I have the floor and will read it into the RECORD. An amendment identical to that just offered by me on which the Senate has just voted not to suspend the rule, in order that I might offer it, was offered on July 28, 1939. It occurred to me that the constituents of Senators who do not have the privilege of having a complete file of the Congressional Record might be somewhat confused, having read that the amendment was adopted by a vote of 74 to 7 in connection with the lending bill, to find that subsequently there had been a different vote. I read:

The Presiding Officer. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered jointly by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follette] and the Senator from Montana [Mr. Wheeler]. On that amendment the yeas and nays have been demanded and ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. Harrison (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary]; but I understand that if present he would vote as I intend to vote. I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. Davis (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. I understand, however, that if he were present he would vote as I have already voted; so I will let my vote stand.

Mr. Green. I have a general pair with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Wiley]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway], and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. Minton. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Reynolds] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway] is absent on im-

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Balley], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senators from Virginia [Mr. Glass and Mr. Byrd], the Senator from Utah [Mr. King,] the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Thomas], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Walsh] are unavoidably detained.

The result was announced—yeas 74, nays, 7, as follows:

Adams, Andrews, Ashurst, Austin, Bankhead, Barbour, Barkley, Bilbo, Bone, Borah, Brown, Bulow, Burke, Byrnes, Capper, Chavez, Clark, Idaho, Clark, Mo., Connally, Danaher, Davis, Downey, Ellender, Frazier, George, Gibson, Gillette, Green, Guffey, Gurney, Harrison, Hatch, Hayden, Herring, Hill, Holman, Holt, Johnson,

NOT VOTING-15

Bailey, Byrd, Caraway, Donahey, Glass, Johnson, Calif., King, Logan, McNary, Overton, Pittman, Reynolds, Thomas, Okla., Walsh, Wiley.
So the amendment offered jointly by Mr. La Follette and Mr.

WHEELER was agreed to.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I wish to offer a word of explanation. The Senate will recall that earlier in the day I asked the chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. ADAMS] whether or not the request submitted by the Wage and Hour Administration for $2,000,000, which had been approved by the Budget, had been approved by the committee. The chairman of the subcommittee, the Senator from Colorado and the able Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar] were both of the opinion, in the announcement they made to me at that time, that the Senate had granted the entire request of the Wage and Hour Administration as approved by the Budget.

Since that time we have checked back with the clerical force of the committee and we find that there must have been some confusion or error because, as the amendment actually was adopted in the committee and is actually contained in the bill, only $500,000 instead of $1,000,000 was allowed by the Senate Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. All I can say is that I understood that both the subcommittee and the full committee had voted $1,000,000 additional. I do not know what the record shows.

Mr. PEPPER. I will say that that was also the stated understanding of the chairman of the subcommittee, the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] earlier in the day.

Mr. President, having checked carefully with the clerk of the Senate Appropriations Committee, in the presence of the able Senator from Utah [Mr. Thomas], the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, we find that there will have to be a correction of the record if I correctly understand the intention of the committee.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield to the Senator from Colorado. Mr. ADAMS. The Senator is quite correct as to the response I made to him earlier in the day. I have talked with the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] and with the clerk of the committee. They tell me that my response was in error, and that a motion was made in the committee to put in the $1,000,000, which motion was lost, and that a motion was then offered by the Senator from Georgia IMr. Russell to put in $500,000, which motion was carried. I am sorry that my recollection was in error, as it obviously was in view of the statements of those who have kept close track of the matter.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I was under the wrong impression about it. I thought the amendment went through as requested.

Mr. PEPPER. I am sure the Senator thought so.

Mr. McKELLAR. I shall be very glad to support the request for $1,000,000.

Mr. PEPPER. I appreciate the Senator's attitude. Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield in order that I may take up a matter foreign to that which he is discussing, provided he does not lose the floor?

Mr. PEPPER. Will the Senator be kind enough to allow me to conclude this matter? I shall then be glad to yield to the Senator.

Mr. McCARRAN. Very well.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the situation is this: A short time ago the Wage and Hour Administration submitted to the Bureau of the Budget a request for a defi-ciency appropriation of $4,600,000. The Bureau of the Budget, after carefully considering the request, reduced the amount requested to $2,000,000. The Bureau of the Budget therefore submitted to the Congress the figure $2,000,000 for additional funds for the enforcement of the Wage and Hour Act. That was done, Mr. President, in view of the fact that there are 20,000 complaints in the files of the Wage and Hour Administration, and they have a total force of inspectors of only 210. They have only eight field lawyers for the purpose of servicing those complaints in litigation.

When the matter went to the House the Appropriations Committee recommended nothing; but the House, upon the amendment of Mr. Woodrum, included $1,000,000. So the matter came to the Senate with $1,000,000 of the $2,000,000 recommended by the Bureau of the Budget. The Senator from Utah [Mr. Thomas], the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor of the Senate, personally appeared before the Senate Appropriations Committee. I happened to be present. Officials from the Wage and Hour Administration and some Members of the House were present, and pointed out the need for funds to make possible at least a reasonable enforcement of the wage and hour law.

As Senators have indicated today, many Senators agreed that a reasonable amount of money should be available to the Wage and Hour Administration for the enforcement of the law. However, as the Senate has heard today, only $500,000 was put in by the Senate committee instead of $1,000,000, which would have been necessary to have brought the total appropriation up to the amount recommended by the Bureau of the Budget.

Mr. President, I was one of the Senators from the South who supported the wage and hour law. Other Senators opposed that law. However, I think we are all agreed that if the law is to be on the statute books it is entitled to a reasonable and fair enforcement. Those who have tried to observe the law are being victimized by the "chiseler" who is not willing to try to observe it. Therefore a great injustice is being done by the Congress to the law-abiding citizen who has tried to observe the law of his country in the payment of a reasonable wage and in the observance of the reasonable hour standards laid down by the law. With 20,000 complaints in the files of the Wage and Hour Administration and a total force up until the 1940 appropriation was made available of only 104 inspectors for the whole country, and no trial lawyers, and with a total force at present of only 210 inspectors and 8 trial lawyers, every Senator knows that it is humanly impossible to give any decent enforcement to the terms of the law. Consequently I am sure Senators and Representatives are flooded with complaints. The Wage and Hour Administration is simply bogged down with inability to enforce the law. As a result respect for the law all over the country has broken down. The effect in the long run will be so to discredit the law that nobody will be its champion; and the courts will be filled with litigation when eventually the Government may stir itself from its inertia to begin the enforcement of the law.

I think the least we can do is to allow the amount recommended by the Bureau of the Budget, which was only 40 percent of the amount requested by the Administrator and his staff. In order to bring the matter before the Senate I believe the proper procedure would be to move to reconsider the vote by which the Senate Appropriations Committee amendments were adopted.

I give notice that if the motion to reconsider the vote prevails I shall move to make the appropriate changes in the figures to make possible an additional allowance of $500,000. In that way the sum recommended by the Bureau of the Budget and so much needed by the Administration would be made available.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. PEPPER. I yield. Mr. ADAMS. In view of the unintentional misinformation given to the Senator when the amendment was before us. I hope his request for reconsideration will be granted. I think it should be.

Mr. PEPPER. I thank the chairman of the subcommittee.

PROTECTION AGAINST UNLAWFUL USE OF INSIGNIA OF VETERANS' ORGANIZATIONS

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield for the consideration of a matter not germane to the subject matter he is discussing, and which I hope will not take him off the floor?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, some days ago the Senate passed Senate bill 2365, for the protection against unlawful use of the badge, medal, emblem, or other insignia of veterans' organizations incorporated by act of Congress, and providing penalties for the violation thereof. When that bill was passed by the Senate the House passed an almost identical bill, except for some amendments which were offered by the Senate Committee on the Judiciary. In some way the House bill was returned to the House.

We then asked for the return of the House bill, and it has now been returned and is in the possession of the clerk. I now ask that the House bill be laid before the Senate and be considered, so that we may offer amendments in keeping with the amendments which were incorporated in the

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a bill coming over from the House of Representatives

The bill (H. R. 5982) for the protection against unlawful use of the badge, medal, emblem, or other insignia of veterans' organizations incorporated by act of Congress, and providing penalties for the violation thereof, was read twice by its title.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, if it be in order, I wish to offer the amendments which have been suggested in the House bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator should first ask unanimous consent for the reconsideration of the vote by which Senate bill 2365 was passed.

Mr. McCARRAN. I ask unanimous consent for the reconsideration of the vote by which Senate bill 2365 was

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the vote is reconsidered.

Is there objection to the present consideration of House bill 5982?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 1, line 3, after the word "the", it is proposed to strike out "manufacturing, wearing, purchase, or sale, either separately or appended to, or to be appended to, or the reproduction on any article of merchandise manufactured or sold," and insert "manufacture or sale in interstate commerce", and in line 7, before the word "of", to insert "or the reproduction thereof for commercial purposes."

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada yield for a question?

Mr. McCARRAN. Certainly.

Mr. DANAHER. Does the amendment as proposed cause the House bill to be brought into conformity with the measure recommended by the Judiciary Committee?

Mr. McCARRAN. I will say to the able Senator from Connecticut that the amendment I have offered is the one adopted by the Judiciary Committee of the Senate. It is now being incorporated into the House bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the manufacture or sale in interstate commerce of the badge, medal, emblem, or other insignia or any colorable imitation thereof, or the reproduction thereof for commercial purposes, of any veterans' organization incorporated by act of Congress, or the printing, lithographing, engraving, or other like reproduction on any poster, circular, periodical, magazine, newspaper, or other publication, or the circulation or distribution of any such printed matter bearing a reproduction of such badge, medal, emblem, or other insignia, or any colorable imitation thereof, of any such veterans' organization, is prohibited except when authorized under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by such organization so incorporated. Any person who knowingly offends against any provision of this act shall on conviction be punished by a fine not exceeding $250 or by imprisonment not exceeding 6 months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Mr. McCARRAN. I ask that Senate bill 2365 be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, Senate bill 2365 is indefinitely postponed.

THIRD DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7462) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, in view of the statement made by the Senator from Colorado, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate reconsider the votes by which the following committee amendments were adopted:

The amendment inserting $7,750 in place of $15,500 on page 38, line 25.

The amendment inserting $113,500 in lieu of $227,000 on page 39, line 9.

The amendment inserting $381,250 in lieu of $762,500 on page 40, line 19.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the votes are reconsidered. Now the question before the Senate is on agreeing to the amendments of the committee which have just been stated.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I now move that on page 38, line 25, "$15,500" be stricken out, and in lieu thereof "$31.000" be inserted.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Utah will state it.

Mr. KING. Would it not be possible to add the various figures together, and submit the amendments at one time? I understand that the Senator is asking for half a million dollars more.

Mr. PEPPER. That is correct.

Mr. KING. And when the Senator proposes to do it in small doses, we do not know what the aggregate is.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the privilege of stating the amendment in this way:

That the sum of $500,000 be added to the sum allowed by the Appropriations Committee, and that the clerk make an appropriate distribution of that sum of money in line 25, page 38; line 9, page 39; and line 19, page 40.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. It is possible that the Senator explained the matter before I came into the Chamber a moment ago; but will the Senator explain what the difference is between his figures, the figures of the Senate Appropriations Committee, and the bill as sent over from the House.

Mr. PEPPER. Yes, Mr. President. I am sorry the Senator

Mr. PEPPER. Yes, Mr. President. I am sorry the Senator from Missouri was not in the Chamber when I discussed the matter before.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I am sorry, too; but I should like to know that before I vote on the Senator's amendments.

Mr. PEPPER. I will say to the Senator from Missouri that the Wage and Hour Administration submitted to the Budget Bureau a request for $4,600,000 of additional funds in this deficiency appropriation bill. The Budget Bureau, after examining the request, reduced the figure to $2,000,000, and the Budget Bureau request then came to the Congress asking for that amount. The House Committee on Appropriations cut out any sum whatever for this item; but the House itself, in the consideration of the bill, added $1,000,000; so the item came to the Senate carrying $1,000,000, or one-half of the Budget Bureau request. The Senate Appropriations Committee added $500,000 more, leaving an additional $500,000 requested by the Budget Bureau but not granted by the Senate Appropriations Committee. What I am now offering is an amendment to grant the additional $500,000 requested by the Budget Bureau and not allowed by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. In other words, this proposition is an increase of $1,000,000 over the House figures, and an increase of $500,000 over the figures reported from the Senate committee?

Mr. PEPPER. That is exactly correct.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. Have I unanimous consent to offer the amendment in the form in which I have stated it?

Mr. AUSTIN and Mr. DANAHER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Vermont desire to be recognized now?

Mr. AUSTIN. No; after the request has been stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair does not think he can state the request.

Mr. AUSTIN. That is the trouble with the Senator from Vermont; he does not understand the request.

Mr. PEPPER. Very well, Mr. President; a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it. Mr. PEPPER. In offering the amendment I suppose it will be necessary to take up the three items, because there are three items in the bill over which this money is distributed. Therefore, I cannot offer the amendment all in one item, because the bill is not drawn in that way. The $500,000 will have to be distributed over the following items: On page 38, the last figures in line 25; on page 39, the last figures in line 9; and on page 40, the only figures in dollars appearing in line 19. I can offer the amendment item by item, or I can offer it in the way in which I presented it a moment ago, to let the $500,000 increase which I propose be distributed by the clerk over those three items. I was merely trying to save the time of the Senate by offering the amendment in that way.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. HAYDEN. What are the figures that the Senator had on line 25, page 38? I have here a proposal to increase that amount to $31,000.

Mr. PEPPER. That is what the figure should be.

Mr. HAYDEN. Very well. What should the figure be in line 9, page 39?

Mr. PEPPER. It should be $454,000; and on page 40, in line 19, the figure should be $1,525,000.

Mr. HAYDEN. If the Senator will offer the three amendments and ask that they be voted on en bloc, we can have one vote.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I offer the three amendments as I have just identified them, and ask that they be voted upon en bloc.

Mr. AUSTIN. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont objects.

Mr. HAYDEN. Then let us vote on the first one.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I offer the first amendment separately. On page 38, line 25, I move to strike out "$15,500" and insert in lieu thereof "$31,000."

Mr. AUSTIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams Davis Sheppard Downey Andrews Lundeen Shipstead Smith Ashurst Austin McCarran McKellar George Stewart Bailey Bankhead Gerry Maloney Taft Gib Thomas, Okla. Barkley Guffey Miller Thomas, Utah Gurney Tobey Townsend Minton Murray Bridges Harrison Hatch Neely Truman Vandenberg Nye O'Mahoney Burke Hayden Herring Byrd Van Nuys Wagner Walsh Byrnes Pepper Pittman Capper Johnson, Calif. Chavez Clark, Idaho Clark, Mo. Connally Johnson, Colo. Radcliffe Wheeler White Reed Russell Schwartz King La Follette Danaher Lodge Schwellenbach

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair). Seventy-three Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. BYRNES and Mr. DANAHER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, if the Senator from Connecticut desires to make some remarks, I will yield the floor

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Con-

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for just a moment?

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PEPPER. I desire to state that I am not altogether responsible for the confusion which prevails in this matter. The way the Senate Committee on Appropriations acted on the matter the money is distributed among three items. That is the reason why I had to offer the amendment in the form of three items instead of one, but it is all for the purpose of enforcing the wage and hour law.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me? Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina,

Mr. BYRNES. There is not any doubt that there is a misunderstanding as to what took place in the committee. The Senate committee added $500,000 to be apportioned to the three items. The Budget estimate was $1,000,000.

Mr. PEPPER. Two million dollars.
Mr. BYRNES. That is going back to the original amount. I ask the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS], the chairman of the subcommittee, if he will not accept the amendment, which I understand increases the amount $500,000, to be apportioned to the three items, and let the matter go to conference.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Colorado will do that. That was my understanding.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I am in an embarrassing situation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DANAHER] has the floor.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I wish the Senator from Colorado would be kind enough to tell us for what purposes these particular funds would be used. We have heard how a million dollars was added by the House, and another half-million dollars by the Senate Committee on Appropriations, and there is a proposal pending for yet an additional halfmillion dollars. Will the Senator from Colorado please explain the purposes of the proposed additional half-million

Mr. ADAMS. Yes; as far as I understand them.

The statement which was made to us was that as we had imposed the various obligations of the wage and hour law, there were throughout the country many institutions which in good faith wished to observe the requirements of the law, and that there were other institutions which were seeking to evade the law. The result was that those who were evading the law were having a temporary advantage over those who, in good faith, were complying with the law. The wage and hour authorities came before us and said they needed the amount in order that there might be a genuine enforcement of the law, so as to prevent a violation of the law by certain groups to the disadvantage of those who were trying to live up to the law. They said it would involve, at least during the initiation of the law, a large number of inspectors and a considerable number of attorneys to prosecute cases of law violation. As you know, the members of the committee had no information about the matter other than as it came to them from the wage and hour authorities.

We know that they asked for $4,000,000, and the House committee gave them no increase. On the floor of the House they were given a million dollars. The Budget recommended $2,000,000. The House gave them half of that, and the Senate committee gave them half of the remaining amount, that is, a million and a half. I was embarrassed this morning because my recollection was faulty, but we had just come from a long, rather detailed committee hearing, and I was in error about the matter. I have been embarrassed by reason of that, because I do not like to give erroneous information about any matter. That is the situation as I see it.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Colorado, but when the Senate Committee on Appropriations recommended the additional half million dollars, was the Senator satisfied that a sufficient appropriation was being recommended for these purposes?

Mr. ADAMS. My recollection, as refreshed, is that the Senate committee voted against increasing the amount in the committee, and the Senator from Georgia then offered a motion to make it half a million dollars. So that the obvious inference is that the Senate committee thought a half million dollars was sufficient, and that a million dollars was too much. That was the conclusion of the committee.

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator. Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I trust that Senators will remain in the Chamber, because when the pending bill has been disposed of, I hope we may take up and dispose of the conference report on the social-security bill.

Mr. RUSSELL obtained the floor.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. The Senator from Georgia has very graciously yielded to me at this point, and I desire to be recognized just now, while the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] is acting as Presiding Officer of the Senate and the Senator from Utah [Mr. Thomas] is sitting here by my side, as he has been throughout the session of the Congress.

I am reminded that the Senator from Wisconsin took occasion just a few minutes ago to read certain matters into the RECORD. Following his example, I desire to read into the RECORD at this time an editorial from the Washington Daily News which has just been called to my attention and which relates to a matter upon which the Senate will presently vote. The editorial is entitled, "Funds for LA FOLLETTE," and reads:

FUNDS FOR LA FOLLETTE

The Senate Audit and Control Committee has finally recommended that the Senate grant $50,000 for continuing the work of the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee. We think the Senate should, and will, accept the recommendation.

The civil-liberties inquiry as conducted by Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, and his committee colleague, Senator Thomas, of Utah, has been a model of patient, painstaking, scholarly search for facts.

It has covered much ground and exposed many shocking abuses. But there is still a great deal to be done in showing how the Bill of Rights has been kicked around, especially by such antilabor groups as the self-called Associated Farmers.

The mere action of the Senate in voting to prolong the committee's life should serve to restrain many offenders against human rights by putting them on notice that if they go too far the La Follette committee's agents will be knocking at their doors.

I thank the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator from New Mexico has given to the Senator from Wisconsin a fine example of heaping coals of fire, after the Senator from Wisconsin in a way pilloried the Senator from New Mexico for his inconsistent vote. I have risen just to say one thing in reference to the item the Senator from Wisconsin put into the Record, that there were some of us who voted for the Senator's amendment when it came before the Senate on its merits, but I think the apparent conflict shows that the Senate does vote upon measures according to merit, and I think that was a genuine vote. I do not believe the Senator is justified in pilloring Senators for inconsistency because they believe that appropriation bills should be protected, in accordance with the rules, against the inclusion of general legislation in amendments. I do not think the Senator is justified in seeming to make it appear that Members of the Senate who voted against the suspension of the rule were therefore voting against the proposal which was embodied in his amendment. They were voting against placing it in this particular bill.

Mr. BYRNES. What the Senator means is that he is indebted to the Senator for having placed the vote in the

Mr. ADAMS. Yes.

Mr. BYRNES. We all are.

Mr. HATCH and Mr. LA FOLLETTE addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MINTON in the chair). Does the Senator from Georgia yield, and if so, to whom?

Mr. RUSSELL. I will yield first to the Senator from New Mexico, then I will yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I want the Senator from Wisconsin to understand that there was no intention on the part of the Senator from New Mexico to heap coals of fire upon the head of the Senator from Wisconsin. The heading of the editorial which I read struck me, and I wanted to place the editorial in the Record. I thought it was a well-deserved tribute to two fine Senators of the United States, and I was glad to put it into the Record.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator rield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The remarks which I made at the same time I placed the roll call on the Wheeler-La Follette amendment to the lending bill in the Record will show that I made no comment upon the matter. If Senators find themselves in an inconsistent position it is no responsibility of the Senator from Wisconsin. It is one which they can explain to their constituents according to the lights which dictated action to them when they cast votes in conflict.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the Members of the Senate can explain that matter to their constituents without the consent of the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, the point I want to make, if the Senator from Georgia will permit me, is that I made no statement as to whether or not Senators had voted inconsistently. I said that I thought that those who were interested in the amendment, and farmers who would be benefited by it, might find it difficult to understand why the amendment had carried 74 to 8 on a previous vote, and had not obtained a two-thirds majority later, and therefore I asked to have the previous roll call placed in the Record. I assume full responsibility for that, but I did not make any statement such as I understood the Senator from Colorado to impute to me.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. BURKE. The Senator from Wisconsin may disclaim any intention to put in an unfavorable light those Senators who voted for the Wheeler-La Follette amendment when it came before the Senate on its merits, and voted today against suspending the rule in connection with the pending bill, and opening up the whole matter for new debate. But, explain as he will, there can be only one inference drawn from it, and that is that he wanted the farmer constituents of those Senators to look with disfavor upon the Senators who cast those votes. I see no other inference to draw from it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, if the Senator from Georgia will yield, I will say, in response to the Senator from Nebraska, that the Senator from Wisconsin has always believed that the constituents of every Senator and every Representative were entitled to know how their Representative voted, and the Senator from Wisconsin placed the roll call in the Record so that the constituents of Senators could ascertain how it happened that this amendment carried 74 to 8 when it was offered to the lending bill, and did not secure a two-thirds majority when it was offered to the appropriation bill.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield—Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. I am very sorry that I provoked this discussion. It was not my intention at all. I am one of the Senators who have perhaps been placed in an inconsistent position by the roll call inserted in the Record by the Senator from Wisconsin. I voted for the amendment on the previous occasion. I voted against it today, that is, in a measure voted against it, by voting against the motion made by the Senator from Wisconsin.

I am perfectly willing to explain to my constituents the votes, and am perfectly willing that the roll call on this or any other vote which I may cast be inserted in the Record, or published in the newspapers at any time.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, if the Senator from Georgia will yield, the Senator from New Mexico has expressed my view, and does the Senator know of any other Senator on this side of the aisle who objects to the printing of the record? Certainly I do not. I am delighted that the Senator from Wisconsin placed the roll call in the RECORD. I have not heard anyone objecting.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. BURKE. I would have to say that I objected to the unanimous-consent request, not because I had any objection to having blazoned across the prairies of Nebraska how I voted on both of these matters, but because it seemed to me that the implication contained in the request was a very unfair one, very unusual coming from the Senator from Wisconsin. I did not like it, and I objected to the unanimous-consent request. The Senator then proceeded, as he had a perfect right to do, to read the matter into the RECORD. I would feel about the matter just the same as if, when we come to vote soon on a new appropriation for the Civil Liberties Committee, I were then to say, "I ask at this particular point to have inserted in the RECORD the solemn promise made by the senior Senator from Wisconsin that he would ask for no further funds for this investigation." I would not do that in that connection, because it would seem to me to carry an unfair implication.

That was the reason why I objected to the unanimous-consent request. Beyond that, I have no objection whatever. I think it is a very good thing that the record vote appears in the Record. I think that if the Senator from Wisconsin had gone a little further, and had explained at that point that the two votes came under totally different circumstances, matters which would not be easily understood by the ordinary citizen; that in one case the Senate was voting on the matter on its merits, and in the other case, which he insisted upon calling to their attention, that the vote came up in a totally different way, with other implications and many other things involved, there could have been no objection to it at all.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I wish to say that, so far as the statement which the Senator from Wisconsin made when the last appropriation was provided for the Senate committee under Resolution 266 is concerned. I personally placed that statement in the RECORD when the matter was under discussion here, and when it comes up again I intend to place it in the RECORD a second time, and each Senator can make whatever explanation he desires. I think that the constituents of Senators are entitled to their records, and if other Senators think otherwise, they are entitled to that privilege.

THIRD DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7462) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I desire to make a very brief statement on the pending amendment offered by the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER]. The subcommittee which has handled the bill, as every Senator knows, has been working under very great pressure. There were pending before the committee Budget estimates in excess of $250,000,-000, broken down into hundreds of items, and all of those were considered in connection with the House bill which appropriated only approximately $53,000,000.

When I came to the floor of the Senate today the Senator from Florida asked me as to what had been done with this specific item, and for the time being I could not recall it. It had slipped my mind. I did not think that the full amount had been allowed, but that the Senate committee had allowed some increase. Later I refreshed my recollection. The amendment was not agreed to by the Senate committee. I therefore moved that the amount be increased by one-half of the amount that was sought by the Senator from Utah. and the Senator from Florida and the officials of the Wage and Hour Division. I understand this morning on the floor a statement was made that the entire amount had been allowed.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. Does the Senator have any objection to the increase?

Mr. RUSSELL. I merely rose and secured recognition before the question of the consistency of Senators became involved in the discussion. I think it is always out of order to indulge in debate upon the question whether any Senator ever was or should be consistent on all measures. So I arose to join in the request that the matter be taken to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida [Mr. Pepper 1 to the committee amendment, on page 38, line 25.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Florida whether I am correct in my understanding that these three amendments can be regarded as a unit, and that their purpose is to restore the Budget estimate and give the Wage and Hour Division what it requested for the adequate and efficient enforcement of the law.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator is correct in his understanding. All this money is for the purpose of enforcement of the wage and hour law.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida to the committee amendment on page 38, line 25.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to make an inquiry of the Senator from Colorado. The President made a recommendation of $69,000 for the Securities and Exchange Commission in order to carry out the duties imposed upon it by the Trust Indenture Act, which became a law on the 21st day of July. I have here some information with reference to that matter. I understand the committee did not grant the full amount, but did grant a part of it. Will the Senator explain that situation?

Mr. ADAMS. The committee considered it. The problem was to make preparation for the date when the bill goes into effect. The Trust Indenture Act, of which the majority leader was the author, does not go into effect for some months.

Mr. BARKLEY. About February 1.

Mr. ADAMS. About February 1. And we were told by Mr. Jerome Frank of the Securities and Exchange Commission that certain studies should be made of trust indentures, and certain forms prepared, so they would be in position to operate when the law goes into effect. The Commission thought that with $25,000 they could obtain a sufficient amount of legal help, together with their regular staff, to do that. Part of the regular staff drew the bill, or at least were very active in connection with it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Did the committee take into consideration that there would probably have to be some personnel trained for that particular work between now and the 1st of February? In addition to the printing of forms, and things of that sort, there will be special qualifications required of those who are to enforce the trust-indenture law, which, as the Senator knows, is very complicated and difficult to understand.

Mr. ADAMS. We had a rather full statement from Mr. Jerome Frank, and we feel that the amount would be adequate when the Commission's regular staff is considered. The Securities and Exchange Commission has rather liberal appropriations, and has a large legal staff, and we believed it could accomplish the purpose. We had in mind, I will say to the Senator, that the House rejected the request entirely, and we thought we would be more apt to accomplish what was desired if we were reasonable in our appropriation.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have no purpose to change the figure now. The amendment has already been agreed to. But I hope that when this matter goes to conference the Senate conferees will endeavor to retain that amount, because I think it is necessary.

Mr. ADAMS. We will make every effort to do so.

Mr. BARKLEY. Whether it is a sufficient amount, I cannot say.

Mr. ADAMS. I think there is adequate cause to justify its retention.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is still before the Senate and open to further amendment.

Mr. MEAD. I offer an amendment which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed to insert at the end of the bill a section, as follows:

PUBLIC BUILDINGS ADMINISTRATION

CONSTRUCTION OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS, ACT AUGUST 25, 1937

Construction of public buildings outside the District of Columbia: The total amount authorized to be appropriated for the 3-year program for the acquisition of sites and construction of public buildings by the paragraph under the caption "Emergency construction of public buildings outside the District of Columbia." public buildings by the paragraph under the caption "Emergency construction of public buildings outside the District of Columbia," contained in the Third Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1937, approved August 25, 1937 (50 Stat. 772), and increased by the Federal Public Buildings Appropriation Act of 1938, approved June 21, 1938, is hereby further increased from $130,-000,000 to $180,000,000, and the period of said program is hereby extended to 5 years. All applicable provisions and authority contained in such authorizations shall be operative with respect to the enlarged authorization provided herein except that the Federal Works Administrator shall be substituted for the Secretary of the Treasury where mentioned therein, and that the list from which projects are to be selected by the Postmaster General and the Federal Works Administrator, acting jointly, shall be House Document No. 177, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, dated February 20, 1939: Provided, That the Federal Works Administrator and the Postmaster General may also select for prosecution under this program such projects not included in such document as in their judgment are economically sound and advantageous to the public service. Toward such increased program there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,000,000. The appropriations heretofore made under the authority of such acts, together with the appropriation contained herein, shall be consulted into a street fund and be available toward the consulted into a street fund and be available toward the consulted into a street fund and be available toward the consulted into a street fund and be available toward the consulted into a street fund and be available toward the consulted into a street fund and herein and the posture the consulted into a street fund and herein and the posture the consulted into a street fund and herein and the posture to a street fund and here gether with the appropriation contained herein, shall be con-solidated into a single fund and be available toward the consummation of the entire authorized program (52 Stat. 818; 53 Stat.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, this amendment, I am informed by the proper authorities, is in order on the bill and will not require a two-thirds vote.

The amendment extends from 3 to 5 years the period of time during which the public-building program will be in order. It increases from $130,000,000 to $180,000,000 the authorization for funds which may be made in the future by the appropriate committee for the carrying forward of this program. It now merely appropriates $1,000,000, so far as this bill is concerned, for this program. Early in the session, in keeping with established custom, the Post Office Department submitted the regular request to the Appropriations Committee of the House, and for the first time in a number of years the deficiency bill came over to the Senate without carrying within the bill provision for the carrying on of this program.

The program is a popular one. It is an economical program. It is a program that has enhanced the efficiency of the Postal Service. It has given ample room and facility all over the United States, not only for the post-office service but for all the other services that are housed in Federal buildings.

Some few years ago when the program was initiated there were contained in the entire program some 760 projects, located in cities where the postal receipts were in excess of $10,000 per annum.

So far 250 of those public-building projects are either finished or are on the way to completion. In 460 cases the plans and specifications have been completed, and arrangements for the construction of the buildings consummated. Only 50 of the buildings are awaiting the selection of sites.

It is a popular program, I say, because it embraces every congressional district in the United States, and because it has resulted in an annual saving in rental of upward of $3,000,000 in the conduct of the postal service. It has resulted in better facilities for this important agency of Government. Never once in all the history of this program has there been a word of criticism of it. In no single instance that I recall have the men in charge of the prosecution of the program been criticized. On the other hand, every Member of the Senate will agree with me when I say that the men who had the handling of the program discharged their duty in an exemplary manner, so as to win the acclaim of the country and the confidence of the Congress.

I am sure that everyone within range of my voice knows the Honorable Smith W. Purdum, the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, who with Admiral Peoples and Mr. Reynolds of the Procurement Division have had the duty and the authority and the responsibility to carry forward this program.

I know that every Senator will agree that whenever a new building was constructed in his district or in his State, it met with popular acclaim. A spirit of pride could be found in the hearts of the people when such a building was completed and the American flag was raised over it. It was a project which I know won for the Representative and the Senator, who had much to do with making the program and the project a possibility, the approval of the people.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MEAD. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I wish to express my very cordial approval of all the distinguished Senator from New York has said concerning this program and concerning the splendid manner in which it has been conducted by the Post Office Department. It has done a wonderful job. I think it has not only resulted in better housing of the great postal activities of the Government, but it has resulted in a more economical administration of the post-office affairs especially.

I may say to the Senator that I presented the matter to the committee this morning, and my recollection is that it was defeated by a tie vote. The vote in the committee was very close, if it was not a tie vote.

Notwithstanding the action of the committee, inasmuch as I am a member of the committee and also chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, I think it is proper for me to say that I intend to vote for the Senator's amendment because I believe he has described a wonderful program, and I believe it is to the best interests of the people of America that the program be completed. I am thoroughly in sympathy with the amendment and expect to vote for it.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, I appreciate the splendid contribution made by the able Senator from Tennessee. I know that he is thoroughly familiar with the program, because as chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads he is very close to it.

He knows the good work that is being accomplished. I am willing to rest my case on the arguments which have been advanced in favor of the amendment by the Senator from Tennessee; and I trust that the capable chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. Adams] and all the other members of the committee who handled this matter will permit the amendment to go to conference.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, this matter was before the committee, and the committee decided it was not an appropriate time to make an increase in prospective building appropriations of $50,000,000. We increased the amount of the deficiency bill over the amount which came from the House. from $53,000,000 to $130,000,000; and it seemed to a decided majority of the committee that the proposal ought not to be accepted.

I wish to say something in reply to one of the first comments made by the Senator from New York, to the effect, in substance, that the amendment is not subject to a point of order. As I read the amendment it is an amendment of a statute; and I should like to inquire of the Chair as to whether or not it is legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair). The present occupant of the Chair would prefer not to rule on a hypothetical question.

Mr. ADAMS. This is not a hypothetical question. A definite amendment is submitted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the Chair to understand that the Senator is making a point of order against it?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes. I suggest the point of order. I was really asking for the advice of the more skilled presiding officer, who has the advice of the Parliamentarian available to him.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, a point of order. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it. Mr. HAYDEN. I understand that under the rules of the Senate a proposal must either be authorized by law or submitted in a Budget estimate. I am sure the chairman of the subcommittee will agree with me that this item is covered by a Budget estimate.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am quite sure it is.

Mr. MEAD. I have a copy of the Budget estimate before me if the Chair desires to see it.

Mr. ADAMS. I am inquiring on the phase of legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the opinion of the present occupant of the Chair that the amendment as now drawn contains legislation, because it amends existing law. Even a Budget estimate would not justify the amendment of existing law. In the opinion of the present occupant of the Chair the amendment could be remedied by eliminating from it the substantive legislation which it contains.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. MEAD. If I understand the suggestion proffered by the Chair, the removal of reference to the statutes which have heretofore carried the authorization would make the amendment in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the opinion of the present occupant of the chair, who has read the amendment only hastily, there is legislation contained in it. For example:

All applicable provisions and authority contained in such authorization shall be operative with respect to the enlarged authorization provided herein, except that the Federal Works Administrator shall be substituted for the Secretary of the Treasury where

Obviously that is an amendment of existing law, and, therefore, in the opinion of the present occupant of the chair, would make the amendment subject to a point of order in case the point were made that it is legislation on an appropriation bill.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I desire to make the point of order that there is legislation in the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair feels constrained to sustain the point of order.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. MEAD. In view of the fact that there is a Budget estimate at the desk, I am wondering if that has any bearing upon decisions of this character?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the opinion of the present occupant of the chair, under rule XVI, if a Budget estimate is submitted, obviously there must be legal authorization for it. The present occupant of the chair is of the opinion that anyone reading the amendment would find general legislation

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, under the circumstances I ask for a vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator appeal from the decision of the Chair?

Mr. MEAD. No; but as I understand-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] made a point of order that the amendment contained general legislation. The Chair sustained the point of order. Two courses are open to the Senator from New York. One is to appeal from the decision of the Chair. The other is to revise his amendment so as to eliminate the legislative provisions therein and conform to the Budget recommendation.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, I shall not appeal from the decision of the Chair. What I had in mind was to ask for a vote to make the amendment in order; but I shall take the second suggestion of the Chair, and attempt to revise the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator will offer an amendment in conformity with the Budget estimate, obviously it will not be subject to a point of order.

Mr. MEAD. I shall withdraw the amendment temporarily.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 53, line 25, after the word "thereto" and the period, it is proposed to insert a new section under the head of "Finance Department", to read as follows:

FINANCE DEPARTMENT

Pay of the Army, 1939: Not to exceed $60,000 of the unexpended balance of the appropriation under this head in the Military Appropriation Act, 1939, is hereby made available until June 30, 1940, for the construction and installation of a sewage treatment plant on Fort Niagara Military Reservation, N. Y., as authorized by the act of June 20, 1939 (Public, No. 136, 76th Cong.).

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, this amendment is supported by a Budget message. It carries out existing law and utilizes the fund now in the possession of the War Department.

The reason for the need of the measure at this time is that if the Government should erect a sewage-disposal plant, at present the adjoining city of Youngstown would make use of the plant and thereby furnish the Government a substantial source of revenue. If the Government should not build it now, the city of Youngstown must go ahead and build its own plant, and the War Department must later of necessity erect its own plant, and the Government would lose the opportunity for revenue. I ask the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Adams] if he will not accept the amendment and let it go to conference.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I cannot do so. The matter was submitted to the committee, and the committee rejected the amendment. The committee did not feel that the Government should undertake this particular enterprise, which is apparently a combination enterprise between the Federal Government and the city. While there might be some saving involved, the amendment contemplates a partnership between the Government and the city, the War Department building a sewage-disposal plant adequate not only for itself but for the city. We were not satisfied that it was the wise thing to do.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I will say that there is no partnership beyond the erection by the city of a pipe line across the reservation to the plant.

Mr. ADAMS. And a rental.

Mr. SHEPPARD. The same machinery would supply the Government's necessities as well as those of the city. It is really a measure in the immediate interest of the Government.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator said there would have to be a contract to insure the income.

Mr. SHEPPARD. No. The law now in existence authorizes this arrangement. The amendment would merely carry out existing law.

Mr. ADAMS. We doubted the wisdom of the project.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I trust the Senate will adopt the amendment. It means a substantial saving.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas [Mr. Sheppard].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I have on the desk at this time notice which was properly given of a motion to suspend the rules so as to permit the addition to the bill of an amendment which would cure a very grave injustice which was done in the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939, namely, to forbid any theater project from being a part of the Work Projects Administration program.

I shall not go into that matter extensively, Mr. President, except to call the attention of the Senate to a statement to which I referred when the matter was last being considered. The statement was made by Lieutenant McGilicuddy, of the Juvenile Aid Bureau of the Crime Prevention Bureau of the New York City police department. In that splendid statement this man, who is interested in the youth of the city of New York and of America, pointed out the very great contribution which the Federal theater project was making in the edification and instruction of the youth of that great city. He deplored any eventuality which might deprive the youth of this country of that very effective and advantageous instrumentality.

In addition, I have two or three statements from eminent school authorities of the country to the same effect. One authority, Mary P. Eaton, of the English department of Wadleigh High School, states as follows:

Our students counted it a real privilege to see Macbeth at an admission price which was possible for them, and they were genuinely enthusiastic about the entire performance. * * * We were gratified over the appreciation which was shown by students of all ability levels, from the ablest and brightest down to those whose interest in a great classic was scarcely to be expected. * * * I am happy to write of similar satisfaction with regard to the recent performance of She Stoops to Conquer.

Another high-school department sends in the following testimony:

The performances that the Federal theater has given in this school have not only been much enjoyed by the pupils, but * * * have added greatly to their appreciation of the drama. It has been a remarkable opportunity for them to see such good plays so adequately produced at such a low rate.

That statement was from the English department of a girls' commercial high school.

I also have before me a very strong testimonial in behalf of the virtue of the theater project by Dr. James S. Green, of the National Hospital for Speech Disorders, of 126 East Thirtieth Street, New York City, in which the doctor points out the great aid which was given by the Federal theater project to the work which his institution was carrying on. He, too, expressed the most earnest hope that nothing should ever occur to impair the effective instrumentality of the theater project.

I happen also to have a statement of Colonel Harrington, the Work Projects Administrator, stating that 2,500 persons who had been employed upon the Federal theater project had given such an excellent example of their ability that they were absorbed in private enterprise. So that these people had not only been cared for when they had no chance to work otherwise in their chosen profession, but they had been rehabilitated, and through the Federal theater they found the avenue to reenter the stage, which was their life vocation, in a creditable private way.

I have a statement which indicates that the governments of five European countries sent representatives to this country to study the Federal theater project. Brazil, after a thorough study of the Federal theater project, created its own national theater and used the Federal theater project as a model. Can you imagine the amazement with which these visitors received the news that the present Congress, in the face of the Federal theater project's record of achievement, voted to wipe it cut completely?

In the past 3 years two small units of the Federal theater traveled 50,000 miles through the most remote sections of one of the States of this country, giving performances to 250,000 children and adults who never before had had an opportunity to experience the thrill of the theater. These loyal American theater workers traveled in trucks on back country roads tirelessly and loyally to bring to the lives of these people a few moments of the theater's beauty and romance, and they traveled without any allowance either for mileage or for expenses. The recognition, Mr. President, which the American Congress has given to that kind of sacrificial devotion to public duty has been to castigate them, of all people who are engaged in artistic pursuits, as not being deserving of the consideration of the Federal Government.

A program of summer activities of the W. P. A. Federal theater was announced before the enactment of the prohibition against its existence by the Congress, in which were listed for performance some of the most eminent dramatic pieces of all the literature of the world, such as the performance which has been given down in North Carolina, The Lost Colony; such as Sand in Your Shoes, a dramatization of Florida's history from the landing of De Soto; and then A Drama Festival, in conjunction with the University of Chicago summer session, presenting two ballets, City Legend and Camp Meetin'; a Shakespeare comedy, As You Like It; and a revival of The Swing Mikado in the locality where it made its first hit.

It might be interesting to observe statements from some of the critics relative to the excellence of the Federal theater program.

John Gassner, Forum drama critic, had this to say:

There is no question but that the Federal theater has represented the greatest advance in the American theater since the early days of the Provincetown Theater and the Theater Guild. By making a low-priced theater available to the American people it has galvanized theatrical activities throughout the country. By providing an outil to the plenitude of talent in our midst it has rendered a distinct service to the many artists who would otherwise have knocked in vain at the gates of the commercial stage. By producing plays of distinction and significance it has counteracted the poisonous trash which goes under the name of entertainment.

Another statement by Alfred Harding, editor of Equity Magazine:

For two and a half years we have been witnessing the progress of an experiment in the theater unlike anything we have ever tried before—the Federal theater project of the Works Progress Administration.

We have watched what it has done for the people employed upon it; have seen it put new life and hope and heart into them; have seen it afford new scope to creative faculties which we believe are too precious to be dissipated in the general turmoil of a protracted depression.

And we have also watched its effect upon the lives of a great many other people who had never previously known the theater, who, in the ordinary course of events, would never have known it, who are too poor to go to the commercial theater, or even to go to the neighborhood picture theater, to own a radio, or buy books and magazines and papers. That it should have given birth to the one real innovation of the stage in years, namely, the living newspaper, a form packed with valuable material that should be made available to every self-respecting citizen, and with native American humor that has hitherto served, for the most part, only the most menial uses in cheap comedies.

Again, Frank Gillmore, international president, Associated Actors and Artists of America, says:

The Federal theater project has meant a great deal to the profession of acting. It has enabled the players to bridge over many years of depression, and has given them—which is far more important—the opportunity to practice their art and to keep it at its highest point, so that when they return to the commercial theater they will in many cases be far more skillful than they were before.

I desire to read two or three newspaper comments. This is from the Oregonian, Portland, Oreg.:

As W. P. A. activities go, these [art projects] have been among the best. They merely happen to be articulate, to come under the public eye and ear. And so they have accumulated enemies who have now arranged for vengeance. The committee should have shown a little backbone. The members know well enough that the charges of radicalism are in general poppycock.

A statement from the mayor of Cleveland, Ohio:

It would be a great loss to the children of Cleveland if this project were not continued.

Another statement from the Buffalo Evening News, of Buffalo, N. Y.:

For the past several years the Buffalo division of the Federal theater has faithfully served the Americanism program of the Erie County American Legion: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Eric County Committee of the American Legion in convention assembled earnestly petitions its congressional representatives, requesting them to favor legislation relative to the continuance of this splendid Americanism project.

Mr. President, that was a resolution by the American Legion Post, of Buffalo, N. Y. Those who castigate the Federal theater program as having been an agency infected with communistic tendencies have castigated the loyal, patriotic Americans of this country who patronized and supported with their money and their time and effort the theater program as it has been conducted all over this great country.

Mr. President, what have we done in recognition of the virtue of this performance? We have forbidden the W. P. A. to make any contribution whatever to the Federal theater program. We have not forbidden the musicians to get the benefit of the program. We have not forbidden the artists to get some benefit from it. We have not forbidden other segments of the cultural arts to have a chance to get a job under the W. P. A. when they did not have one otherwise, when a project was properly sponsored by local authority.

Under the law as it existed prior to the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939, the W. P. A. could sponsor a project wholly upon its own initiative without any contribution from the local government. Under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939 this can no longer be done. Art projects have to be sponsored by political subdivisions and public agencies, just as building and construction projects have to be sponsored. They are in no different category with respect to the requirements of sponsorship from all projects which are available for W. P. A. aid.

Mr. President, if that is the rule, if that is the law of the matter, is it fair to say to the theater project, "You are the only one of the arts which cannot be sponsored by local authority, and cannot be the recipient of W. P. A. aid"?

I know that Senators know from numerous experiences. which have come to their attention in the most eloquent way that there has never been a distress that afflicted the public, there has never been a great catastrophe that has afflicted the people, but that the artists upon the stage of America have come forward and offered their services in benefit performances more generously, I believe, than any other class of the people, in an effort to render aid to those who were in need. I know it is not the sentiment of the American people that the 7,000 artists who were upon this program should be considered so unworthy that when they cannot get jobs otherwise they may not appeal to the W. P. A., and, if their project is properly sponsored by a political subdivision, as all other projects must be, then be the recipients of some help from the funds made available to the Works Progress Administration to give the jobless of America a chance to work like honorable, self-respecting American citizens.

Therefore, Mr. President, all we have to do to remove that injustice is to strike out subdivision (a) of section 15 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939. The amendment does not affect any other part of the bill. No other subject could be related to it, I think, in such a way as to be the subject of an amendment at this time to this bill. So all we have to vote on, if the motion to suspend the rule is granted, is whether or not we want to remove the prohibition that is now in the law from the theatrical people of America, and put them upon an equality with the other artists of the United States who do not have private jobs and who apply to the W. P. A. for relief.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixty-two Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, we have before us another motion to suspend the rules. If the rules are suspended, the same opportunity will be afforded which the Senate has shown itself unwilling to have extended heretofore. The theater project is one with which some of us had sympathy. It was eliminated as a result of the attitude of the House of Representatives, and, following the conference, the Senate receded.

I think it very unwise to set ourselves up as a court of review to endeavor to reverse the decisions made at previous times, regardless of whether we were right or wrong, as a practical matter. I have had many dealings with conference committees of the other body, and I have never seen a conference committee so set, so determined, so unanimous, as the House conferees were in their opposition to the theater project. I think we would be utterly helpless, and it would simply be a means of providing a reason for staying in Washington some time if we put this amendment in the bill.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, what the Senator from Colorado has referred to is a practical matter. If there was one thing in the conference on the relief bill on which the House insisted it was the elimination of the theater project. and regardless of the merits of the proposal, if the Senate wants to be here a long time, it should adopt this amend-

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, is it not a fact that the question in the conference was somewhat different from the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida? As I understand the amendment, he merely asks that the theater projects which may be undertaken by the W. P. A. shall be subject to all the conditions to which every other project which may be undertaken is subject, namely, that it must be sponsored locally, and there must be a 25 percent contribution by the locality before it can be undertaken.

The amendment which the conferees rejected provided for a certain sum to be used for purely Federal projects, and that the theaters might be operated without the requirement of 25 percent contribution by the localities. Mr. HAYDEN. The Senator is mistaken. It was the firm determination of the House utterly, completely to eliminate the theater projects under any and all conditions. Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator from Arizona vield?

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield to the Senator. Mr. BYRNES. I should like to say that when the unemployment committee made a recommendation with reference to this matter, we recommended the proposal to which the Senator from New York now refers, that the theater project and all other art projects should be put on the basis of all the projects of W. P. A. requiring the contribution of a sponsor. The Senate adopted the proposal when we originally acted upon the W. P. A. bill.

When we went to conference I spent about 3 hours trying to sustain the Senate's position, in which I believed, and in which the Senator from New York believed. I know of no more hopeless fight, because the House of Representatives, through its conferees were determined to sacrifice everything else in the bill rather than agree to this project.

The next morning I went over to the House of Representatives when it was considering the conference report. and the chairman of the subcommittee of the House conferees, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Woodrum], presented to the House the agreement, and when he referred to the theater project he received more applause than he received at any other point in his statement when he assured them that he had succeeded in destroying it.

Their position is that theater buildings in some of the cities have been rented and have been used for rehearsals, that the owners of some theaters have been bailed out at great expense to the taxpayers, and that there is no good reason for continuing the project. Their position was that they feared, that notwithstanding the language of the Senate amendment, which I approved, ways would be found by the United States Government to put up the sponsor's contributions, because the sponsor's contribution was not required in cash, it could be put up in services and materials, They believed that the Department would find some way of getting around the law. We made as good a fight as we ever did for any measure and could not succeed, and I have no hope that we could succeed again.

Mr. McKELLAR. We had no chance in the world.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will please be in The Senator from Arizona has the floor.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, in spite of the impatience, I am going to ask the Senator from Arizona to yield for just one further question.

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. Irrespective of the attitude of the House toward the theater project generally, am I correct in stating that the present proposal of the Senator from Florida is not the amendment which was considered by the conference when it met? It so happened that I offered the amendment to continue the Theater Project by providing three-fourths of 1 percent out of the total appropriation to be used for Federal projects, thus giving the W. P. A. an opportunity to continue in a very limited way the theater project without any requirement of sponsorship or local contribution.

Mr. HAYDEN. The Senator is correct as to what was taken to conference. But this identical proposal was argued by the hour in conference. The Senate conferees urged that the project be treated the same as any other project, but we found the House conferees practically adamant, and it was impossible to get anywhere. I think it is due to the Senate to say that it would mean long delay in the final enactment of the bill if this amendment were adopted.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair desires to make a statement. There is nothing before the Senate at the moment upon which to vote, therefore the Chair cannot respond to the cries of "Vote."

Mr. NEELY. Then I demand the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is that the bill is open to amendment.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I made a motion, I thought, to suspend the rule so as to permit the offering of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida made the statement, if the Chair understood him, that he had such a motion, but he did not make it. Does the Senator from Florida desire to make the motion?

Mr. PEPPER. I move to suspend the rule, in accordance with the notice which is on the desk, so as to permit the offering of the amendment which is included in the notice, namely, to strike out subdivision (a) of section 25 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Florida [Mr. Pepper] to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI.

Mr. PEPPER and other Senators demanded the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. I am informed that if present he would vote as I shall vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. STEWART (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. Holman]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATH-ERS] and will vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the following general pairs: The Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNary] with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON];

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY] with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN];

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR] with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCarran]:

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Tobey] would vote "nay" if present. He is paired with the Senator from Michigan [Mr. Brown] and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Maloney], who if present would vote "yea."

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. Brown] and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Maloney] are necessarily detained. I am advised that if present and voting, they would vote "yea." The result was announced—yeas 18, nays 42, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Two-thirds of the Senators present not voting to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI, the motion of the Senator from Florida is rejected.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the proper place in the bill it is proposed to insert the following:

CONSTRUCTION OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS OUTSIDE THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

For further carrying out the program for the acquisition of sites and construction of public buildings authorized by the paragraph under the caption Emergency Construction of Public Buildings Outside the District of Columbia, contained in the Third Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1937, approved August 25, 1937 (50 Stat. 772), and increased by the Federal Public Buildings Appropriation Act of 1938, approved June 21, 1938, $1,000,000.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, the amendment which has just been read by the Clerk does not increase the authorization for the construction of additional public buildings, nor does it extend the limit of time for the construction of these public buildings. It merely adds $1,000,000 to the funds already appropriated for the construction of public buildings already authorized.

I am informed that the Congress has authorized $70,000,-000 on one occasion and $60,000,000 on another occasion, or a total of $130,000,000, but that the Congress has appropriated only $89,000,000 for that building program. This amendment therefore merely adds $1,000,000 to that already appropriated, and for which there is already ample authorization. Therefore, Mr. President, I trust that the chairman of the subcommittee and the members of the committee will permit this matter to go to conference.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MEAD. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. In addition to the elimination of the legislative matter in the Senator's former amendment, what is the difference between this amendment and the one he introduced a while ago?

Mr. MEAD. The amendment I offered a while ago increased the authorization for public buildings from $130,-000,000 to $180,000,000, and it extended the period of time for the construction of these buildings from 3 years to 5 years, and it substituted the Federal Works Administrator and the Postmaster General for the Secretary of the Treasury and the Postmaster General, which is existing law.

Mr. BARKLEY. I understand what was in that amendment. Now, this amendment, I understand, increases the appropriation for public buildings by how much?

Mr. MEAD. One million dollars. It merely appropriates $1,000,000 for the continuation of this program already authorized.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MEAD. I yield. Mr. BURKE. This amendment increases the appropriation by $1,000,000?

Mr. MEAD. No; it adds $1,000,000 to appropriations heretofore made prior to this session of Congress.

Mr. BURKE. Will the Senator take us into his confidence and tell us why it is important that at this time we add $1,000,000 to that amount?

Mr. MEAD. If the Senator assumes that that is taking him into my confidence, I shall be very glad to give him what information I have on the subject for what good it may develop.

The Congress of the United States authorized the Public Buildings Commission to construct public buildings under certain conditions. They have been carrying on that work, which necessitates the acquirement of sites, the issuance of bids, the drafting of specifications, the awarding of contracts, and the construction of these buildings. The Commission will require about $1,000,000 in order to carry forward their program until the next Congress assembles. It has been the practice of the Congress-a practice for which the Buildings Commission is not responsible—to have this item carried in the last deficiency bill, and in conformity with the precedents and the existing custom the Buildings Commission submitted its report and made its request to the Appropriations Committee in the House as early as February of this year. The committee, in keeping with custom, put off the consideration of that request until the deficiency bill was before it for consideration, and then decided to put it off until some later date.

This money is needed. It is needed for a program which the Congress has already authorized, and it is being presented for consideration in connection with the appropriation bill that has always been the bill to carry it.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MEAD. I yield. Mr. BURKE. The Senator's explanation has completely satisfied my inquiry, and I am heartily in favor of his proposal and think it ought to be adopted.

Mr. MEAD. The Senator from New York takes great pride in making a convert to a worthy cause.

Mr. RUSSELL. The amendment merely provides continuity of plans for the post-office building program.

Mr. MEAD. Yes.

Mr. RUSSELL. And the item has the advantage of the Budget estimate which was submitted by the President and the Bureau of the Budget to the Congress for its approval.

Mr. MEAD. That is true. I appreciate the contribution of the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. BYRNES. The Budget estimate was for an increased authorization of $50,000,000 and provision for an appropriation for $1,000,000. Where is that $1,000,000 to be spent?

Mr. MEAD. For a continuation of the program already authorized by Congress, for which there has been only $89,-000,000 appropriated, but for which there has been $140,000,-000 authorized. In view of the fact that we do not specifically appropriate money as the Budget requests directly for an expansion of this program, it will be used for the program already authorized by the Congress. It cannot be used for any other purpose.

Mr. BYRNES. Has the Senator any information as to why this $1,000,000 is asked for when $50,000,000 is not to be appropriated?

Mr. MEAD. The $1,000,000 is necessary for a continuation of the program already authorized by Congress, which, when completed, will entail an appropriation of $130,000,000, there being only $89,000,000 of that appropriated so far, but as the program proceeds to its fulfillment there will be other appropriations called for. Only $1,000,000 is necessary to carry out the program until the next session of Congress assembles.

Mr. TAFT. I read from the House report, which refers to the $50,000,000 increased authorization as follows:

Joined with the proposal is an estimate of $1,000,000 for defraying preliminary expenses.

Incident to the proposed expansion.

Does the Senator propose now to use this $1,000,000 for some other purpose than the purpose provided in his original amendment?

Mr. MEAD. No; the Senator does not. The language of the amendment and of the existing law clarifies that question and makes the added $1,000,000 applicable only to that portion of the program already authorized by the Congress. Of course, they could not use a dollar of the $1,000,000 contained in my amendment for a program not yet authorized. They could use it only for that portion of the program already authorized by the Congress.

Mr. TAFT. However, they did not ask for anything to carry out the program. There was no such request. As I understand, the Budget estimate is for $1,000,000 for the new program.

Mr. MEAD. Yes; but the Senator will readily realize that the program already authorized, entailing a cost eventually of $130,000,000, for which there has been appropriated only $89,000,000, will of necessity, as it is being carried out, require further appropriations. This appropriation would be used until the next session of Congress in prosecuting the program now under way.

Mr. TAFT. But there is no evidence in the hearings that any money is needed to carry out the existing program until next July. They have sufficient money, as I understand, to run the present set-up until next July.

Mr. MEAD. I will say to the Senator that in conference with one of the representatives of the Building Commission I am told that $1,000,000 will be adequate to carry them until the next session of Congress. The hearings from which the Senator is reading are the hearings in which the Building Commission appeared before the House committee and recommended that the House committee increase and expand the program. I tried to do that, but the amendment was ruled out of order, so I am merely suggesting the appropriation of $1,000,000 for the continuance of the present program until the next session of Congress, when the whole matter will be referred to the proper legislative committee; and after the legislative committee acts we shall know—

Mr. TAFT. But the Building Commission is not asking for $1,000,000 to carry on the present program. It has an existing force. It is prepared to carry on the present program. The $1,000,000 was asked for only in connection with an expansion, which the Senator has now abandoned. So I do not see why we should appropriate $1,000,000.

Mr. MEAD. I will repeat that I am told by a representative of the Building Commission that it needs $1,000,000 to carry on the existing program until the next session of Congress.

Mr. TAFT. I can only say that they did not so testify before the House committee.

Mr. MEAD. I will say that they were testifying before the House committee on a different subject.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MEAD. I shall be glad to yield.

Mr. MILLER. Suppose the Congress should not make any additional appropriation for the construction of any more buildings under the authorized program. Would the $1,000,000 be needed?

Mr. MEAD. Oh, yes. Not only would the $1,000,000 be needed, but $40,000,000 would be needed before it was completed.

Mr. MILLER. Suppose the Congress should not make any further appropriations under the authorized program—in other words, should not authorize the construction of any new buildings under the authorized program. Would the $1,000,000 then be needed?

Mr. MEAD. The $1,000,000 would be needed for the completion of the projects under way.

Mr. MILLER. The projects now under way?

Mr. MEAD. And for the acquirement of sites for which plans have been drawn.

Mr. MILLER. And for which money has been appropriated?

Mr. MEAD. No; the money has not been appropriated.

Mr. MILLER. That is the point I am making.

Mr. MEAD. We are making the appropriation, but the authorization has already been made.

Mr. MILLER. I know the authorization has been made; but the point I was getting at was this: Unless the Congress should appropriate money to erect the buildings, the $1,000,000 would not be needed. Assuming that the Congress makes future appropriations to carry out the authorized program, then the $1,000,000 will be needed. That is correct, is it not?

Mr. MEAD. That is correct. However, unless we make appropriations there are buildings which might be considered to be under way which would not be completed.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York [Mr. Meap].

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate and open to further amendment.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I offer an amendment to increase the appropriations by $2,500,000 so as to provide employment in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and also to do very necessary work on Diesel engines in connection with the modernization of three submarines.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from New York will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the proper place in the bill it is proposed to insert the following:

ALTERATION TO NAVAL VESSELS

The Naval Appropriation Act, 1940, Public, No. 90, Seventy-sixth Congress, is amended by inserting, on page 23 thereof, line 5, after "(52 Stat. 688)", the following:

"And the U. S. S. Argonaut, Narwhal, and Nautilus authorized by the act entitled, 'An act to authorize alterations and repairs to certain naval vessels, and for other purposes,' approved April 20, 1939, Public, No. 37, Seventy-sixth Congress"; and by substituting for "$4,000,000" in the fifth line "$6,500,000."

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I hope the committee will accept the amendment. I think it is a very desirable increase in the appropriations.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the Senator from New York has discussed this matter with me on several occasions within the past day or two. I wish the committee could see its way clear to agree to the proposal, as it would like to agree to many proposals. However, Mr. President, the amendment is legislation; it is a request for which there is no Budget estimate; and I feel constrained to make a point of order against the amendment.

The Navy Department has not presented to the committee any request for this appropriation. Therefore, I do not know the merits of it from the standpoint of the Department.

I make the point of order against the amendment; first, on the ground that it is legislation; and, second, on the ground that there is no Budget estimate for it.

Mr. WAGNER. There is no Budget estimate. I had hoped I might persuade the committee to accept the increased appropriation, because I am sure the Navy Department favors the appropriation, and the work is very necessary work, and will eventually have to be done. I think the appropriation at this time would be particularly desirable in view of the unemployment situation in that section of the country. In the first place, it would absorb some of the unemployed, and would accomplish a modernization work which eventually will have to be done anyway.

I shall have to accept the decision of the Chair as to whether or not the amendment is legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair feels constrained to rule that it is legislation. It amends the existing law. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. WAGNER. I shall have to accept the ruling of the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate and open to further amendment.

If there be no further amendment, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass?

The bill (H. R. 7462) was passed.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist on its amendments, request a conference with the House of Representatives thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. Adams, Mr. McKellar, Mr. Hayden, Mr. Byrnes, Mr. Russell, Mr. Hale, Mr. Nye, and Mr. Townsend conferees on the part of the Senate.

STUDY AND DETERMINATION OF A NATIONAL MONETARY AND BANKING POLICY

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the unfinished business is Calendar No. 1165, Senate Resolution 125.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the resolution (S. Res. 125), providing for a study and determination of a national monetary and banking policy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution, as amended.

The resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

INVESTIGATION OF VIOLATIONS OF RIGHT OF FREE SPEECH. ETC. INCREASING LIMIT OF EXPENDITURES

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 1164, Senate Resolution 126.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be stated by title for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. A resolution (S. Res. 126) increasing the limit of expenditures for the investigation of violations of the right of free speech and assembly and interference with the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively, reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, with an amendment.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President—

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Senator from Washington [Mr. Schwellenbach] is the author of the resolution, and I yield to him.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I wish to say first, before the motion to proceed to the consideration of the resolution is voted upon, that so far as I am concerned, when we come to the consideration of the resolution itself I shall have no objection to a motion to amend it by striking from it all the "whereases" which precede the resolution proper.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. It is my intention, Mr. President, to move the elimination from the resolution of the various recitals, beginning with the first "whereas" and continuing down to the words "Therefore be it resolved."

I move that the "whereases" be eliminated from the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. O'MAHONEY in the chair). The question is on the motion of the Senator from Kentucky to proceed to the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, I am willing that that motion be first agreed to. Then I shall make my motion.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution, which had been reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate with an amendment, on page 2, line 10, after the word "by", to strike out "$100,000" and insert "$50,000", so as to make the resolution read:

Whereas a subcommittee of the Committee on Education and Labor, acting pursuant to Senate Resolution 266, authorizing an investigation of violations of the rights of free speech and assembly and undue interference with the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively, initiated an inquiry of vital concern to the people of the State of California, Oregon, and Washington, which it was unable to complete because of lack of funds; and

Whereas there has been widespread public demand for the continuance of the work of said subcommittee as evidenced by action taken by the National Grange, the American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and numerous other organizations, urging an appropriation of additional funds for the use of the said subcommittee; and

Whereas the Associated Farmers of California, Inc., in a telegram to Senator Hiram Johnson, dated April 4, 1939, inserted in the Congressional Record on that date, asked for an opportunity to be heard concerning any charges affecting it which might arise out of such inquiry: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the limit of expenditures under Senate Resolution

266, Seventy-fourth Congress, second session, agreed to June 6, 1936; under Senate Resolution 70, Seventy-fifth Congress, first session, agreed to February 17, 1937; under Senate Resolution 154, Seventy-fifth Congress, first session, agreed to August 12, 1937; and under Senate Resolution 266, Seventy-fifth Congress, third session, agreed to May 18, 1938, to investigate violations of the right of free speech and assembly and interference with the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively is hereby increased by $50,000.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I now move to amend the resolution by striking out the recitals in the preamble of the resolution, beginning with the first "whereas" on the first page thereof, and extending down to the words, "Therefore be it resolved," on page 2, leaving only the resolution itself, without any of the recitals.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is advised that the motion of the Senator is not in order until after the resolution itself has been acted upon.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I thought we had just acted

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I thought the motion to proceed to consider the resolution had been agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion to proceed to consider the resolution was agreed to; but before the motion of the Senator from California is in order there is a committee amendment pending, which the clerk will state.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 10, after the word "by", the committee proposes to strike out "$100,000" and insert

"$50.000."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I should like to have just a few moments of the attention of the Senate to make a statement.

The question before the Senate is on the amendment recommended by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate to reduce from $100,000 to $50,000 the amount for the continuation of the subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor under Senate Resolution 266.

When the last appropriation was made by the Senate for this subcommittee at the last session of Congress I stated that, in my judgment, the work of the committee could be concluded with that sum of money; that its reports, and such legislative recommendations as might be reported on the basis of the committee's testimony, could be made and that the work of the committee could be wound up, and that so far as I was concerned I would not seek any increase in funds, or further money for the committee.

Mr. President, at the time that statement was made the committee had tentatively set up a budget of $25,000 out of the $60,000 then afforded to make an investigation of the charges and countercharges which had been made concerning certain activities and certain organizations in the State of California. Pursuant to the setting up of that budget the committee began such an investigation.

The sum of $25,000 was carefully estimated, and was predicated upon the previous experience of the committee insofar as the expense of its past investigations was concerned.

But, Mr. President, the committee found that the investigation in California and on the west coast was a much more expensive type of investigation than it had experienced when the committee was situated here in Washington, because, first of all, the committee had to pay subsistence; it had to pay travel; and it found that there could be no such economical operation of the committee when it was confronted with the problem of dealing with a situation as far away as the State of California, where travel about that State was very extensively required.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield to the Senator from Montana. Mr. WHEELER. I have had some experience with investigations. I do not understand what the Senator is asking for. Is he asking for $100,000?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The resolution submitted by the Senator from Washington [Mr. Schwellenbach] and the junior Senator from California [Mr. Downey] authorized $100,000. The Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate has recommended that the amount be cut to $50,000.

Mr. WHEELER. If the committee is going to do any kind of a job at all it cannot do it with $50,000, in my judgment, when it is going to cover the United States. If the committee is going to do any kind of a job it ought to have at least $100,000. When the Federal Communications Commission was investigating the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. it expended something like $1,000,000.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. How much has already been expended by the committee headed by the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. In our 3 years of existence the committee has received from the Senate and expended all but $500 or $150,000. It has taken 34 volumes of testimony.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. As a matter of fact, Mr. President, I think the Senator's committee has done very splendid work; but why should it come back here asking an appropriation of $100,000 over a recess period when it has already been afforded by the auditing committee, $50,000?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I was interrupted in the course of my statement.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I did not mean to interrupt the Senator.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I shall be glad to answer the question when I come to it. I was trying to say that the committee has had experience and has found that investigations of this character are very expensive; and I felt, as chairman of the subcommittee, that perhaps, if the smaller amount is authorized, and the committee does not complete its work with it, one of two things will happen-either the committee will be criticized or an effort will be made to obtain more funds to complete the investigation-and I felt that I should be remiss in my duty and responsibility to the Senate if I did not very frankly state what I thought the situation to be.

Let me say to the Members of the Senate who do me the honor to give me their attention that obviously it would be very inappropriate for me to say anything about any organization or any group of organizations of which the committee has begun a preliminary investigation, but I think I can say, without transgressing the bounds of propriety in any way, that we have gone far enough in the investigation to know that it is going to be very difficult and complicated. Obviously, there are very sharp differences of opinion pro and con upon the various matters which are under investigation. It will be a very arduous and a very difficult task, and I want to say to the Senate that I personally very much hesitate to undertake this work unless there is some assurance that a complete job can be done, because I know that any group of men who undertake this task are going to find themselves the subject of very great criticism from all sides unless there is an opportunity to afford everybody a hearing, and to complete the investigation as it should be completed, in a thorough manner. After the experience we have thus far had in California in connection with this investigation, I say to the Senate in all earnestness that I do not believe $50,000 will be an adequate sum for this investigation, and that, in my opinion, either the investigation will be incomplete and unsatisfactory to everybody, or else the sum of money which was originally requested in the resolution submitted by the Senator from Washington [Mr. Schwellenbach] and the junior Senator from California [Mr. Downey] will have to be provided for the committee. Therefore, Mr. President, it was my hope that the Senate might see its way clear, if it was going to authorize the investigation at all, to give to the committee the entire amount.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. May I ask the Senator whether it is the purpose of his committee, assuming that this appropriation shall be granted, to investigate the causes of the water-front trouble; the reason why the shipping interests of California, particularly of San Francisco Bay, have been practically destroyed; why it is impossible to build ships there because of the attitude of certain organizations; or whether the committee is to confine its investigation to examining some of the alleged troubles in the agricultural section of the State?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, as I have stated, I do not feel that I am in a position now to make any comment or draw any deductions as a result of the committee's preliminary investigations. There have been no hearings. No one has had any opportunity to be heard. As a matter of fact, the committee was in the process of collecting material for this investigation when its funds became exhausted. I will say, however, that to the best of its ability the committee will carry out the mandate of the Senate, and will conduct the investigation under the terms of the original resolution, which provided for an investigation of violations of civil liberties and undue interference with the right of labor to organize and to bargain collectively.

Of course, the committee has not been able, despite the large sum of money which the Senate has generously given it, to investigate every controversy which has occurred in the United States in which it has been alleged either that civil liberties have been violated or that there has been undue interference with the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively. The committee has had to proceed on the basis of selecting certain incidents, certain situations, and then endeavoring to make as thorough as possible investigations of them. If the committee had endeavored to investigate all the things which were brought to its attention its life would have had to be extended indefinitely, probably beyond the expectancy of life of the present members of the committee, and there would have to be annual appropriations indefinitely. The committee has endeavored. insofar as it could, to investigate these problems, which have been taken up for investigation with great thoroughness, and has endeavored to give every person a fair opportunity to be heard.

Mr. KING. One other question, if I may ask it of the Senator.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield to the Senator from Utah. Mr. KING. Has the Senator's committee interpreted the words "civil liberties" as applying only to persons who belong to labor unions, or has it investigated the alleged deprivation of persons of their civil liberties because of the activities of various organizations which I shall not enumerate?

For instance, I have had a number of letters concerning strikes in Detroit, and inquiries as to whether or not the civil liberties of individuals who wanted to work, but were prevented from working, came within the periphery of the right of the Senator's committee to investigate; and many similar inquiries have come to me from various sections of the United States.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. In response to the first part of the Senator's question, I will state that of course the committee has not interpreted "civil liberties" to apply only to those who are members of labor organizations. In response to the second part of the Senator's inquiry, I will say that the committee has investigated a great number of instances of the kind and character described by the Senator from Utah. Many of them were brought to the attention of the committee by the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. Vandenberg]; but although the committee was diligent in all of the instances of that nature brought to its attention, when a preliminary investigation was made the committee was unable to secure substantial evidence to substantiate the charges.

Mr. JOHNSON of California obtained the floor.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield in order that I may submit a unanimous-consent request?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Prior to the time the vote was had upon the motion to consider this resolution I indicated that I thoroughly agreed that the portion of the resolution contained in the "whereases" could very properly be eliminated. I did not appreciate at the time that under the rules of the Senate ordinarily such a motion is not considered until after a resolution is adopted. I conceive it to be the reason behind that rule that ordinarily there is no particular objection to the "whereases," and that is the reason why the vote upon that question is delayed; but in this particular instance there is an objection to the particular "whereases" which are contained in the resolution, and it seemed to me that we might very well dispose of that question now. It can be done by unanimous consent; and I ask unanimous consent that at this time the various "whereases" contained in the resolution be eliminated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington asks unanimous consent that the rules of the Senate be suspended, and that the Senate now eliminate the preamble of the resolution. Without objection—and the Chair hears no objection—it is so ordered, and the preamble is eliminated.

The question now is upon the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. ASHURST rose.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Does the Senator from Arizona desire to speak upon the amendment?

Mr. ASHURST. I do not desire to trespass upon the time of the Senator from California. When he has finished I wish to make an observation.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, on the 4th day of April last I rose in the Senate and, with a few preliminary remarks, put into the Record without objection a dispatch received by me from the Associated Farmers of California. I said then, and I say now, that I know nothing about the matters involved in that dispatch, but I believe in the sacred right of self-defense, and whenever a body or an individual is attacked I believe in his right to reply and in his right to be heard if necessary.

Up to April 4, 1939, I do not believe there was any attempt, except some preliminary matters of the committee in charge of the investigation of civil liberties and the guardian saint of this body, to do anything in this body in regard to any matters pertaining to the subject matter with which we are engaged today.

April 4, 1939, I call to the attention of the Senate, is the date. I will read to the Senate the telegram then received by me. It was as follows:

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., April 4, 1939-

I observe that much is made of the fact that the junior Senator from California unites in the particular petition now before the Senate, and in asking that this particular amount of money be accorded to the committee. That is his right; I have no fault to find with him at all. But so long as I represent the State of California or any part of it, so long as I have constituents in whom I have any confidence at all, be they few or be they many, when they are attacked, I am willing to come to their defense until I find that they have done something which warrants no defense upon my part.

I therefore came on April 4, 1939, to the defense of the farmers of California, and put in this telegram.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Has the Senator ever in his long experience in the Senate heard a single instance where an investigating committee came into the Senate refusing to accept such a munificent sum as $50,000 for a continuation of their work, and demanding $100,000?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I have never heard of one, and that is why I oppose this now. I was willing to let this thing go by upon the separation of the one side, that is composed of certain individuals with whom we are familiar, and of the other side, composed of farmers in the State of California—I was willing to let it go by without determination one way or the other, but let the charges be taken in the open, and let there be such an investigation as would be appropriate under the circumstances.

I do not know who compose the committee which would examine these witnesses or conduct its examination, except, so far as I am aware, the distinguished Senator from Utah and the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin, have conducted such examinations in the past. Is there any other member of that committee, I ask either of the Senators?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. There was a subcommittee of three originally appointed.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Who was the third one?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The third one was the late Senator from Iowa, Mr. Murphy, and since his death the vacancy has not been filled by the chairman of the full committee.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. That is a peculiar situation. I need not comment on it at this time, but it is a peculiar situation that two men may conduct an examination which means the very farms of farmers in California, or the very business of someone else. I do not say they have acted wrongfully; I do not asperse their characters at all; but it is a peculiar situation that there should be these two alone, and that no other member of the committee is serving with them in doing this work. Perhaps no other man would serve; I do not know how that is; but only these two have done the job, and these two alone have made the findings. I object to that.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I am sure the Senator from California has not read very many of the hearings of the committee which has been investigating in regard to civil liberties.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Oh, yes, I have read many of the hearings, not all, I admit. I do not say aught against the committee, but there ought to be some other man on the committee as well, some other man who represents a different line of philosophy, if you choose. There ought to be someone upon it who could speak the language of the people who have been examined, or who are to be examined. That is all I complain of, and that ought to be done.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I do not like to have the Senator from California suggest that there has been a community of thought or philosophy, to suggest that there has been a single purpose, to suggest that there has not been difference of opinion, to suggest that any single witness who has come before the Civil Liberties Committee has not been defended by counsel—

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Do not put words in my mouth.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I will take words out of the Senator's mouth, if the Senator stands here and objects to the way in which this committee has been conducting its operations, and calls attention to the fact that only two Members of the Senate have been sitting on the committee, and then assumes that those two Members have but a single purpose, and that they are united in all things, that they have one philosophy of life, and that they are not fair with the witnesses who come before them.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Wait a moment. There has not been any such suggestion by me as that just made. I will make such a suggestion if ever I believe it, but no such suggestion has been made by me. Let us follow along with this telegram.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I refuse to leave this situation as it now is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from California yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield for a question or a correction.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The correction is simply this, Mr. President, if the Senator finds that there is something wrong in the fact that only two Senators have conducted these investigations, let the Senator know that every investigation has been open; that other Senators have appeared and sat upon the stand with us; that they have taken part sometimes in the investigations; that there has never been a unity of philosophy or a unity of purpose, and that there has never been a time when a witness has been coerced in the least.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. No one has claimed any such thing, and no one states any such thing. If there comes a time when any such thing shall occur, and I am a representative of the State of California, the Senator will hear from it, he need not worry about that.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I should expect every Senator in the United States, every Senator in the Chamber, to rise up is his wrath whenever he found that any injustice had been done, and whenever he found that someone had done something he should not have done; but I do resent, and resent in the fullest measure, the suggestion that there is something unique in the fact that there have been only two Senators operating upon this committee, and that those two Senators are united in a single purpose to carry out a single kind of philosophy which would, in and of itself, result in the most unjust treatment in any kind of an investigation that anyone could think of.

The implications of the Senator from California are what I resent, because the Senator knows, as well as anyone knows, that this committee has carried on an open hearing, that there have been lawyers representing the various witnesses before it, and that never once has the committee been charged with being unjust or unreasonable or improper with a single witness.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Very well. I am very glad to hear that statement. I am very glad to hear the statement made on behalf of the committee. I accept it in full as it is stated, and I hope, because I do not in any degree endeavor to prevent this investigation, that the investigation will be conducted to the full exactly as the Senator may say, and exactly as he has just related. I will recall his words to him if it is not.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Of course, a poor, young Senator feels himself extremely weak standing before the majesty of the senior Senator from California——

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Just a moment.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I do not want to appear that way, but I do want to tell the story of this investigation as it has gone on, at this particular point.

In all seriousness, the Civil Liberties Committee was asked, after a preliminary investigation in the State of California, to make a budget of the probable cost of an investigation which would bring out in the open and give these persons a chance to produce their witnesses, to answer, because the Senator from California knows as well as anyone knows that nothing has been made public that has been discovered by the investigation, no implications have been made, because only in an open hearing held in front of anyone who wishes to attend has the committee carried on its investigation.

After going thoroughly into the probable cost, the Senator from Wisconsin and I worked out a budget, and we submitted the figure of $105,000 to carry on, properly, the investigation in California.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. When?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. We did that in the light-

Mr. JOHNSON of California. When?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. It was done probably back in April. The Senator has used that date, and that date seems all right to me. The request was made, and we submitted that estimate, so that people might see what might be done.

Nothing has been done since, nothing will be done unless the Senate of the United States wants us to carry on the investigation. But the Senator from Wisconsin told the Senate 2 or 3 minutes ago that as a result of our own studies in this matter we deemed the $50,000 inadequate, and I desire to concur in what he said, because, comparatively speaking.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I am permitting the Senator to speak in my time, but he may proceed.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield.

Mr. BURKE. For the past 20 weeks, approximately, I have been sitting with the Committee on Education and Labor, although not a member of it, while it has been conducting hearings on another matter, the possible amendment of the Wagner Labor Relations Act, and I wish to say that I have never attended any hearings in either House of Congress that were conducted with more fairness from start to finish.

Having said that, I wish to say further that I agree entirely with the senior Senator from California in what I understood his statement to be, that the two Senators who constitute the Civil Liberties Investigation Committee are Senators dear to all of us, in whom we all have the utmost confidence, and yet Senators who have a certain philosophy, a philosophy to which I find myself very much opposed on very frequent occasions.

To my mind it would be far better, if the Associated Farmers of California have done anything wrong, to have them investigated by the Department of Justice, and prosecuted by that Department, rather than to have them summoned before this committee of two Senators with a certain philosophy, in reference to this matter.

I have in my desk a subpena issued by another committee set up by the Senate, with which the present Presiding Officer is familiar, which seems to me to outrage all our sense of decency and propriety in what a committee of Congress, or a joint committee, as this particular committee to which I refer is, may do.

I desire to take this occasion to say-

Mr. LA FOLLETTE rose.

Mr. BURKE. Does the Senator from Wisconsin desire to Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Not at this time.

Mr. BURKE. I want to take this occasion only to say that I think if the Civil Liberties Committee is to be given more funds to carry on its investigation, which, to my judgment, has been an investigation aimed solely to carry out a particular point of view, and not with the attempt to investigate the violations of civil liberties for all the people of this country-I say if this investigation is carried on by that committee, the committee ought to be enlarged, so as to put upon it some Senators who have somewhat of a different philosophy from the two Senators who now constitute the committee.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Senator from Nebraska made some reference to a subpena which he then proceeded to condemn. Did I understand the Senator to say that the subpena was issued by the subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor?

Mr. BURKE. No. I said it was a subpena issued by a subcommittee, the presiding officer of which happened to be the chairman of the committee-I do not know the exact name—the anti-monopoly committee. I have no familiarity with any subpenas ever issued by the Civil Liberties Committee.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I desire to say, Mr. President, that I think it may be assumed that the subpenas which have been issued by this subcommittee for the various corporations and organizations which it has investigated are certainly within the law, for they were scrutinized by the best legal talent that is obtainable in this country.

Mr. ASHURST rose.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, I will yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I shall take a few moments of the Senate's time in my own time.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Following is the telegram:

On March 31 a number of serious charges were made concerning the Associated Farmers of California in a dispatch sent out from Washington by Bruce Catton, N. E. A. Service Washington correspondent.

This is the telegram which I placed in the RECORD by unanimous consent:

This dispatch gives as its source a Senate Civil Liberties Committee report to be filed with the Senate immediately. These charges cannot go unanswered.

charges cannot go unanswered.

The Associated Farmers have been given no hearing by the La Follette committee and no opportunity to present their side of the case. Indeed, they have not even been advised of any charges or what conclusions have been reached concerning them by the La Follette committee, except in the dispatch above mentioned, which expressly states that "no part of the report has yet been disclosed." Decency and fair dealing, to say nothing of the basic principle of American law expressly guaranteeing a fair trial, should dictate that the Associated Farmers have an opportunity to prove or discharge the same of the case of the case that the Associated Farmers have an opportunity to prove or dis-prove the charges mentioned in the dispatch, if, as, and when made. So that Congress and the public may be advised, we herewith set forth our position, which we respectfully request be read into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

And then they take up the charges in this Catton press

The Bruce Catton press release was March 31, 1938. Senator from Wisconsin, be it said to his credit, denied that he had anything to do with that release, and in part denied that any charges of the character that were mentioned in the dispatch had been made.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon me, the committee at no time made any charges or made any report. It has not and never has intended to make any report concerning the California situation unless it was decided that an investigation should be continued, because, as stated in that telegram, and as I stated to the Senator from California when he showed it to me, the committee had not made any report and did not contemplate making any.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. All right. But Mr. Bruce Catton apparently assumed that he had news from some direction and presumably it was the Civil Liberties Committee.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Certainly.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. There are two members on the Civil Liberties Committee.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Only two?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. There are only two members on the Civil Liberties Committee.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Two.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. And the Senator from California has pointed over to the Senator from Wisconsin and said that the Senator from Wisconsin very properly denied having to do with the release of that report.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Yes.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Now, does the Senator from California imply that the other member of the committeeMr. JOHNSON of California. I see what the Senator is driving at. Oh, no; the Senator from Wisconsin answered, as I understood it, for the Civil Liberties Committee.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I thank the Senator.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I have his answer here as published in California, if the Senator wishes to hear it. This is dated April 8:

Senator Robert M. La Follette will tell the Senate within the next few days that statements about the Associated Farmers in a recent dispatch out of Washington did not represent the findings of the Civil Liberties Committee. The story purported to be an advance account of the contents of the committee's report and its findings in California. Senator La Follette says that charges made by different persons and organizations were collected and printed as coming from his committee. He says the evidence before his committee does not support all these charges. The committee has been meticulous about documenting all of the statements bearing its authority and has not heretofore had complaints of its work, such as have been made by the Associated Farmers.

That is a news dispatch.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Yes; and the Senator, I am sure, will remember, when he spoke to me about the telegrams, that I stated to him that, of course, I did not know from what source Mr. Catton had printed his article, but that as chairman of the committee, and speaking for myself and the Senator from Utah, I stated to the Senator from California then—and that has been the position and policy of the committee from the beginning—that, of course, it would not make any findings, any charges, or any reports unless and until it had completed an investigation, held a hearing, and given everybody an opportunity to be heard in order that there might be evidence upon which to base such findings of fact or such report.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I do not recall such a complete answer as the Senator has now given. I sent for a member of the Associated Farmers, a Representative in Congress from California, as decent and as high grade a young man as ever I knew, and I asked him to come over here and meet the Senator. The Senator made an appointment with him, and the Senator did not keep it. Does the Senator remember that?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. No; I do not, Mr. President, but I remember seeing him here and discussing the matter with him here on the floor when the Senator introduced me to him.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. But the discussion was very brief, and he was introduced to the Senator from Utah as well and he got no information, so he reported to me.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. If the Senator will yield-

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I gave him the same information about the matter to which the Senator has referred to, that I gave to the Senator from California, if my memory serves me correctly.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I think it serves the Senator correctly, except in one or two particulars.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President-

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Does the Senator from Utah wish to be heard?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Yes; I should like the Senator from California to reflect a bit. He never made an appointment with the Senator from Utah. I talked one afternoon with the Representative from California. I gave him all the information I had. I told the Senator at that time that there would be no investigation in California unless the Senate decided to have an investigation there.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Then it must have been forgotten very quickly by him. I saw him afterward and asked him if he had learned anything. He said that substantially he had not. But I am calling the attention of the Senate to the time, because at that time both the Senator from Utah and the Senator from Wisconsin said they had stated they would not ask for any more money, and that, so far as they were concerned, this investigation was closed. Does the Senator recall that?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I think the Senator will find that neither the Senator from Wisconsin nor the Senator from Utah formally asked for any money. Every time we have made any statement we have called attention to the fact that when the last money was granted by the Senate of the United States it was expressly stated by the chairman of the subcommittee that we would bring the investigation to a close. That is why I told the Senator from California and his colleague the Representative from California that if there was an investigation in California it would be as the result of Senate action, and not the result of anything initiated by the Senator from Wisconsin and myself.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. It is 4 long months since that conversation.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. It is 4 months since that conversation and—

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I have never talked to the Senator since nor to the Senator from Wisconsin about the matter, because the conversations with each of them were so vague, as was the Senators' right—I do not question their right to answer me in any fashion they see fit—they were so vague, however, that it was impossible for me to determine whether or not they were going to carry on further investigation. I was not interested in the subject save in behalf of the young gentleman from the House who came over here and who wanted to learn concerning it. He is a farmer, a hard-working farmer, and he is nothing else, and he, of course, was interested in what was transpiring. So I naturally sent him to the sources of information, and from them he returned to me saying practically there was no information.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Will the Senator yield further?
Mr. JOHNSON of California. Yes; I will yield to the Senator all night.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The Senator has mentioned the fact that our replies were vague. What I say now will be identical with what I said then, that there will be no investigation by the Civil Liberties Committee in California unless the Senate of the United States decides to have us carry out that investigation. I have not asked, the Senator from Wisconsin has not asked, and we will not ask to make investigations, but we will when we are called upon to make reports say what we know. Now, if that is vague I cannot understand vagueness. We will not go unless the United States Senate orders us to.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Briefly, let me ask the Senator a question. With the resolution adopted today, and $50,000 being provided by the Senate, does not the Senator think the talk about an investigation is rather vague?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. There is nothing vague at all about that, Mr. President.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Perhaps not.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The resolution was submitted by someone other than the Senator from Wisconsin. It was submitted by someone other than the Senator from Utah. That has not been the case in the past. Each one of our resolutions in the past has been presented by a member of the committee.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I want to conclude, and I have this to say in conclusion: I probably do not know a half dozen of the Associated Farmers of California. I know three or four. I know them as farmers and as men engaged in hard work, and as men engaged in the endeavor to save what little they have worked for all their lives. They are exercised and this association is exercised over what may happen. The committee may investigate and if they find there was a rotten condition in that association, or if they find that the Associated Farmers did aught besides endeavor to protect themselves, then I will say gladly here on this floor that the committee endeavored to do what was right and to develop what was wrong.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Are there grand juries in California? Mr. JOHNSON of California. Of course we have grand juries. Mr. BANKHEAD. Are there Federal grand juries in California?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Certainly. Mr. BANKHEAD. And State grand juries?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Yes.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Does the Senator know any reason why the grand juries cannot investigate violations of law?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Not a particle.

Mr. President, for 2 or 3 months we have had the Attorney General of the United States investigating. I am told by the Senator from South Carolina that when it was suggested that he ought to make this investigation—I have not talked to him about it; I never spoke to him in any way, shape, form, or manner, or with anyone connected with him—it was stated that he could not issue subpenas. I am informed that he can issue subpenas. I do not know how his investigation would run. I do not know whether it would run collateral to the investigation of the Civil Liberties Committee, or whether it would run otherwise. He was the important man to investigate this particular matter.

Mr. President, I wish to conclude.

Mr. PEPPER rose.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I will not be interrupted again.

If there is anything in California which does not smell good, if there is any organization there which deprives any man of his civil liberties, I will fight to prevent that sort of thing being done, and I will unite with the Senator from Wisconsin or the Senator from Utah in doing so. If there is any man on earth in the particular bailiwick from which I come who is not observing the law, who does things which are not proper and fit to be done, then investigate him to the full; but, for God's sake, give him a square deal. Remember, he is a hard-working American citizen, and he is entitled to a square deal. Give him the right to be heard as he is entitled to be heard. Do not let seep out from the committee, or from anybody connected with the committee, any sort of language concerning him which ought not to seep out. See that he is given equal publicity with those who are damning him and endeavoring to prevent him from carrying on his vocation. If he is wrong, find it out and punish him. If he is right, for the love of God acquit him and say that he is right.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, what I shall say, or part of what I shall say, may not appear to have a direct bearing on the resolution before the Senate, for which I expect to vote.

The rules of the Senate provide that no Senator in debate shall refer offensively to any State in the Union. I hope I am not violating that rule when I say that I happen to know that if civil liberty in California during the past 25 or 30 stormy years has been maintained, it has been maintained through the efforts and the courage of Hiram Warren Johnson, the Senator from California.

Mr. President, so much for civil liberties.

I ask Senators to hear me a moment with respect to a bill which it seems to me should follow the adoption of the pending resolution. I refer to House bill 6832, which passed the House of Representatives and was referred to the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, and by that committee was referred to a subcommittee composed of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'Mahoney] as chairman, the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER], and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Danaher].

The bill provides that it shall be unlawful to bribe or attempt to bribe, to intimidate or corrupt, or attempt to intimidate or corrupt, witnesses who appear before any committee of either House of Congress or any commission or board or agency of the United States.

It may surprise some Senators—it surprised me—to know that while there is a stringent law, namely section 135 of the United States Code, which severely denounces any attempt to corrupt a witness in a Federal court, so far as I know there is no law which punishes anyone who intimidates, attempts to intimidate, or corrupt a witness who appears before a commission, board, or other agency of the Federal Government, or a committee of Congress.

The bill to which I refer has passed the House and has passed the scrutiny of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, although fairness requires me to say that some of the ablest members of the committee did not approve the bill. So, if I may obtain the floor after the pending resolution has been disposed of, I shall ask the Senate to consider House bill 6832, which reads as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Criminal Code of the United States be amended by inserting therein a new section immediately following section 135 (U. S. C., title 18, sec. 241) to be known as section 135 (a) (U. S. C., title 18, sec. 241 (a)) and reading as follows:

"SEC. 135. (a) That whoever corruptly, or by threats or force, by

"Sec. 135. (a) That whoever corruptly, or by threats or force, by any threatening letter or communication, shall endeavor to influence, intimidate, or impede any witness in any proceeding pending before any department, independent establishment, board, commission, or other agency of the United States, or in connection with any inquiry or investigation being had by either House, or any committee of either House, or any joint committee of the Congress of the United States, or who corruptly or by threats or force, or by any threatening letter or communication shall influence, obstruct, or impede, or endeavor to influence, obstruct, or impede the due and proper administration of the law under which such proceeding is being had before such department, independent establishment, board, commission, or other agency of the United States, or the due and proper exercise of the power of inquiry under which such inquiry or investigation is being had by either House, or any committee of either House or any joint committee of the Congress of the United States shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both."

Mr. President, it is common knowledge that witnesses appearing before various governmental boards, commissions, and agencies, and before committees of Congress, have been mercilessly muckraked. They have been asked questions which would be subject to objection in court, questions which were immaterial, incompetent, and irrelevant. In some instances they have been required to give hearsay testimony. I do not perceive any reason why the same safeguard which is thrown around witnesses who appear in the Federal courts should not be thrown around witnesses who appear before boards, commissions, and committees of Congress.

With due propriety and humility, I say that it seems to me that House bill 6832 should be considered following the adoption of the pending resolution. I would not conceal from the Senate, even if I could, the fact that three or four Senators—I shall not name them—whom I regard as among the ablest lawyers in this body, do not view the bill with favor. However, it seems to me if they will reflect again they will see the necessity for the bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President-

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the Senator from California.
Mr. JOHNSON of California. I was the one who made the objection to the bill yesterday. Today I have withdrawn the objection. I wish the Senator to know that.

Mr. ASHURST. I think the Senator was on perfectly safe ground, knowing him as I have known him for an entire lifetime. So far as I know, he has never given his consent to any proposal without examining it. I am not surprised that the Senator sought, on such a serious matter, at least 24 hours to consider the question. Far from considering that deserving of obloquy, I think it is worthy of commendation.

While I am on my feet, I will say that a particular duty has been cast upon me. I make no apology for the fact that I am very proud of the position I hold. I make no pretense at concealing the fact that I would rather be chairman of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary than to hold any other position.

Mr. President, there is another matter which I wish to bring to the attention of the Senate. I do so with reluctance on this occasion for the reason that, again, some of the ablest Members of the Senate opposed the bill, and for the further reason that it embraces a subject of which I know nothing.

It is a great vice to pretend knowledge when one has none, and it is an equally great vice to pretend ignorance when one has great knowledge. On the subject of admiralty and maritime law, no ignorance could transcend my own. In the Senate Committee on the Judiciary I frequently, if not always, depend upon the sagacity and judgment of members of that committee who are familiar with maritime and admiralty law. There is a situation to which I wish to invite the attention of the two Senators from California, because the matter is critical in that State.

Outside the 3-mile limit, off the coast of southern California, floating palaces have been anchored. In those palatial gambling ships one may hear the whirl of the roulette wheel and the thud of the ivory dice and poker chips above the bacchanalian orgies. As I see it, California has no power to stop that activity. Motor taxis convey citizens to the gambling ships.

The House of Representatives has passed a bill authorizing the Federal Government to deal with the question. The bill has come to the Senate, and the Senate Committee on the Judiciary has discussed it. Some members of the Committee on Foreign Relations are also members of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary. The matter involves, of course, the question of extending the 3-mile limit. So I shall not discuss the bill, because again, with all my vices, I have never presumed ignorance when I had information, or presumed knowledge when I was ignorant. Being ignorant of maritime and admiralty law, I leave it until tomorrow for the consideration of Senators who are familiar with the subject. However, Mr. President, I should like to read a telegram which has come to me from the Attorney General of California, dated July 28, 1939, addressed to myself. It is as follows:

Los Angeles, Calif., July 28, 1939.

Hon. H. F. Ashurst,

Chairman, Judiciary Committee,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Your favorable consideration of gambling-ship legislation is earnestly requested. California, with approximately 1,000 miles of shore line, is particularly vulnerable to the activities of such ships which have no other nurses them to multip the State level searcher. shore line, is particularly vulnerable to the activities of such saips which have no other purpose than to nullify the State laws against illegal gambling. By anchoring more than 3 miles from shore they create jurisdictional as well as practical problems of enforcement. State and local authorities are now engaged in attempting to overcome these difficulties, but a Federal statute such as that proposed would automatically eliminate the source of trouble. Should you desire information concerning the scope of activities or any other assistance this office will gledly comply. assistance, this office will gladly comply.

EARL WARREN, Attorney General.

I have had the able support of the senior Senator from California [Mr. Johnson] and the junior Senator from California [Mr. Downey]. I say again that I shall ask the Senate to consider the ship-gambling bill tomorrow. I shall not be able to participate in the debate. If any man in the Senate could debate without information, I would be that man. However, I do not choose to do so; and tomorrow I shall ask the senior Senator from California to bring up the bill for consideration.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator

Mr. ASHURST. Certainly.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. There certainly is no Member of the Senate for whose opinion I have greater respect than I have for that of the very erudite and learned Senator from Arizona [Mr. Ashurst]. I merely wish to ask the Senator from Arizona if he considers that the question of vessels anchored outside the 3-mile limit has anything to do with the question of the amount of money which should be appropriated for this Senate committee.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, first I express my grateful thanks to the learned Senator from the State of Missouri: and I am not so obtuse as to fail to perceive the implied and rather just rebuke which his words convey.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, I should like to say to the Senator from Arizona that no rebuke is intended, because no Senator who has ever served with the distinguished Senator from Arizona ever had the slightest notion of rebuking him.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I should consider anything the Senator from Missouri said to me as instruction, wise admonition; but I was going to say that I apologized in advance, and said it was possible that I might discuss some subjects not directly related to the pending resolution. I do not wish to delay action on the resolution. I have now discharged my duty to my committee, the Committee on the Judiciary, and I have discharged my duty to the country, by laying before the Senate this bill, H. R. 7235, which has to do with the gambling ships. I am not oblivious to the fact that the bill, in my judgment, should have gone to the Committee on Foreign Relations, of which committee the erudite Senator from Missouri is a worthy member; but I hope that before Congress adjourns they will give consideration to this

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky. Mr. BARKLEY. I am familiar with the first bill to which the Senator referred, which was briefly under consideration a day or two ago.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. At that time the Senator from California objected because he wanted to look further into it.

Mr. ASHURST. That is correct.
Mr. BARKLEY. And the Senator will recall that there was a difference of opinion at that time as to the interpretation of the bill.

The Senator's statement is correct. Mr. ASHURST.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have made what little contribution I could to confirm the Senator's interpretation of that bill, and I am delighted that our interpretation now has been further confirmed by the judgment of the Senator from California. I think the bill ought to pass, and I shall be glad to cooperate tomorrow with the Senator to try to have it considered.

Mr. ASHURST. Let me say in reply that the contribution made by the able Senator from Kentucky was not a "little" contribution, but he shed much light on the question.

Mr. KING. Mr. President-

Mr. ASHURST. Begging the pardon of the Senator from Utah, the Senator from Utah yesterday did that which well became him, and for which I hold him in the highest respectit is the habit of his lifetime-never to give precipitous consent to a matter without some investigation; and when the able senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] sought to have the bill passed the Senator from Utah, joining with the Senator from California, asked-which was perfectly proper-further time for consideration, because it is only when such light as those Senators may throw upon the subject has been afforded that I feel I am perfectly secure. I hope the able Senator from Utah has finished his examination, and I now yield to him.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, with respect to the second bill to which the Senator referred-

Mr. ASHURST. That is the so-called ship-gambling bill, I may say.

Mr. KING. That question, or one analogous to it, was brought before the Finance Committee some time ago: and I drafted a bill under the terms of which the United States was given jurisdiction over waters beyond the 3-mile limit. As a result of that jurisdictional authority we closed the ships that were bringing in liquor and were anchored 12 miles out; we brought them under the control of the United States; we drove every one of those ships from the high seas, and we stopped the importation of liquor from them.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I should like to add, in closing this debate, that during my brief tenure in the Senate there has never been any proposition coming out of the Committee on the Judiciary sponsored by the Senator from Arizona in which I did not resolve all my doubts in favor of the recommendation of the Senator from Arizona, and I have never had any reason to regret it.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I am grateful and humble in view of these kind remarks. I shall presume to ask the Senate, after the pending resolution is disposed of, to take up and consider the witness bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, there are some small matters which are scheduled, if possible, to be disposed of tonight. I desire to cooperate with the Senator, and I will do so, but at the present time I hope the Senator will not insist on his request.

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the superior judgment of the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the Committee on Civil Liberties was authorized in 1936 to conduct an investigation with an authorized appropriation of $15,000. From year to year since 1936 the appropriation has been increased, and the committee has received a total of $150,000.

Last year, as has been stated upon the floor once or twice, the committee asked for an additional appropriation of $50,000, and the two members of the committee came before the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate and stated at that time that if the $50,000 were granted, they would not ask for a further appropriation, and upon the floor of the Senate the same statement was made. They have lived up to that statement. Neither the Senator from Wisconsin nor the Senator from Utah [Mr. Thomas] submitted a resolution for another appropriation.

My recollection is that last year, when the Civil Liberties Committee asked the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate for the $50,000, they stated that $25,000 was to be used for an investigation of the violation of civil liberties in California. It was thought by them at that time certainly that that would be a sufficient amount for that investigation. Members of the committee have stated upon the floor that certain proceedings were had, certain investigations made, and no report filed.

In this Congress the Senator from Washington [Mr. Schwellenbach] submitted a resolution, which is now pending before the Senate, asking for $100,000, to increase by that sum the limit of expenditures of the Civil Liberties Committee.

In the original resolution the Committee on Education and Labor is given the right to call upon the departments of the Government for clerical and other assistance in its inquiry.

When this resolution came before the committee I was of the opinion that because of the matters set forth in the resolution to investigate violations of free speech and assembly and interference with the right of labor to organize, the Department of Justice should conduct the investigation, in view of the fact that the Department of Justice this year had established for the first time, in the criminal section, a separate division charged with the investigation and prosecution of violations of civil liberties.

Believing that, when the Appropriations Committee was considering the appropriation for the Department of Justice, after the committee had acted and had recommended the appropriation of the entire sum requested by the Department of Justice, I presented to the Appropriations Committee the view I have now expressed to the Senate. I stated that this investigation had been made, that $25,000 had been spent, that another resolution was pending, and that I believed that if there were violations in California of the civil liberties of individuals an investigation should be made, there should be a prosecution, and the Department of Justice should be given money to make the investigation and conduct the prosecution. Without a Budget estimate, upon my request, the Appropriations Committee increased the amount for the criminal division of the Department of Justice by $20,000, with the specific provision that of the total amount $50,000 should be available for the investigation and prosecution of violations of civil liberties.

I believed that that would be done. In a conversation with the Attorney General I certainly was informed that the money would be used for that purpose; and the Attorney General advised me that some members of this particular division in the criminal section had been assigned to the investigation of conditions in California.

Subsequently, the Senator from Washington [Mr. Schwellenbach] placed in the Record a statement by the Attorney General that for some reasons which I do not now recall he did not believe he could adequately or satisfactorily perform the duties expected of him by the committee, and that he believed the Senate should appropriate an amount for the Senate committee to continue its investigation. The Attorney General did not come before the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate. He expressed a desire to do so; but inasmuch as in the last days of the session we were hurried, I asked the Senator from Washington to repeat in substance the statement of the Attorney General, which he did.

It satisfied me that in view of the fact that a standing committee of this body had asked for a continuance of the investigation, in view of the fact that the Attorney General said he could not use the money or was not going to use the money for the purpose we expected in the manner that we thought it could be used, and inasmuch as he was urging that the Senate continue the investigation, this resolution should be reported. The members of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate determined that they would submit the matter to the Senate, for determination by the Senate.

The committee were of the opinion that in view of the fact that the resolution asked for $100,000, and that the Department of Justice under the appropriation bill already had $50,000 for this purpose, they were liberal in recommending that not exceeding $50,000 should be made available at this time. That is how and why the resolution is now before the Senate.

I call attention to the fact that under the original resolution, copy of which I have on my desk, in addition to the $50,000 which is made available by the resolution, the committee can call upon the department for clerical and other assistance. I think the committee has been liberal in its recommendation, and I ask that the committee recommendation be agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I do not wish to delay a vote on this matter, because there are three or four other matters which I hope we may dispose of tonight, including an additional resolution from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

I wish to say that I have been somewhat familiar with the investigation carried on by the Civil Liberties Committee, particularly as one phase of it related to my State. I shall not go into that, because it is unnecessary, and the hearings disclose what was revealed, and the newspapers have carried reports about it. But I believe I am justified in saying that if this committee had done nothing except to contribute to what I hope will be permanent peace and accord in one county in the State of Kentucky, which has been involved to some extent in this investigation, the entire amount expended by the committee would be justified.

I am wondering whether, after all, the $50,000 recommended by the committee is not sufficient at this time. I do not know anything about the situation in California; I do not know what an investigation there will reveal. I am satisfied that after the expenditure of this sum, if there is any "pay dirt" out there, the Senate will be willing to increase the amount. But for the time being, for the time until Congress meets in January, I rather have a feeling that the $50,000 recommended is sufficient and that it ought to be agreed to. I am wondering whether the author of the resolution feels that probably this amount would be sufficient.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator vield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I desire to answer the question, but to make just a preliminary statement first.

My connection with this part of the investigation came from the revealing to me last summer of conditions which did not involve the Associated Farmers, and did not involve particularly the State of California at all, but did involve very definite violations of civil liberty and civil rights. I came back last January with a determination to try to induce the committee, which I knew from what had occurred last year had had some appropriation for an investigation on the Pacific coast, to consider what I had formerly presented on a 1-day visit to Washington last summer,

I found that the committee had gone to California, had expended most of its money in the preliminary investigation there and that the members of the committee found themselves estopped from asking for further funds.

I later presented this resolution. Before I offered it, naturally I went to the two members of the committee and asked them how much they thought they should have in order to continue what was preliminarily done last summer, and in order to investigate generally the conditions on the Pacific coast. They prepared an estimate after consulting with the people who were employed by the committee, which, as I remember was $105,000. I chopped off the $5,000, and presented the resolution for $100,000.

When the matter was presented to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate a few days ago, I naturally asked for no amount. So far as I am personally concerned, I am not in a position to know what amount may be necessary. The committee decided upon $50,000. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follettel] sincerely believes that that is not sufficient, and that the original $100,000 figure should be retained.

Frankly, I will say my own position is that approximately 4 working months will probably ensue between now and the time we will convene again in January, that is, it will take a couple or three weeks for the committee to get started, and Christmas week coming at the end of the time, it seems to me it should be possible under those circumstances to operate, and that the $50,000 ought to be sufficient. My personal feeling is that I certainly am not willing to risk the entire question of investigation by a dispute between the sums of $50,000 and $100,000.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. In just a moment. I wish to say, in connection with what the Senator from Washington has stated, that I do not think the committee is bound either morally or legislatively or legally by the statement they made previously that they had no intention of asking for additional funds. I think any committee can, in good faith, make a statement of that sort and then discover later that it does need funds, and they violate no obligation in asking for them. I appreciate the fact that neither member of the committee has asked for this additional sum, but that should not in any way stand in the way of the Senate granting it, if it is needed, and will serve a good purpose.

I do not consider myself in any way obligated to vote against the increased amount, because the members of the committee went before the Committee to Audit and Control previously and indicated that they would not need any more. But I do feel that, in the situation which now exists, we can legitimately consider whether this amount is necessary to carry on until it may be determined later whether an additional sum is needed.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES. Since the time the Senator from Washington offered his resolution, and I know he will recall it was offered in February, the $50,000 has been made available to the Department of Justice, and the Senator may not have known that at the time.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I am perfectly frank in recognizing, so far as that matter is concerned, the fact that the Department of Justice has this money available, but I do not think that is a complete answer; I do not think it completely eliminates the necessity for further work of the committee. I cannot say frankly that that does not affect me so far as the question of the amount is concerned.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator from Kentucky yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Has the Senator from Kentucky or the Senator from Washington or the Senator from South Carolina ever before heard of an instance in which a committee came before the Senate and, in the closing days of a session, refused an appropriation of $50,000 for the continuation of their services during the interim and demanded that $100,000 be appropriated?

Mr. BARKLEY. I may say to the Senator from Missouri that I do not know whether any such instance ever occurred or not—

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. The Senator has been in Congress for a long time, and I should be very glad to have him give such an instance.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not recall such an instance; but I would not be bound by that, if there never had been such an instance. I would not feel that I was obligated to disregard this request if the money were needed.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I should be very glad to have the Senator tell the Senate, if he will, just exactly what peculiar circumstances are connected with this committee which require twice as big an appropriation as has ever been made in the history of the Senate for the continuation of an investigation.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am not urging twice the amount that has ever been appropriated.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. That is the proposal that has been urged here with regard to the committee amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. The resolution was presented for $100,000, and the Committee to Audit and Control reduced it to $50,000, and I am supporting the amendment. I am going to vote for the amendment.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Has the Senator ever heard, in his whole experience in either the House or the Senate, of as liberal a provision for the continuation of a committee during the interim?

Mr. BARKLEY. I would not like to make a comparison between this and other instances.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Has the Senator ever heard of such an instance?

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not know whether I have or not. If I have, I have forgotten it.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. For the continuation of a committee to the next session of the Congress?

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. BANKHEAD obtained the floor.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield to me a moment, I am one of the few members of this body who is not a lawyer, but I never had my attention called to this roving grand jury before. In the face of State courts, Federal courts, and every form of legal authorization to take care of the citizen, we appoint from the Senate a body who must go out and, in the face of all the reserved powers of the States and their jurisdiction, adduce evidence concerning the infringement of civil liberties.

It is a discredit to all the States, it is a discredit to the jurisdiction of our legal department that we take two men, or four, or a dozen, and have them snooping around throughout the several sovereign States to investigate and ascertain whether some citizens of a State have been denied civil rights.

What in the name of God have we come to? Discredit of State courts, discredit of Federal courts, selecting at our pleasure a snooping committee, a smelling committee, to go around and inquire of different ones, "Have your civil liberties been interfered with?"

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I should not like to have anything I said in the last few minutes with regard to the amount to be appropriated for the continuation of the investigation to be taken as indicating that I am in sympathy with the remarks made by the Senator from South Carolina. I think this committee, if they never did anything else, in their disclosure of conditions in Harlan County, Ky., performed a great service, and I am perfectly willing to give them all the money that is necessary to carry them on until the next session of Congress. I am not willing to give them at one swoop two-thirds as much money as they spent in 3 years.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I do not feel that it is my duty to defend Kentucky; she is a royal, good State; and though she had this unfortunate condition within her borders, she was amply able to cope with it, and would have coped with it, but we rushed in.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. They never have.

Mr. SMITH. That does not mean they never will.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not care to get into a controversy about what happened in Harlan County, but I wish to say that conditions existed there which had not been coped with because of the peculiar industrial situation in that county, where scores of deputy sheriffs were appointed, paid for by coal companies, who owed their allegiance to the coal companies, but took the oath of allegiance to the State, and in political campaigns promises had been made to pass legislation covering that situation. Of course, it is true that the legislature could have acted, but they did not, and it was only after this committee made the investigation and called the attention of the entire State to conditions which most people did not realize existed that the legislature then passed a law attempting to correct the situation.

Mr. SMITH. I regret to hear the Senator make that state-

Mr. BARKLEY. It is the truth.

Mr. SMITH. Exactly, but the Senator is admitting that Kentucky is not worthy of State rights.

Mr. BARKLEY. Oh, no.

Mr. SMITH. That they have to go to the Federal Government to correct an intolerable condition.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator will yield, a situation existed in Colorado years ago, and the House of Representatives appointed a committee to investigate conditions pertaining to the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. A distinguished Representative from my State, the Honorable Ben Johnson, whom the Senator knows, and with whom he served in the House, was the chairman of the committee. The committee brought to light the existence of conditions which the people in Colorado probably did not fully understand, and certainly the people of the United States did not.

I think these investigating committees have served a useful purpose, and it is no reflection upon a State to say that local conditions were such that they either did not understand them or were unable to cope with them until the people of the entire State were made familiar with them, and brought influence to bear upon the legislature of the State to deal with them.

I will say, furthermore, that in part as a result of the investigation in Kentucky, the Federal grand jury indicted a large number of people, and nearly 3 months were spent in the trial of those cases, which resulted in a hung jury. I dare say that if it had not been for the investigation of the La Follette committee, and the Department of Justice under the civil rights activities of the Department, these indictments might never have been brought by the Federal grand jury. I believe that through the mere exposé of those conditions, although no one was convicted in the trial as the result of a hung jury, and as a result of the widespread knowledge which these investigations and these indictments brought to the people of the entire country, as well as to the people of my State, the situation there has been and will continue to be no longer one which will cause humiliation to anyone in this country.

Mr. SMITH. Yes, Mr. President, but because of sectional influence we are setting a precedent which will result in eliminating the intiative of the officers of the States.

Mr. WHEELER and Mr. WAGNER rose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. O'MAHONEY in the chair). Does the Senator from South Carolina yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. SMITH. I will take them on one at a time. [Laughter.] I yield first to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. WHEELER. I wish to call attention to the fact that a few years ago there was a coal strike in the State of Pennsylvania and the senior Senator from California

[Mr. Johnson] introduced a resolution in the Senate to provide for a Senate committee investigation of that coal strike and the conditions in the State of Pennsylvania surrounding the strike area, as well as in Kentucky and West Virginia.

A Republican Senate agreed to the resolution, and a Republican Vice President appointed the committee. He appointed as chairman the late Senator Gooding, and Senator Metcalf, of Rhode Island, and Senator Pine, of Oklahoma, as well as the Senator from New York [Mr. Wagner], and myself. We went out in the field and investigated the conditions in the great State of Pennsylvania as well as other States. We found the conditions to be deplorable. What we found was brought to the attention of the country, and resulted, in my judgment, in great improvement in the situation with respect to the coal miners and the coal industry in those States.

The Senator speaks of grand juries, and he speaks about State court juries, and so forth. The same argument was made on the floor of the Senate at the time of the Teapot Dome investigation. We heard the same argument advanced at the time of the Daugherty investigation. All the Republican newspapers across the United States of America from one end to the other denounced the investigation of Daugherty and the Department of Justice until certain things were pinned upon Daugherty, and after that grand juries here in Washington and in other places conducted investigations.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, let me make my speech now. Mr. WHEELER. Very well. I shall make mine later.

Mr. SMITH. Since that nefarious condition was found in Pennsylvania it has gone Democratic, and now it is a "Garden of Eden," so I hear. I hear they have their civil rights to such extent that a misdemeanor or a felony—

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I ask the Senator from Montana how much money was accorded to that investigation which I fathered?

Mr. WHEELER. Not much.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. SMITH. I yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I wanted to ask the Senator from Montana a question. In the investigation which he says I fathered in Pennsylvania, how much money was accorded?

Mr. SMITH. Do not let us start the Senator on a speech. He can answer that later.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. But it was a very small sum. Mr. WHEELER. I think it was $25,000 to begin with.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Two thousand five hundred dollars, from all I gathered.

Mr. WHEELER. Oh, no.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. There was another investigation, which I conducted by myself. That was the investigation into the rotten bonds of Latin America. I sat for a period of 2 months with the Finance Committee. Does the Senator know how much money I had with which to conduct the investigation? I did not have a solitary penny. The only money expended was money paid for stenographer's fees.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, all these instances which are cited are deplorable, but we are rapidly drifting into a centralized government. We are almost right now in a condition of State socialism. So far as I am individually concerned, I would rather have the States work out their own salvation or damnation through their own efforts than to do away with, as we are gradually doing away with, the power of the local courts and Federal courts.

I have no idea of the scope of this committee. It is determining questions which are absolutely under the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice and the different State courts. But it seems we have to erect over those courts now a supercourt, which is granted the money and the power to investigate without any particular reference to the judicial temperament of the investigator, and find certain conditions, exploit them abroad, and do those things which are sacred to the States.

I am not palliating the terrible conditions that exist in some very provincial and backward States. Those States may go on, they may advance after a while, and they should be given a chance to do so. I recognize that those States which for so long a time were Territories, got into the habit of looking to Washington for everything, and they do not feel the pride and grip of sovereignty as do the Thirteen Original States which won the glorious privileges we now enjoy.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. BURKE. I thought from the Senator's remarks that he was referring to some of the newer States as not being quite in the class with the Thirteen Original States. I should like to say, however, to the Senator from South Carolina, in sharp difference to the opinion expressed by the Senator from Kentucky, that I would consider it a very serious reflection upon my State of Nebraska if the Senate were to send what the Senator has so aptly described as a roving jury of two Senators to investigate civil liberties in my State. I want to put Nebraska in the same class as the original 13 States as able to look after its own civil liberties.

Mr. SMITH. And if Nebraska will continue to elect such men as the one who has just spoken, she will never get out of the proud category of States'-rights States.

Mr. President, I have sat here and witnessed the steady drift toward centralization. George Eliot, in one of her great novels, pictures a certain character who deviated at first so slightly from the line of right that the angle that differentiated between right and wrong was almost negligible, but, projected through a long life, he reached the very depths of degradation without the sense of falling.

Mr. President, we have deviated and are now deviating from the glorious principles of our dual form of government. We have deviated from the bedrock of democracy, of individualism, the right to be the captain of one's own soul, and have drifted rapidly into collectivism, and then into state socialism. We have drifted so far that men will stand on the floor of the Senate and plead for things which are obnoxious to the very form and foundation of our Government. Senators say that conditions wholly within the jurisdiction of a State have become so obnoxious that neither the Federal courts nor the local courts can unearth them, but we can send a snooping committee, a political committee, which will uncover and correct them.

No, Mr. President; I would rather suffer the ills of bloody Kentucky, or the tremendous scandals of Teapot Dome, than to have to give up the key by which can be opened the door to centralization and Federal control of this great country of ours.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. BURKE. Reference has been made to the Teapot Dome investigation two or three times this evening as if that were comparable in some degree to this proposal. Of course, there is no comparison. There was a proposal to investigate a Federal official, the Secretary of the Interior of the United States, and others connected with the Federal Government. That was not a matter of sending a roving grand jury out into a State to investigate the violation of civil liberties within the State.

Mr. SMITH. In addition to that, the matter related to Government property. It was a matter which justly belonged to a congressional investigating committee. But think of what is involved in this Civil Liberties Committee. As I said in reference to the great State of Pennsylvania, she obtained so much civil liberty that she wanted to open the door of public places of amusement and entertainment to our brothers in black.

Now I want to say something about that question. I may never have the opportunity again. I and the people of the South are charged with Negro baiting and Negro mistreatment. I want to say to this body that I think my debt of obligation to the race to which I belong forever forecloses the possibility of my acknowledging either by law or by social custom the equality of that race which from the dawn of creation till now has never shown the least of our characteristics.

The building in which I stand, the splendid advancement of the discoveries of science, the magic touch, the gift of the gods, to our inventive geniuses proclaim the glory of the race to which we belong. We are under obligations to that race for all we have. We are under obligations to it for the Christ that came. Yet for miserable political reasons we are ready to pass a law to inject into the bloodstream of our splendid history this inferior race. You are not acknowledging your obligation to the race that has glorified the world when you do that. You are not acknowledging your obligation to that splendid breed that has been clothed in glory which has made us a little lower than the angels. But for miserable political reasons you are ready to inject into the bloodstream of our splendid social and political system the vicious part of a nation that through all the history of the world has never moved a step forward from the dawn of creation. It is not a local question with me. It is a question which involves the future of the grandest race that God ever

I wish each and every Senator would read the marvelous book by Madison Grant called The Passage of a Great Race—passing because of miserable politics.

Mr. President, as I stand here today I know I am a voice crying in the wilderness; but I am responsible for the voice and the cry thereof. I plead for the fundamental principles upon which our Government has been founded, and by which it has gradually risen to the splendid proportions of today; and I will not add, through so-called emergency, to the disruption of the system which has been the envy and the despair of every other nation on the earth. No; I am called reactionary. If being a reactionary means having a devotion to the fundamental principles of a genuine republican form of government in the broad sense in which the foundations of our Government were laid, I glory in the epithet, if it may be called that.

Mr. President, I know it has been said that our Constitution has become effete, that it has outlived its usefulness. If so, then truth has become effete, human nature has changed, and the fundamental principle of man's relation to man has disappeared within the past generation. If the Bill of Rights, the inalienable rights of the individual as written in our Constitution, had been written during the time of the canonizing of the Bible, it would have been said to have been inspired by God. It was; but it has not the halo of sacredness around it that the 10 moral commandments have. Yet those 10 articles of the Bill of Rights are as eternal and unchangeable as the Ten Commandments written on Sinai.

We sit here, and in the heat of debate and under the urge of politics we trifle with the most precious thing ever given to mankind, the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. President, it was no empty thing when I stood before the Vice President and swore to support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic—in the Government, as the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Bailey] suggests. May my right arm forget its cunning, and my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, if I ever by vote, word, or act cast aspersions upon that instrument, or bow down to the interpretation of it which is now advocated in some quarters.

If I were President of the United States or Governor of my State I would make it obligatory upon every school supported wholly or in part by public funds to teach the Constitution of the State and of the United States, the reserved and delegated powers of States, and the protection of the individual against the majority. I would make them draw a sharp comparison between the Government of the United States and the governments of other countries which are always in turmoil and confusion.

Mr. President, I will not vote one penny to this roving grand jury. It may do some good; but it is fraught with more evil in the years to come, to make us forget our States and their authority, and our courts and their authority. If the committee were investigating something particularly pertinent to Congress, it would be a different matter. As for me, I shall adhere to the fundamental principle of our dual form of government and the sacredness of the indileubiv

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is, Shall the resolution, as amended, be agreed to? [Putting the question.] The "ayes" seem to have it.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I ask for a division.

Mr. WAGNER rose.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and

The yeas and navs were ordered.

Mr. WAGNER. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams Sheppard Lee Lodge Ellender Andrews Shipstead Smith Lucas McCarran Ashurst George Stewart Austin Gerry Bailey Bankhead Guffey Gurney Mead Taft Minton Thomas, Utah Hale Harrison Townsend Truman Barkley Neely Bulow Nye O'Mahoney Burke Hatch Van Nuvs Wagner Walsh Byrd Hayden Pepper Pittman Byrnes Herring Johnson, Calif. Johnson, Colo. Radcliffe Russell Capper Clark, Mo. Wheeler White King La Follette Schwartz Schwellenbach Connally Danaher

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-eight Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

The question is, Shall the resolution, as amended, be agreed to?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, since I was engaged in the debate at an earlier stage of the proceedings this evening on the question whether $50,000 or $100,000 should be appropriated for the continuation of the work of the committee, I should like to announce that I am in a very embarrassing position in which a man is very rarely put, that of having listened to a very eloquent speech on the same side of the proposition on which he originally was and at the conclusion of that speech winding up on the other side of the question. Mr. President, the only question with me at the inception of the debate this evening was the question whether the committee should be granted $50,000 or $100,000. I think $50,000 is a liberal allowance for the committee between this time and the next session of Congress. The committee having spent $150,000 in the course of 3 years, it seems to me it is an act of effrontery on the part of the committee to come in and ask for $100,000 and to reject the offer of the Auditing Committee of $50,000.

Mr. President, after hearing the speech made by my very dear and distinguished friend from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] this evening, attacking the whole work of the committee and denying the right of the Senate of the United States to make an investigation into matters which most dearly concern the rights of citizens of the United States under the Bill of Rights and the Constitution of the United States, I am perfectly willing to vote for an appropriation of $200,000 if it is necessary. This is one of the few times in my life when I have listened to a very eloquent speech by a very dear friend of mine and have been completely convinced on the other side.

Mr. President, I say that if the committee had done nothing except to expose the violation of the rights of American citizens in Harlan County, Ky., it would have justified all the expenditures which have been made, and much more.

I glory in the statement of the Senator from Kentucky just a few minutes ago that he welcomed such investigations by a Senate committee or anybody else in Kentucky. I think we have some conditions in Missouri which may call for an investigation, and I shall welcome the committee into Missouri. I believe $50,000 is as much as the committee can legitimately spend before the beginning of the next session.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I gladly yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. As one who is more or less new in the United States Senate, and not knowing very much about the previous activities of this committee, I should like to ask the Senator from Missouri if he can answer the question as to how much money heretofore has been appropriated for the activities of the committee.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I heard the statement on the floor by the chairman of the committee, who is now in the Chair, that about $150,000 had been appropriated and spent.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, $150,000 has been appropriated and spent.

Mr. LUCAS. In what time?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. In 3 years; and I think the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate has been very liberal. I entirely agree with the committee that a further allowance of $50,000 is a very liberal allowance. That is the position with which I started in this debate; but I would not have it supposed for a minute that the fact that I think $50,000 is all the committee can legitimately spend before they have an opportunity to come back to the Congress and ask for more money is any reflection at all on the activities of the committee in investigating into conditions which have been a disgrace not only to certain States but to the United States.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President-

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. Am I to understand that a committee of this kind is appointed for the purpose of making an investigation upon which legislation may ultimately be predicated?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I understand that to be true. Mr. LUCAS. Has any legislation been initiated upon the part of the committee or of the Congress as the result of this 3 years' investigation?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President— Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I should be unable to say as to that. I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from Utah [Mr. Thomas], who is a member of the committee, to answer the question; but I can say, from experience as a member of certain investigating committees, that it is always very difficult for a committee to recommend legislation until they have had an opportunity of concluding their investigation.

Mr. LUCAS. Three years seems to me to be quite a little while.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. That, of course, depends on the length of time necessary for the investigation.

I am glad now to yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I call attention to the fact that on the calendar, as No. 941, there is Senate bill 1970, introduced by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE | and myself, a bill to eliminate certain oppressive labor practices affecting interstate and foreign commerce, and for other purposes.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator from Utah, if I may, how long that bill has been on the calendar?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The bill has been on the calendar, I should judge as the result of its number, about 3 or 4 weeks. The hearings on the bill were held during the rast 21/2 months; and it may be of interest to the Senator to know that no one appeared against the passage of the

Mr. LUCAS. Am I to understand that this one bill is the only piece of legislation which has been initiated upon the part of the special committee as a result of 3 years of investigation?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. It is the only piece of legislation which so far has found a place on the calendar of the Senate.

Mr. LUCAS. And, if I correctly understand, this additional money is for the purpose of continuing the investigation upon which legislation may be predicated in the future.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator from Illinois a question. Is the Senator in favor of cutting off this investigation?

Mr. LUCAS. I will say to the Senator from Missouri that I am trying to get some information in order that I may intelligently cast a vote upon the appropriation.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President-

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I am very glad indeed to yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I should like to ask the Senator whether he has taken into consideration the statement of the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Byrnes] that $50,000 has recently been especially earmarked in the appropriation bill for the investigation by the Department of Justice of violations of civil liberties, and whether the Senator thinks the Department is incompetent, and that that is an inadequate amount to serve this purpose.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I will say to the Senator from Alabama in all kindness to the Department of Justice that if the Department of Justice has earmarked $50,000 for this purpose during the past 2 months, it has been in response to the pressure of this Senate investigation. It is something that has been the duty of the Department of Justice for lo these many years, under Republican Attorneys General and under Democratic Attorneys General. If they have only done it in the past 2 months I should prefer to continue the activities of this committee, in order to be very certain that the Department of Justice will carry out those

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. HATCH. I desire to ask the Senator from Missouri if in this day, when civil liberties are practically eliminated from the face of the earth except in the United States of America, we can weigh the price of the civil liberties of any citizen of this country in dollars and cents?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I do not think it is possible for anybody to weigh the civil liberties of any single citizen of the United States. I rose at this time only for the purpose of emphasizing the fact that when I supported the committee amendment to cut this appropriation from $100,000 to $50,000 I did it not in criticism of the activities of the committee, but because I think $50,000 is a sufficient amount to allow the committee to continue until the next session. I think the committee has done a great work. I think if the committee had not done anything else, the exposure of conditions in Harlan County, Ky., are sufficient to have justified the whole amount of money which has been expended.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President-

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I am glad to yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. HATCH. Let me ask the Senator from Missouri whether he thinks it is part of the duty of the Congress of the United States to know, through its committees or otherwise, whether the civil liberties of the citizens of this country are being violated.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President, I think it is part of the duties of the Congress of the United States, the President of the United States, and all other Federal officials to be advised as to whether the rights guaranteed to citizens under the Constitution of the United States are being infringed. I think this committee has done a fine work in that respect, and I am very glad indeed to vote for a continuation of the committee; but I do think the $50,000 which is recommended by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate is entirely sufficient.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution, as amended. On that question the yeas and nays have been demanded and ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). Announcing my pair as on a previous roll call, I withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before with reference to my pair.

I vote "nay."

Mr. KING (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR], and withhold my vote, not knowing how the Senator from New Jersey would vote if present.

Mr. STEWART (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. Holman]. I am not advised as to how he would vote if present. Therefore,

I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass]. I do not know how he would vote on this question. I transfer my pair with him to the senior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. Frazier], who would vote "yea" if present, and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. TOWNSEND (after having voted in the negative). Has the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar] voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Tennessee. Since he has not voted, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senators from North Carolina [Mr. Balley and Mr. Reynolds], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Bilbo], the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. Brown], the Senators from Arkansas [Mrs. Caraway and Mr. MILLER], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Donahey], the Senator from California [Mr. Downey], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GREEN], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Hill], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Hughes], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Logan], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar], the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. Overton], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SLATTERY], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Smathers], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Typings] are necessarily detained from the Senate.

Mr. AUSTIN. REFUND FOR INTERNAL REVENUE LOST OR DESTROYED STAMPS

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, when the calendar was called a few days ago, Calendar No. 1026, House bill 1648, referring to the refund or credit for lost internal-revenue stamps, went over at the suggestion of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. La Follette]. I understand that it is now entirely agreeable that the matter be taken up.

This is a bill authorizing the refunding or credit on stamps for distilled liquor destroyed in the floods of 1936 and 1937. I do not think there will be any opposition to the bill, and I hope we may secure its passage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 1648) to provide for the refund or credit of the internal-revenue tax paid on spirits lost or rendered unmarketable by reason of the floods of 1936 and 1937 where such spirits were in possession of the original taxpayer or rectifier for bottling or use in rectification, under Government supervision, as provided by law and regulations.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That (a) the Commissioner of Internal Reve-Be it enacted, etc., That (a) the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is authorized and directed to make refund, or in lieu thereof, if he so elects, allow credit in the amount of the internal-revenue tax paid on spirits previously withdrawn and lost or rendered unmarketable or useless by reason of the floods of 1936 and 1937 while such spirits were in the possession of the person originally paying the said tax on such spirits, or while such spirits were in the while such spirits were in the possession of the person originally paying the said tax on such spirits, or while such spirits were in the possession of a rectifier for rectification or for bottling, or which have been used in the process of rectification, under Government supervision as provided by law and regulations. A claim for such tax shall be filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue within 30 days from the effective date of this act in which proof shall be furnished to his satisfaction that (1) the internal-revenue tax on such spirits was fully paid; (2) that the same were in the possession of the claimant as above set forth at the time of such loss; (3) that such spirits were lost or rendered unmarketable or useless by reason of damage sustained as the result of the aforesald flood conditions; (4) that such spirits so rendered unmarketable or useless have been destroyed; and (5) that claimant was not indemnified against such loss by any valid claim of insurance or otherwise.

(b) Where credit is allowed for the internal-revenue tax previously paid as aforesaid, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is authorized and directed to provide for the issuance of stamps to cover the spirits subsequently withdrawn to the extent of the credit so allowed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

(c) The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary, is authorized to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, this morning I laid an

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, this morning I laid an amendment on the table which I intended to propose to the bill. It grew out of a discovery in the conference on the social-security bill that an amendment which was accepted to that bill, which I had offered, was unfortunately limited in time, and I desire to offer the amendment to this revenue bill, which would put the amendment accepted heretofore by the Senate into effect for the whole period represented by the hurricane damage.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator that this is a House bill, and I should regret if any amendment put on it now would defer action on the part of the House. But I have been informed reliably that the House will be willing to accept the amendment, and I am willing to have it put into the bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. I thank the Senator from Kentucky.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Vermont which will be reported for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed to add the following new section at the end of the bill:

SEC. 2 No tax shall be collected under title VIII or IX of the Sec. 2 No tax shall be collected under title VIII or IX of the Social Security Act or under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act or the Federal Unemployment Tax Act, with respect to services rendered prior to January 1, 1940, in the employ of the owner or tenant of land, in salvaging timber on such land or clearing such land of brush and other debris left by a hurricane; and any such land of brush and other debris left by a hurricane; and any such tax heretofore collected (including penalty and interest with respect thereto, if any), shall be refunded in accordance with the provisions of law applicable in the case of erroneous or illegal collection of the tax. No interest shall be allowed or paid on the amount of any such refund. No payment shall be made under title II of the Social Security Act with respect to such services rendered prior to January 1, 1940.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, before the bill is acted upon. I call attention to an amendment intended to be proposed by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG].

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator from Vermont that the Senator from Michigan authorized me to withdraw that amendment, the matter having been taken care of in the report of the conferees on the social-security bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendment and the third reading of

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

INSPECTION OF RAINY LAKE WATERSHED

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Calendar 1160, Senate Resolution 170, authorizing an inspection of Rainy Lake watershed by a subcommittee of the Committee on Foreign Relations

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, may we have some explanation of the resolution?

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, the resolution deals with an examination of conditions resulting from flooding of border waters between the Dominion of Canada and the United States, in the area of the Rainy Lake watershed.

There is pending a treaty with Canada and at the request of members of the subcommittee who held hearings there is a desire to join the international joint commission in an examination into the adequacy of the proposed remedy provided in the treaty, to determine whether or not properties which have been flooded in the United States will be properly safeguarded under the provisions of the treaty.

Mr. RUSSELL. What is the investigation to cost?

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. We are asking for $1,400.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution (S. Res. 170) authorizing an inspection of Rainy Lake watershed by a subcommittee of the Committee on Foreign Relations which had been reported to the Senate with an amendment, on page 1, line 10, after the word "exceed", to insert, "$1,400", so as to make the resolution

Resolved, That the members of the subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee appointed by the chairman of such roreign Relations Committee appointed by the chairman of such committee to hold hearings on the proposed convention between the United States and Canada providing for emergency regulation of the level of Rainy Lake and of other boundary waters in the Rainy Lake watershed are authorized to make an inspection of the region to which the provisions of such convention are applicable. The expenses incurred by said Senators in making such inspection, the aggregate amount of which shall not exceed $1,400 shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman of such subcommittee. approved by the chairman of such subcommittee.

MILITARY AND NAVAL ESTABLISHMENTS OF AMERICAN REPUBLICS

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 1118, House Joint Resolution 367, to authorize the Secretaries of War and of the Navy to assist the governments of American republics to increase their military and naval establishments, and for other purposes.

Mr. President, this measure has been before the Committee on Foreign Relations, I think, for two sessions, and the committee has held several hearings on the subject. The Secretary of State and other officials of the Department have appeared, and representatives of the Army and Navy have also testified.

In short, the joint resolution provides that the navy yards of the United States and the arsenals may, in the discretion of the President, through the Army and the Navy, enter into contracts with Latin American republics to build vessels for them, to construct armaments for those vessels, and to construct for them antiaircraft guns and coast-defense weapons. That is the extent of it.

The joint resolution also, of course, contains provisions and exceptions and limitations, that the work shall not be done if it is at any expense to our Government, or if it entails any credit upon the part of our Government, that it shall not be done if it violates any treaty of the United States, and it shall not be done if it interferes with or delays our Government in the full use of its own facilities for its own purposes.

I may say frankly that there are Senators on the Committee on Foreign Relations, for whom we have the highest regard and whose opinions are worthy of every confidence, who have doubt as to the wisdom of the enactment of the proposed legislation at the present time. That is a matter which should be considered and will be considered. If the joint resolution shall be taken up for consideration. in view of the fact that three of the four Senators to whom I have referred are absent, I will ask to have it temporarily laid aside and proceeded with tomorrow when the Senate convenes

Under the circumstances I have stated, it being considered a matter of vital importance on behalf of our Army and Navy and the State Department, I ask that the measure be considered and voted on tomorrow.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I ask the Senator whether we are to understand that he desires to leave his motion as the pending business when we recess tonight?

Mr. PITTMAN. If the motion shall be agreed to, I will ask leave to have the joint resolution temporarily laid aside until the Senate convenes tomorrow.

Mr. BARKLEY. What the Senator from Nevada wishes is to have the joint resolution made the unfinished business, not to be taken up for action tonight, but put over until tomorrow. Of course, it would be subject to be laid aside for the consideration of conference reports.

Mr. PITTMAN. Exactly.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, we could not over on this side understand what the motion of my colleague was.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will please be in order. The question is on the motion of the senior Senator from Nevada to proceed to the consideration of House Joint Resolution 367, the title of which will be reported for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. The resolution (H. J. Res. 367) to authorize the Secretaries of War and of the Navy to assist the governments of American republics to increase their military and naval establishments, and for other purposes.

Mr. McCARRAN. I take it that if the motion is agreed to the consideration of the joint resolution may go over until the next meeting of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understood the senior Senator from Nevada to announce that if the motion were agreed to he would ask that the joint resolution be temporarily laid aside until tomorrow. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the senior Senator from Nevada.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

TONGUE RIVER STORAGE RESERVOIR

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar 933, House bill 5506, relating to the Tongue River Storage Reservoir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5506) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to contract with the State Water Conservation Board of Montana and the Tongue River Water Users' Association for participation in the costs and benefits of the Tongue River Storage Reservoir project for the benefit of lands on the Tongue River Indian Reservation, Mont., which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NATIONAL CENSUS OF HOUSING

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2240) to provide for a national census of housing, which were, on page 1, lines 3 and 4, to strike out "character" and insert "characteristics (including utilities and equipment)"; on the same page, line 5, to strike out all after the name "States" down to and including the word "legislation" in line 8; on the same page, line 12, after the word "with", to insert a comma and "at the same time, and as a part of"; on page 2, line 1, to strike out all after "census" down to and including "census" in line 3; on the same page, line 4, to strike out the word "make" and insert "collect"; on the same page, line 4, to strike out "studies" and insert "statistics"; and on the same page, line 15, to strike out "$8,500,000" and insert "$8,000,000".

Mr. WAGNER. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

EPES TRANSPORTATION CORPORATION

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1042) for the relief of the Epes Transportation Corporation, which was, on page 2, line 4, to strike out all after "Provided" down to and including "$1,000", in line 14 and insert "That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

Mr. BYRD. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

REGULATION OF REAL ESTATE BROKERS

Mr. KING. Mr. President, several days ago the Senate passed a bill, reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia, dealing with corporations in this city, including cemeteries under control of the District.

It went to the House, and the House struck out the words dealing with the cemeteries in one part of the bill, but omitted to strike them out in the other part of the bill, and sent the bill back. That necessitates further consideration, and the committee reports the House bill and moves to strike out the provision which it was intended to strike out but which inadvertently was not done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the bill reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia?

Mr. KING. Yes; Mr. President. I report back favorably from the Committee on the District of Columbia House bill 5685, to amend the act for the creation of a real-estate commission in the District of Columbia and for other purposes, and I ask for the present consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5685) to amend the act of Congress entitled "An act to define, regulate, and license real-estate brokers, business-chance brokers, and real-estate salesmen; to create a Real Estate Commission in the District of Columbia; to protect the public against fraud in real-estate transactions; and for other purposes," approved August 25, 1937; which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment, on page 3, line 9, after the word "estate" to strike out "or any interest or right therein, either as an investment or for use thereof for burial purposes."

So as to make the bill read:

"An act to define, regulate, and license real-estate brokers, real-estate salesmen, business-chance brokers, and business-chance salesmen; to create a Real Estate Commission in the District of Columbia; to protect the public against fraud in real-estate transactions and in real-estate promotions and in business-chance transactions; and for other purposes."

SEC. 2. Section 1 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows: "Section 1. That on and after 90 days from the date of enactment of this act it shall be unlawful in the District of Columbia for any person, firm, partnership, copartnership, association, or corporation (foreign or domestic) to act as a real-estate broker, real-estate salesman, business-chance broker or business-chance salesman, or to advertise or assume to act as such, without a license issued by the Real Estate Commission of the District of Columbia."

HARRY BRYAN AND OTHERS

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I ask for the present consideration of House bill 377, Calendar No. 1173.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from West Virginia?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 377) to amend the act entitled "An act for the relief of Harry Bryan and Alda Duffield Mullins, and others."

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I wish to make a brief statement regarding the bill.

On the 7th day of November 1936 a number of Works Progress Administration employees at Gassaway, W. Va., negligently so overheated a tar barrel that it exploded, and in the ensuing fire a child was burned. The burned child was so seriously injured that it soon afterward died. Sixteen others were injured, some to such an extent that as many as 10 blood transfusions were required. A number of them have been maimed and ruined for life.

The Senate and the House passed different bills 2 years ago compensating the various claimants, 17 in number, for their injuries and granting compensation for the one wrongful death.

The Senate bill provided for the payment of the doctor's bills and the hospital treatments. The House refused to concur in that provision of the bill, but approved the remainder of the Senate bill.

In conference the conferees restored the Senate provision, under which the medical expenses would be paid. In writing up the conference report the clerk of one or the other of the committees made a mistake, and the bill as reported to both the House and the Senate omitted the provisions for the payment of the medical expenses and the hospital bills. The purpose of the pending bill is solely to correct the mistake that was made by the draftsman of the conference report 2 years ago. I hope it will pass.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REV. FRANCIS X. QUINN

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, from the Committee on the Library, I report favorably House bill 7389, and ask for its present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7389) to provide for the presentation of a medal to Rev. Francis X. Quinn in recognition of his valor in saving the lives of two of his fellow citizens, which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REQUEST FOR PERMISSION TO PRINT IN THE APPENDIX

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I send to the desk a unanimous-consent request and ask for its present consid-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request will be reported for the information of the Senate.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Mr. Barkley. Mr. President, to prevent the exclusion of matter that is entitled to be incorporated in the Record, I ask that permission be given to have printed in the Appendix such material as speeches, editorials, summaries of the laws enacted this sesand memoranda from the executive departments or agencies of the Government. I make this statement with a view of co-operating with Senators who may wish to submit proper ma-terial after the conclusion of the session.

Mr. AUSTIN. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont objects.

ACTING SECRETARY OF THE NAVY

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I introduced a joint resolution, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be read for the information of the Senate.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 185) to authorize The Assistant Secretary of the Navy to continue to serve as Acting Secretary of the Navy until the appointment of a Secretary, and for other purposes, was read the first time by its title, and the second time at length, as follows:

"Resolved, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions of section 180, Revised Statutes, The Assistant Secretary of the Navy may continue to serve as Acting Secretary of the Navy until such time as a Secretary of the Navy shall be appointed to succeed the late Secretary of the Navy, the Honorable Claude A. Swanson, deceased; and the provisions of section 1761, Revised Statutes, shall not be applicable to an appointment to fill the existing vacancy in said office."

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I may explain the reason for presenting the joint resolution at this time. It will be noted that there are two parts to it. The first provides authority for The Assistant Secretary to continue to serve as Acting Secretary of the Navy. Under existing law a temporary appointment to an executive office where vacancy occurs by reason of death or resignation cannot continue for more than 30 days, so that at the end of 30 days after the death of Secretary of the Navy Swanson the President would be compelled to name a Secretary of the Navy. The joint resolution would permit the President to continue for more than 30 days The Assistant Secretary of the Navy as Acting Secretary of the Navy.

The second portion of the resolution provides that the President may, during the recess of the Senate, make an appointment of Secretary of the Navy, and that the Secretary of the Navy whom he may appoint will not be subject to the existing law which prevents him from being paid any salary from the Public Treasury.

It so happens that the Judiciary Committee of the Senate have reported a bill, which is on the calendar, though of course it cannot be passed during the present session, which would permit the President to do the very thing that the pending joint resolution would authorize him to do insofar as the appointment of a Secretary of the Navy is concerned, and would permit the person so appointed to have the benefit of the salary during the period of time the Senate is not in session. But there is no provision in that bill, which, of course, cannot become a law anyway, which would give the President an extension of the time within which to make a permanent appointment.

The purpose of the joint resolution is, first, that the President be given authority to continue The Assistant Secretary as the Acting Secretary for longer than 30 days, and I am informed that the President expects to make an appointment within 60 days; and, second, when he does make an appointment, it makes the same provision to take care of the situation that would be made if the bill now pending should be passed. Whoever the President names will be entitled to receive the salary.

All I want to say, in addition to what I have said in connection with this matter, is that I assume that every Member of this body realizes the situation in the world today and in the United States, and if there was ever a time when the President ought to be given sufficient time to make a selection of someone to be Secretary of the Navy it is now. It would be unfortunate, in my opinion, if we took any action that would prevent him from making an appointment of a Secretary of the Navy between now and the convening of the next session of Congress.

I repeat that if the bill which has been reported from the Judiciary Committee had become a law, the President could have made the appointment in 30 days after the Secretary of the Navy died, and the appointee would be compensated for his services.

I ask for immediate action on the joint resolution.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, to me it seems there is an important principle involved in this request, and I think the Senate should recognize it at the time it grants the request, as I rather expect it will do, and that is a principle affecting the appointing power. If it is possible for the Chief Executive to make appointments in vacation which will hold until the end of the next session, under which appointments the appointees may enjoy the same emoluments as an appointee who has been confirmed by the United States Senate, then there can be a succession of Executive appointments which will exclude the Senate from its duty and its responsibility with respect to the filling of vacancies and the appointment of high officers of this Government, which the people in creating the Government found to be better cared for by a joint power exercised by the President by and with the consent and advice of the Senate.

I shall not object to this particular request because, as the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts has indicated, there is a special reason for making it at this time, and further, because there is pending in the Senate at the present time Senate bill 2773, introduced by the senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. Ashurst], covering the subject of compensation of appointees. It divides up the time a little differently from the practice followed heretofore.

Mr. President, I ask in connection with what I have said to have inserted in the RECORD a copy of Senate bill 2773, with the amendments proposed thereto.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 2773), with proposed amendments, is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1761 of the Revised Statutes be,

and it is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 1761. No money shall be paid from the Treasury, as salary, to any person appointed during the recess of the Senate, to fill a vacancy in any existing office, if the vacancy existed while the Senate was in session and was by law required to be filled by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, until such appointee has been confirmed by the Senate. The provisions of this section shall not apply (a) If the vacancy arose within 30 days prior to the termination of the session of the Senate; or (b) if, at the time of the termination of the session of the Senate, a nomination for such office other than the nomination of a person appointed during the preceding recess of the Senate was pending before the Senate for its advice and consent; or (c) if a nomination for such office was rejected by the Senate within 30 days prior to the termination of the session and a person other than the one whose nomination was rejected thereafter receives a recess commission: Provided, That a nomination to fill such vacancy under (a), (b), or (c) hereof shall be submitted to the Senate not later than 40 days after the commencement of the next succeeding session of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the joint resolution was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXPENSES IN CONNECTION WITH THE FUNERAL OF THE LATE SECRETARY SWANSON

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in connection with the proceedings which have just taken place, there is on the calendar a report from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate on Senate Resolution 157, authorizing the payment of certain expenses incurred by the committee appointed to arrange the funeral of the late Secretary Swanson in the Senate Chamber. It involves only a small amount and has nothing to do with the general funeral expenses.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 157) submitted by Mr. Glass on July 11, 1939, was considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the contingent fund of the Senate the actual and necessary expenses incurred by the committee appointed by the Vice President in arranging for and attending the funeral of Hon. Claude A. Swanson, late Secretary of the Navy, and former Senator from the State of Virginia, and vouchers to be approved by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

MRS. S. F. SEWELL

Mr. McCARRAN obtained the floor.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield for a question.

Mr. GEORGE. No, Mr. President. I have been standing here for quite a while seeking to get the attention of two Presiding Officers, and I will exercise my right to object to any request for action unless I may be recognized for the presentation of a small claims bill. It is a House bill. I was detained all morning in conference. That is my only reason for asking the opportunity to present the matter at this time.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. We have been in session practically 12 hours today, and we must have another session tomorrow. I was hoping we could recess rather soon.

Mr. McCARRAN. Under the circumstances, I would rather have the Senator from Georgia take the floor.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, the matter because of which I have been standing here for half an hour could have been disposed of long ago.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator may have the floor now. Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate House bill 6099, and that it be considered at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title. The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 6099) for the relief of Mrs. S. F. Sewell, reported favorably from the Committee on Claims.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PARKING METERS, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the House has passed House bill 5405, a bill authorizing the installation of parking meters in the District of Columbia. The Senate committee has considered the bill and has authorized me to report it back with an amendment striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof provisions which have been agreed upon by the committees of both the House and the Senate. I ask for its present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5405) authorizing the installation of parking meters and other devices on the streets of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia, with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized and empowered, in their discretion, to secure and to install, at no expense to the said District, mechanical parking meters or devices on the streets, avenues, roads, highways, and other public spaces in the District of Columbia under the jurisdiction and control of said Commissioners (in addition to those mechanical parking meters or devices installed pursuant to the authority conferred on the said Commissioners by sec. 11, p. 40, Public, No. 458, 75th Cong., 3d sess., approved April 4, 1938); and said Commissioners are authorized and empowered to make and enforce rules and regulation for the control of the parking of vehicles on such streets, avenues, roads, highways, and other public spaces, and as an aid to such regulation and control of the parking of vehicles the Commissioners may prescribe fees for the privilege of parking vehicles where said meters or devices are installed.

Sec. 2. In purchasing meters under the terms of this act, the Commissioners may purchase 50 percent of the manually operated type meter, subject, however, to specifications to be approved by the National Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF BANKRUPTCY STATUTES

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I ask that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 1092, Senate bill 1935.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the bill by title.

The Legislative Clerk. A bill (S. 1935) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, that is a rather controversial measure, involving the matter of bankruptcy. It seems to me a bill of that character ought not to be taken up at this time of night.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I will explain that this is what is known as the Frazier-Lemke bill. The duty fell to me, as chairman of a subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee, of considering the bill. We did consider it. We reported it to the full committee, and the report of the full committee is before the Senate.

I wish to say, in fairness to the leader of the majority, that on yesterday I took it up with him, and he thought it was controversial. I think it is controversial; but at the same time, if I could get it through without any controversy, I should like to do it now.

Mr. BARKLEY. It would not then be controversial. I appreciate the Senator's wishes about the matter. However, at this time of night, when Senators are exhausted, it seems to me a bill of this nature ought not to be taken up. I hope the Senator will let it go over until tomorrow.

Mr. McCARRAN. I will let it go over until tomorrow.

EXTENSION OF LIFE OF JOINT RESOLUTION TO INVESTIGATE PHOSPHATE RESOURCES

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 182, which has been reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate. It merely contemplates the extension of the life of the joint committee which was appointed at the last session of Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be stated by title.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. Joint resolution (S. J. Res. 182) to amend Public Resolution No. 112, Seventy-fifth Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the joint resolution was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the study required to be made by the Joint Committee to Investigate the Adequacy and Use of the Phosphate Resources of the United States pursuant to Public Resolution Numbered 112, Seventy-fifth Congress, shall include potash and related minerals, and the life of the committee and the time for making its final report is extended to January 15, 1940. 15, 1940.

The further expenses of the committee, which shall not exceed $5,000, shall be paid one-half from the contingent funds of the Senate and one-half from the contingent fund of the House of Representatives upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the committee.

ADDITIONAL PETITIONS

Mr. WAGNER presented a petition of sundry citizens, being actors and artists, of New York, N. Y., praying for the full restoration of the theater project under the W. P. A., which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of New York, N. Y., being architects, engineers, and chemists, praying for the restoration of wages, full employment, and the theater project under the W. P. A., and also the enactment of the so-called Sabath-Murray bill, which was ordered to lie on the table.

EMERGENCY RELIEF APPROPRIATION ACT OF 1939—RESOLUTION OF DEPARTMENT OF CONNECTICUT, AMERICAN LEGION

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a resolution adopted at the Twenty-first Annual Department Convention of the American Legion, at Bridgeport, Conn.

There being no objection, the resolution was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939 pro vides that "there shall be removed from employment on Work Projects Administration projects all relief workers, excepting vetreligible to be restored to employment on such projects until after (a) the expiration of 30 days after the date of his removal, and (b) recertification of his eligibility for restoration to employment

FRIDAY, AUGUST 4, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., pastor of Gunton Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

Infinite and Eternal God, with bowed heads and uncovered hearts we come into Thy presence. We thank Thee for the revelation which Thou hast made of Thyself as a prayer-answering God, and that our ceaseless needs do not exhaust Thy patience.

We pray that we may be more sensitive to Thee and the great spiritual realities, for Thou art the light of the hearts that know Thee, the life of the souls that love Thee, and the strength of the minds that seek Thee; from whom to turn away is to fall, but in whom to abide is to stand fast forever.

Wilt Thou also make us more tender in our relationship to our fellow men. Fill us with a capacity and a longing to enter, sympathetically and helpfully, into the experiences and needs of our countrymen and mankind everywhere. O God, what are we here for if not to make life less difficult for one another and so fulfill the law of Christ.

Hear our prayer for the sake of the great Burden Bearer who went about doing good. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

H. NEWLIN MEGILL

The SPEAKER. The Chair will ask the clerk to read the following letter from the Clerk of the House:

Office of the Clerk, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., August 4, 1939.

The Honorable WILLIAM B. BANKHEAD,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Sir: Desiring to be temporarily absent from my office, I hereby designate Mr. H. Newlin Megill, an official in my office, to sign any and all papers for me which he would be authorized to sign by virtue of this designation and of clause 4, rule III, of the House. Respectfully yours, SOUTH TRIMBLE. Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I have two unanimousconsent requests at the Clerk's desk.

APPOINTMENT OF COMMISSIONS AND COMMITTEES

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the first unanimous-consent request.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. RAYBURN asks unanimous consent that notwithstanding the adjournment of the first session of the Seventy-sixth Congress, the Speaker be, and is hereby, authorized to appoint commissions and committees authorized by law or by the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

GENERAL PERMISSION TO REVISE AND EXTEND REMARKS IN THE RECORD

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the second unanimous-consent request.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. RAYBURN asks unanimous consent that all Members of the House shall have the privilege until the last edition authorized by the Joint Committee on Printing is published to extend and revise their own remarks in the Congressional Recorp, on more than one subject if they so desire, and may also include therein such short quotations as may be necessary to explain or complete such extensions of remarks, but this order shall not apply to any subject matter which may have converted to the property of the state. subject matter which may have occurred or to any speech delivered subsequent to the adjournment of Congress.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I think if the majority leader would look at the RECORD for the last 2 or 3 weeks he would notice that it is probably the largest record we have had for a number of years. It is certainly the largest I have seen published in the 9 years I have been in Congress. If we are going to continue to increase the size of the RECORD, that is a responsibility of the majority leader and, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that this is a pretty broad unanimous-consent request. While I realize that I have the right to object, I have been anxious to work with the majority leader whenever it has seemed proper for me to do so, but there is so much of this legislation and so many things included I just could not stand for it, Mr. Majority Leader, and that is the reason we have had to object to a lot of it. As to this unanimous-consent request I presume that many Members would like to insert things in the RECORD and as long as it pertains to Congress and the things that are transpiring in Congress, I think they should have that right, but when they go far afield and put in things that pertain to their own districts and pertain to the States, I question sometimes whether it is not a pretty broad unanimous-consent request.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, this is the usual unanimous-consent request and it does not go far afield at all. It allows only those things that pertain to an explanation of what the Member wants to get in the RECORD so that it may be understood.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield.

Mr. LUDLOW. If this request is granted, when will it become operative?

Mr. RAYBURN. It becomes operative immediately.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman yield? I make this reservation to make certain that the gentleman does not intend by this request that any Member can include in his remarks or extension of remarks quotations from any reports that are in controversy. I have in mind a matter that came up the other day in connection with some remarks of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH]. If it is understood that quotations from reports of committees of Congress shall be from such reports only as have been submitted officially and printed as documents by order of the House or Congress, by law, or pursuant to the rules of the House, may be included in such extensions, I would have no objection; otherwise I would have to object. I want to make it clear I do not object to an ordinary resolution.

Mr. RAYBURN. And to explain his position on any matter. That is right.

Mr. CHURCH. The request is too broad in this respect: The request submitted would permit the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] to extend his remarks and to include controversial parts of a report that has not yet been signed by the members of his committee now out of existence, and there is every indication of its never being signed because of libel in it and other matters. The gentleman from Illinois did include in his remarks a few days ago under a privilege to revise and extend, but not under a privilege to extend and revise to include extraneous matter, a long column from the so-called Sabath report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?
Mr. CHURCH. Until there is a definite understanding and agreement in that respect, Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. The Chair feels inclined to state for the benefit of all Members that this unanimous-consent request speaks for itself and it is not up to the majority leader or the Chair to interpret the question.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, until the request is amended or changed, I object.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague, Mr. Crowther, be permitted to extend his remarks by publishing an article by Millard E. Brown.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? There was no objection.

UNITED STATES EMPLOYMENT SERVICE RECORD

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 4108) to provide for the transfer of United States Employment Service records, files, and property in local offices to the States, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Senate amend-

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 1, line 9, strike out "Secretary of Labor" and insert "Federal Security Administrator."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on concurring in the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendment was concurred in was laid on the table.

GOODS PRODUCED IN STATE AND FEDERAL PRISONS

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table Senate Joint Resolution 59, authorizing the Bureau of Labor Statistics to collect information as to amount and value of all goods produced in State and Federal prisons, and consider the same.

The SPEAKER. The gentlewoman from New Jersey asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of House Joint Resolution 59, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That for the purpose of furnishing information to the Congress regarding the amount of goods produced in State and Federal prisons, the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor is authorized and directed to collect information concerning the amount and value of all goods produced in State and Federal prisons, showing separately the amount and value of goods produced under the State-use, State-account, contract, and piece-price systems.

For the purpose of making this study, there is berely authorized.

For the purpose of making this study, there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $20,000. The Commissioner of Labor Statistics is directed to submit the report to the Congress on or before May 1, 1940.

With the following committee amendment:

Line 7, after the word "the", insert "character, kind, type."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Will this entail any expense upon the part of the Federal Government?

Mrs. NORTON. There is included a small appropriation which the Secretary of Labor believes absolutely necessary in order to collect this information, which seems very important to determine the amount and value of prison-made goods in competition with industry.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. And there is no other way of collecting this information?

Mrs. NORTON. That is my understanding.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Is the full Committee on Labor in accord with this?

Mrs. NORTON. It is a unanimous report from the committee.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object, to ask the gentlewoman from New Jersey a question. The Central Statistical Board which was established, and of which the Secretary of Labor is a member, gathers all this data. I think the gentlewoman from New Jersey will recognize that this will be duplication of work. If it is not, will the gentlewoman state whether the Central Statistical Board is the proper set-up to get this information?

Mrs. NORTON. I simply say to the gentleman that the resolution would enable the Department of Labor to procure up-to-date information on the amount, kind, and type of goods produced in State and Federal prisons.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, the Central Statistical Board was set up 3 or 4 years ago by this administration to make that very inquiry, and the Secretary of Labor is a member of that Board. I do not think that the Department of Labor should go into this when we have a board already set up to find that information.

Mrs. NORTON. This is in complete accordance with the Secretary of Labor. The Secretary of Labor desires to get this bill enacted into law.

Mr. RICH. The Secretary of Labor is a member of that Board and that is where she should go to get the information. Mr. Speaker, I object.

BOUNDARY BETWEEN STATES OF IOWA AND MISSOURI

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table Senate Joint Resolution 181, giving the consent of Congress to an agreement between the States of Iowa and Missouri establishing a boundary between said States and consider the same.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution. The Clerk read as follows:

Senate Joint Resolution 181

Whereas under date of December 13, 1937, the State of Missouri commenced suit against the State of Iowa in the Supreme Court of the United States for the purpose of determining the boundary line between the county of Clark in the State of Missouri and the county of Lee in the State of Iowa; and

Whereas by stipulation filed in the said Supreme Court of the United States, it was proposed that the Legislature of Iowa and the Legislature of Missouri pass like bills, the State of Missouri waiving and relinquishing to the State of Iowa all jurisdiction to lands lying north and east of the Des Moines River, now in the county of Clark, State of Missouri, and the State of Iowa waiving and relinquishing to the State of Missouri all lands lying south and west of the Des Moines River, and now in the county of Lee, State of Iowa, and that said acts be submitted to the Congress of the west of the Des Moines River, and now in the county of Lee, State of Iowa, and that said acts be submitted to the Congress of the United States for its approval; and

Whereas in accordance with said stipulation, the Forty-eighth General Assembly of the State of Iowa did at such session pass such act, this act being known and designated as House File No. 651, Acts of the Forty-eighth General Assembly of Iowa, bearing the signatures of John R. Irwin, speaker of the house; Bourke B. Hickenlooper, president of the senate; and the signature and approval of George A. Wilson, Governor of Iowa, under date of April 18, 1939, said act being thereupon properly published and becoming law under date of April 23, 1939; and

Whereas said act provided in substance that the Des Moines River in its present course as heretofore declared by the Congress of the United States shall be and remain the true boundary line between the State of Missouri and the State of Iowa; that the State of Iowa relinquishes all jurisdiction to all lands in Lee County lying south and west of the Des Moines River, being south and east of the east and west boundary line between the States of Iowa and Missouri, and that the effective date of the relinquishment of jurisdiction shall be as of midnight of the 31st day of December following the passage of the act of Congress approving the relinquishment of jurisdiction; and

Whereas in accordance with stipulation as aforesaid, the Sixtleth General Assembly of the State of Missouri did, at such session,

General Assembly of the State of Missouri did, at such session, pass a like act, this act being known and designated as senate bill 350 of the acts of the Sixtieth General Assembly of Missouri and bearing the signature and approval of Lloyd C. Stark, Governor of Missouri, under date of June 16, 1939; and
Whereas said act provides in substance that the Des Moines

Missouri, under date of June 16, 1939; and
Whereas said act provides in substance that the Des Moines
River shall be the true boundary line as between Missouri and Iowa; that the State of Missouri relinquishes all jurisdiction to all lands lying north and east of the Des Moines River and that the effective date of the relinquishment of jurisdiction over the land herein described shall be as of midnight of the 31st day of December following the passage of the act of Congress approving the relinquishment of jurisdiction; and
Whereas the said acts of the States of Iowa and Missouri constitute an agreement between said States establishing a boundary between said States: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the consent of the Congress is hereby given to such agreement and to the establishment of such boundary; and said acts of the States of Iowa and Missouri are hereby approved.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There was no objection.

The joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ADDITIONAL CLERICAL SERVICE IN THE ENROLLING ROOM

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk House Resolution 293, a resolution usually presented at this stage of the session, and ask its consideration.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 293

Resolved, That there shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House of Representatives during the closing days of the present session not to exceed $200 for additional clerical services in the enrolling room.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen of the House, a few moments ago my colleague from Illinois, Mr. CHURCH, rose I think for the fourth time objecting to the extension of remarks because I might insert something from a report which, for technical reasons, has not been filed. I want to assure you I can say much more without fear of libel than the report contains, but I would like to know why he is so afraid that the report should be published. I am not afraid to publish it and people should know what the facts were.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SABATH. Yes; I yield. Mr. CHURCH. If the other members of the gentleman's committee are willing to sign that report, that would be another matter; but up to the present time not one member of that committee other than yourself has been willing to sign it.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman is in error again.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

COPIES OF HEARINGS ON THE NEUTRALITY LAW

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, from the Committee on Printing I report (H. Rept. No. 1454) favorably, without amendment, a privileged resolution (H. Res. 288) authorizing the House Committee on Foreign Affairs to have printed additional copies of the hearings on the proposed amendments to the present neutrality law and related legislation affecting the foreign policy of the United States, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 288

Resolved, That, in accordance with paragraph 3 of section 2 of the Printing Act, approved March 1, 1907, the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to have printed for its use 900 copies of the hearings held before said committee during the current session on bills and resolutions "Proposing amendments to the present neutrality law and related legislation affecting the foreign policy of the United States."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

ADDITIONAL FACILITIES ON THE CANAL ZONE

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 5129) authorizing and providing for the construction of additional facilities on the Canal Zone for the purposes of more adequately providing for the defense of the Panama Canal and for increasing its capacity for the future needs of interoceanic shipping with Senate amendments, and concur in the Senate amend-

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 2, line 6, after "purpose", insert "Provided, however, That I new personnel in such construction work occupying skilled, technical, clerical, administrative, and supervisory positions shall be citizens of the United States."

Page 2, line 6, after "Provided", insert "jurther."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, as I understand it, this amendment proceeds along the line of the Schafer and Starnes amendments, for which there was so much support in the House.

Mr. BLAND. It proceeds along the line of the Starnes amendment. The Schafer amendment would have extended it a great deal further and would have involved a very serious question on all kinds of labor.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. This applies to what? Mr. BLAND. Supervisory, technical, engineering, and positions of that kind. I think it is practically the same thing as the Starnes amendment.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I think it is a very good amendment and I am glad to support it.

Mr. SABATH. Reserving the right to object, I did not hear the request of the gentleman.

Mr. BLAND. I asked unanimous consent to concur in the Senate amendment, which is practically the same as the Starnes amendment, offered in the House, which provides that all new personnel in such construction work, skilled, technical, clerical, administrative, and supervisory positions shall be citizens of the United States. My understanding is that it was agreed to by the labor representatives.

Mr. SABATH. That will eliminate the objections that have been raised by the Federation of Labor?

Mr. BLAND. I think so.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, we have 11,000,000 unemployed people in America. Does the gentleman think that would be a good opportunity to employ a few hundred thousand of the people on relief?

Mr. BLAND. I wish it were true, but conditions are such as to housing and health facilities, and so forth, that I would be very much afraid to go farther than this at this time. I would like to do it.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I have no objection, Mr. Speaker.

PROHIBITING THE MAINTENANCE OF OFF-SHORE GAMBLING ESTABLISHMENTS

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 7235) to prohibit the maintenance of gambling establishments within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this is a bill on which the Committee on the Judiciary held hearings. The committee is unanimously in favor of the bill. It has the support of the Department of Justice and other departments affected, and it is most important that it should be enacted as an emergency measure at this time. Am I correct?

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I may say to the gentleman from Michigan that he is entirely correct. The Treasury Department, the Department of Commerce, and the State Department have all cooperated with the Judiciary Committee in the drawing of the bill and have urgently asked its passage.

Mr. LELAND M. FORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHENER. I yield.

Mr. LELAND M. FORD. These gambling ships, Mr. Speaker, are right in my front yard, off Santa Monica, Calif. They are defying the power of the United States Government; they are defying the power of the government of California; they are defying the Attorney General of the United States, the attorney general of California, the district attorney of Los Angeles County, the sheriff of Los Angeles County; have turned hoses on the officers and refused to let them board the ship. Many people have just recently been violently attacked and badly beaten by strongarm men on these ships. Their jaws have been badly broken, necessitating weeks of hospitalization. Two people have been killed. I hope this House will help us by passing this bill and give to my section that measure of the protection they themselves would like to have in their respective sections or districts.

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I shall not object with the understanding that under this procedure I may have the right to offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman would be entitled to that privilege.

Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as

Be it enacted, etc., That the Criminal Code of the United States be amended by inserting after section 287 the following section: "Sec. 287A. Such penalty shall constitute a lien on such vessel, and proceedings to enforce such lien may be brought summarily by way of libel in any court of the United States having jurisdiction thereof. Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendments offered by Mr. Gever of California: Page 1, line 4, strike out "section" and insert in lieu thereof "sections."

Page 2, after line 15, insert:
"Sec. 287B. Whoever shall knowingly transport or cause to be transported in interstate or foreign commerce any roulette wheel, gambling outfit, loaded dice, marked cards, or any machine, apparatus, or mechanical device designed or adapted for the playing paratus, or mechanical device designed or adapted for the playing of any game of chance for money or other thing of value, or whoever shall receive, possess, or dispose of any article which has been transported in violation of this section, knowing the same to have been so transported, shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction thereof shall be subject to a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than 2 years, or both such fine and imprisonment. As used in this section the term 'interstate or foreign commerce' means commerce between any State, District, Territory, or possession of the United States and any place outside of such State District, Territory, or possession." place outside of such State, District, Territory, or possession.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order against the amendment on the ground that it is not germane. The bill under consideration concerns the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States, whereas the amendment deals with matters of interstate commerce, the transportation or carriage of so-called roulette wheels, marked dice, and other paraphernalia used in games of chance across State borders. For this reason it is not germane to the bill.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from California desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Speaker, I believe my amendment is germane because it has to do with the same general subject dealt with by the bill, gambling.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is ready to rule. For the reason stated by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Celler] the Chair sustains the point of order.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RE H. R. 7235

Mr. CELLER. This bill was reported out by the Judiciary Committee unanimously. Its primary purpose is to prohibit gambling establishments within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States.

It would appear that at the present time, four ships are anchored a little more than 3 miles beyond the coast of California, in the vicinity of Los Angeles. These ships are the S. S. Rex, the S. S. Tango, the S. S. Showboat, and the S. S. Texas. They are operated by four distinct corporations incorporated in the State of Nevada, which, apparently, is the only State in the Union that legalizes gambling. About 100 "taxi" motorboats journey to and from these ships from the wharf at Santa Monica. The gamblers in control of these ships hire these motorboats to convey patrons to said ships which are beyond the 3-mile limit, and no charge is made for such "taxi" service. These ships are maintained solely for gambling purposes. They fly the American flag. The State of California is powerless to act legally because the jurisdiction of the State is confined to 3 miles from the low-water mark. As many as 6,000 persons board each of these ships of a Saturday night, a total of 24,000. Hundreds of thousands of dollars pass hands.

California heretofore passed a statute making it a criminal offense, as I understand it, for these "taxi" boats to ply their trade. The highest court of the State declared this statute unconstitutional because the ultimate destination of these boats was beyond the 3-mile limit and, therefore, outside of the jurisdiction of the State. California now appeals to us for help.

I herewith submit a telegram addressed to the Judiciary Committee, under date of July 28, 1939, by the Attorney General of the State of California:

Your favorable consideration of gambling-ship legislation is earnestly requested. California with approximately 1,000 miles of shore line is particularly vulnerable to the activities of such ships which have no other purpose than to nullify the State laws against illegal gambling. By anchoring more than 3 miles from the purpose that the propose of the purpose of the proposed of the purpose of from shore they create jurisdictional as well as practical problems of enforcement. State and local authorities are now engaged in attempting to overcome these difficulties but a Federal statute such as that proposed would automatically eliminate the source of trouble. Should you desire information concerning scope of activities or any other assistance this office will gladly comply.

EARL WARREN, Attorney General.

Federal action is necessary to put a stop to the evil practices aboard these ships.

The constitutional provisions relating to the jurisdiction of the Federal Government over the high seas and navigable waters are the following:

Article I, section 8:

The Congress shall have power * * *
To regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes;

To define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offenses against the law of nations;

The judicial power shall extend to all cases * * of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction.

The territorial jurisdiction of the United States, and therefore the territorial jurisdiction of the coastal States, extends only as far as the so-called 3-mile limit.

Thus, in Cunard Steamship Co. v. Mellon (262 U. S. 100, 122), the Supreme Court stated:

It now is settled in the United States and recognized elsewhere that the territory subject to its jurisdiction includes the land areas under its dominion and control, the ports, harbors, bays, and other enclosed arms of the sea along its coast, and a marginal belt of the sea extending from the coast line outward a marine league, or 3 geographic miles.

In Murray v. Hildreth, 61 F. (2d) 483, 484 (C. C. A. 5th), the court stated:

That part of the high seas within 3 miles of the coast of the United States is, under the law of nations, within their territorial jurisdiction.

In Jessup on the Law of Territorial Waters and Maritime Jurisdiction (p. 49), which is the leading treatise on the subject, there is found the following statement:

Like Great Britain, the United States stands out clearly today as a champion of the 3-mile limit.

While during the prohibition era a treaty was made with Great Britain, in 1924, to permit searches to be made for prohibition violations outside of the 3-mile limit, the position that the 3-mile limit was the boundary of territorial jurisdiction was expressly reasserted. (See art. I of that

The 3-mile limit was accepted in the North Atlantic Coast Fisheries Arbitration, which took place in 1910, between the United States and Great Britain.

The Constitution of the State of California expressly asserts the 3-mile limit.

Article XXI of the Constitution of California, entitled "Boundary," after describing the land boundary, reads as follows:

Thence running west and along said boundary line to the Pacific Ocean and extending therein 3 English miles.

On the other hand, in respect to vessels of American registry, the United States has jurisdiction outside of the 3-mile limit and wherever the ship might happen to be (United States v. Flores, 289 U.S. 137).

In the case of closed bays, and so forth, the 3-mile limit is computed not from the coast line but from an imaginary line drawn from headland to headland, enclosing the bay. On that basis, Monterey Bay has been held to constitute territorial waters, and therefore subject to the jurisdiction of California, although the bay is about 9 miles deep (Ocean Industries, Inc., v. Superior Court, 200 Calif. 236; Ocean Industries, Inc., v. Greene, 15 F. (2d) 862.) This is likewise true of San Pedro Bay (United States v. Carrillo, 13 F. Supp. 121).

On the other hand, Santa Monica Bay, in which several of the gambling ships are anchored, has been held not to constitute a closed bay, and the conclusion was reached by one of the district courts of appeal of California that in the case of Santa Monica Bay the 3-mile limit is to be computed from the shore line (California v. Stralla, 1939 American Maritime Cases, 729.) This decision was rendered a few months ago. It should be noted, however, that it is not a decision of the highest court of the State.

Please note that in the convention between Great Britain and the United States, of January 23, 1923, article I thereof, the following is declared:

The high contracting parties declare that it is their firm intention to uphold the principle that 3 marine miles extending from the coast line outward and measured from low-water mark constitute the proper limits of territorial waters

Thus, 3 marine miles constitute the proper limits of territorial waters. This means that as to ships flying a foreign flag and under foreign registry, the American Government has no control except by treaty.

During the prohibition era we had such jurisdiction over rum runners of foreign registry, beyond the 3-mile limit and up to 12 miles. In other words, we were given the right to search these rum-runner ships of foreign registry up to 12 miles of our shores on the condition that we had reason to believe that violations of the law had occurred within the 3-mile limit.

We have complete jurisdiction constitutionally over any American ship flying the American flag no matter whether it be in the waters of Constantinople Harbor or 100 miles up the Congo River in South Africa. We thus have constitutional jurisdiction over these gambling ships.

By this bill, Congress would confer jurisdiction on the Department of Justice to enable the latter to abate the operations of these ships. If these ships change their registry to that of a foreign flag, we will have to do as we did during the prohibition era, namely, arrange by treaty with other nations to obtain the consent of such nations to get after these ships.

It would seem anomalous if we could not render aid to save the State of California, thus helpless in the face of gamblers maintaining their nefarious operations on these four ships.

The committee has offered amendments which limit the operation of the penalties of the bill to any ship principally used as a gambling establishment. The bill is also worded so that no legitimate line, on which innocent games of chance are played, would be penalized. Thus, ocean-going liners and boats on cruises, on which passengers play bingo and miniature horse racing, would not come within the operations of the bill. The wording of this measure has been approved by the association of legitimate steamship companies.

We preclude Federal authorities from acting within the confines of a State, that is, within the 3-mile limit. We want the State to act exclusively within such 3-mile area. This bill empowers the Department of Justice to act where a a vessel is on the high seas, that is, beyond the 3-mile limit.

The Department of State, the Treasury Department, and the Department of Justice are all desirous of cleaning up this horrible situation and ask expeditious action. The Bureau of Customs and the Coast Guard particularly fear hampering of their operations by these ships.

I am informed that the Attorney General of California has sought to abate the operations of these ships even beyond the 3-mile limit, on the ground that the effects of such operations are felt within the 3-mile limit. I believe he is wrong in this regard; I believe he has no jurisdiction outside of the 3-mile limit.

I am informed further that the Attorney General and the operators of these ships have each obtained against each other orders to show cause in the State courts why each side should not be restrained.

I urge the bill's passage.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an editorial from the New York Times of this morning, making certain observations with reference to the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. DEMPSEY]?

There was no objection.

Mr. MICHAEL J. KENNEDY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD on the bill H. R. 7389, and to include therein a short article that appeared in the New York Sun of August 1.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. MICHAEL J. KENNEDY]?

There was no objection.

SALE OF SURPLUS AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Joint Resolution 375, to authorize the sale of surplus agricultural commodities, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STEAGALL]?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain this joint resolution to the

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, this bill provides for the sale by the Commodity Credit Corporation of surplus agricultural commodities. This is the situation: We have an opportunity to sell to foreign governments 175,000 bales of surplus cotton now being carried under loans by the Commodity Credit Corporation. The deal contemplates full value for the cotton, except that storage for a period of 18 months will be borne by the Corporation. This cotton is to be held for a period of 5 years unless needed for war purposes by the foreign governments. That is the purpose of the bill.

The bill is drawn after the pattern of legislation passed a day or two ago and has a safeguarding amendment with respect to the storage of cotton exactly like that included in the bill which provided for the delivery of cotton under contract with Great Britain in pursuance of a treaty entered into between Great Britain and the United States. The bill comes to the House with a unanimous report of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. CRAWFORD. May I ask the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency if this does not also apply to other commodities so that they may move?

Mr. STEAGALL. It does, but the purpose is to deal primarily with the sale of 175,000 bales of cotton at this time.

The SPEAKER. Is their objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STEAGALL]?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, and I shall not object to this bill, because I personally feel that anything now which will expedite the movement of cotton, fats, and oils in particular into the channels of consumption is something we can support. feel that we face one of the most chaotic conditions so far as these particular commodities are concerned that has ever been found in this country. I further understand that the Commodity Credit Corporation, acting on the suggestion of the chairman the other day to the effect they have ample power under present law, will proceed to effect reasonable rates on these various commodities in which the Government is becoming heavily interested, so that reasonable rates on storage and insurance will be granted to those who store these commodities.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I think it is fair to say this has the unanimous support of the committee. We all should understand there is no limitation of time. The only advantage that can be seen, apparently, is that another nation might get free 18 months' storage. The limitation is that they shall hold it for 5 years unless an emergency arises, but if an emergency did arise immediately, they would gain on the matter of price and 18 month's storage.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STEAGALL]?

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to know from the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency if there was any change made in the amendment adopted by the House with reference to storage?

Mr. STEAGALL. Not the slightest. We put in this measure an amendment identical with that which appears in the former bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STEAGALL]?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the House joint resolution as follows:

resolution as follows:

Resolved, etc., That notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Commodity Credit Corporation, upon terms, conditions, and in quantities prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture and approved by the President, is authorized to sell surplus agricultural commodities, acquired by such Corporation through its loan operations, to foreign governments on the condition that, except for rotation to prevent deterioration, such commodities shall be held in reserve by such governments for a period of not less than 5 years from the date of acquisition, and shall not be disposed of unless a war or war emergency results in a serious interruption of normal supplies of such commodities: Provided, That under this joint resolution no concession below the prevailing world market price for the unrestricted use of such commodities, as determined by the Secretary of Agriculture, shall be granted, in consideration of the obligation assumed by such governments to hold such commodities in reserve as required hereinbefore, in excess of a maximum amount equal to as required hereinbefore, in excess of a maximum amount equal to the average carrying charges, as estimated by the Secretary of Agriculture, that would be incurred if such commodities should be held for an additional 18-months' period by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 2, after line 13, insert the following: "In determining specific cotton to be sold under this act determination shall be made by sampling and selection at the place where the cotton is stored of the date of signing any sales agreement or contract under this act, and no cotton shall be sold under any such sales agreement or contract which, after such date, is transported to any other place and there sampled and selected."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

HOME OWNERS' LOAN CORPORATION

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 628) to allow the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to extend the period of amortization of home loans from 15 to 25 years.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That (a) the fourth sentence of section 4 (d) of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, as amended, is amended by striking out, before the semicolon, the words "fifteen years" and substituting therefor the words "twenty-five years."

(b) That the sixth sentence of section 4 (d) of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, as amended, is further amended to read as follows: "The Corporation may at any time grant an extension of time to any home owner for the payment of any installment of principal or interest owed by him to the Corporation or may at any time during the existence of the mortgage grant an extension and revision of its terms to provide for the amortization by means of revision of its terms to provide for the amortization by means of monthly payment sufficient to retire the interest and principal within a period not to exceed 25 years from the date of its execution if in the judgment of the Corporation the circumstances of the home owner and the condition of the security justify such extension or revision."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SURVEY AND STUDY OF THE NATIONAL PARKS, NATIONAL MONUMENTS, AND NATIONAL SHRINES

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House Resolution 284.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

House Resolution 284

Resolved, That, for the purpose of making a survey and obtaining information necessary as a basis for legislation, the Committee on the Public Lands, as a whole, or by subcommittee, is authorized and directed to make a survey and study of the national parks, national monuments, and national shrines, and of the administration of them and of the laws, rules, and regulations pertaining to them. The committee shall report to the House, as soon as practicable effort laws, 1940, the result of its findings to teacher teacher. after January 3, 1940, the result of its findings, together with such recommendations for legislation as it deems desirable.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

Mr. CARTER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, since this resolution was called up on yesterday I have had a talk with the chairman of the committee and also the gentleman from Utah, who is thoroughly familiar with this resolution. I have no further objection; in fact, I am in accord with the purposes of the resolution.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, may I say to the House that last night when I objected I did so on the ground that a volume came to my desk some months ago which is entitled "Report to the Secretary of the Interior on the Preservation of Historic Sites and Buildings." I simply wanted to persuade the House that this volume is in existence, that these surveys have been made, and that there must be a veritable mount of material on this subject in the Department of the Interior at the present time. This is the report thereon. It would indicate that the resolution now pending is not absolutely necessary. However, I shall not object unless some member of the Committee on Public Lands objects from this side or that side.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged resolution from the Committee on Accounts and ask its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

House Resolution 285

Resolved, That the expenses of conducting the investigation and study authorized by House Resolution 284 of the present Congress, incurred by the Committee on Public Lands, acting as a whole or by subcommittee, not to exceed $2,000, including expenditures for the employment of clerical, stenographic, and other assistants, shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House on vouchers authorized by such committee or subcommittee thereof conduct-ing such investigation and study or any part thereof, signed by the chairman of the committee or subcommittee and approved by the Committee on Accounts.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

STATE OF OHIO

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 5118) for the relief of the State of Ohio.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the State of Ohio the sum of $1,338,160.92, being the amount of payments with respect to oldage assistance under title I of the Social Security Act for the month of October 1933, not paid to such State on account of the refusal of the Social Security Board to certify such amount for payment to such State.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RECREATIONAL DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 3959) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to dispose of recreational demonstration projects, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 2, line 3, after "purposes", strike out all down to and including "areas" in line 9.

Page 2, line 20, after "finding", insert ", after notice to such grantee or lessee and after an opportunity for a hearing."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman explain these amendments?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. This is a bill that passed the House some time ago and went to the Senate and was amended by the Senate in a small particular. I am asking simply that we concur in the amendments.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. What is that small particular?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. The bill gives the right to lease certain properties to States and subdivisions thereof, and the Senate has cut down the authority in some particulars: that is all.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. That is not very clear. Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I will read the bill to the gentleman if he desires.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I would like to know what the purpose of the amendments is.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. The matter has been considered by the House previously and the bill has been passed by the House.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I understand that, but I am speaking of the amendments. How do the amendments change the House bill?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. The amendments change the House bill so that it will not include lands added by Executive order recommended by the Secretary of the Interior. This has reference to areas contiguous to the park area.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Does this have a unanimous report from the committee?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. This has a unanimous report from the Committee on Public Lands, both in the Senate and in the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were concurred in. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

JOHN NICHOLAS CHICOURAS

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous censent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1617) for the relief of John Nicholas Chicouras.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigra-tion and naturalization laws John Nicholas Chicouras, of Aberdeen, Miss., shall be held and considered to have been legally admitted to the United States for permanent residence on November 25, 1925, and the Secretary of Labor is authorized and directed to permit said John Nicholas Chicouras to reenter the United States.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MADELINE VERA BUCHOLZ

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7246) for the relief of Madeline Vera Bucholz.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws the Secretary of Labor be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to record the lawful admittance for permanent residence of Madeline Vera Bucholz, and that she shall, for all purposes under the immigration and naturalization laws, be deemed to have been lawfully admitted to the United States as an immigrant for permanent residence.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 6, strike out the word "Bucholz" as spelled and insert the word "Buchholz" spelled correctly.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of Madeline Vera Buchholz."

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a copy of a letter written by a former Member of this House, Hon. John O'Connor, to Mr. Arthur Krock, of the New York Times, under date of August 3, 1939.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection,

EMPLOYMENT OF BRIEN M'MAHON

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday when I was momentarily absent from the floor the bill S. 2478 passed unanimously. I am sure few knew what it was all about. The House relied upon the Judiciary Committee. The House did not know that the committee was divided. I regret that legislation should be passed under such circumstances.

I had filed a minority report. The bill involved a principle to which I am opposed and which I have consistently opposed for many years. In view of the fact that the minority report was not before the House at the time the bill passed and in order that I may not be misunderstood because I object to the consideration of other similar bills now pending, and because I should have objected and demanded a vote had that been possible, I ask unanimous consent at this point to include in these remarks the short minority report. It is too late to stop this bill, but I hope that no future effort will be made to pass bills where there are minority reports without the minority members of the committee knowing about it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The matter referred to follows:

MINORITY VIEWS

United States Code, title 5, section 99, provides as follows:

"It shall not be lawful for any person appointed as an officer, clerk, or employee in any of the departments, to act as counsel, attorney, or agent for prosecuting any claim against the United States which was pending in either of said departments while he was such officer, clerk, or employee, nor in any manner, nor by any means, to aid in the prosecution of any such claim, within 2 years next after he shall have ceased to be such officer, clerk, or employee." employee.

The purpose of this bill is to relieve Brien McMahon from the operation of this statute.

Mr. McMahon was an Assistant Attorney General in the Department of Justice in charge of the Criminal Division. He resigned from the Department some time ago. However, he has been continued in the employment of the Department of Justice as special coursed locking offer the ages affords the attention of the Attention o counsel, looking after the cases referred to in the Attorney General's letter, printed in the majority committee report above. My understanding is that Mr. McMahon drew $10,000 a year for full-time work as Assistant Attorney General, and that he will receive this same compensation for part-time work as special counsel this same compensation for part-time work as special counsel looking after the cases referred to. Under the above law, Mr. McMahon will not be permitted to take any cases against the Government for a period of 2 years from the date of his resignation. If this bill is enacted, that condition will not be changed and Mr. McMahon may possibly be continued at the same salary as special counsel for a number of years, and may immediately take cases against the Government upon the expiration of the 2-year period now running, without reference to this special employment. This law (sec. 99) was enacted on June 1, 1872. There was a reason for its enactment. It has served a splendid purpose and should be respected.

be respected.

As shown by the Attorney General's letter, printed in the ma-jority report, there is precedent for this bill; seven exceptions were made between 1934 and 1937. The Judiciary Committee of the House has also reported a bill similar to this bill for the relief of Karl L. Ristine. If these bills are both enacted into law, then it would appear that nine occasions have arisen since 1934 when it would appear that nine occasions have arisen since 1934 when this wholesome law has been put aside.

This is another one of these cases where a young attorney takes employment with the Government, becomes familiar with a particular line of work, is a successful lawyer, and desires to rettre from the Government service and enter a more lucrative field of practice and take cases against the Government. The effect of this bill will be to provide Mr. McMahon with an annual retainer fee of not to exceed $10,000 a year as compensation for giving partime consideration to cases designated by the Attorney General and be relieved from the operation of section 99 after the expiration of the first 2-year period.

and be relieved from the operation of section 99 after the expiration of the first 2-year period.

Mr. McMahon is a splendid lawyer, has rendered good service to the Government, has now severed his connection with the Government, and there is no justification for making an exception in his case. This law should be enforced or repealed. No favorites should be played. I shall not have time to present this report to others who voted against reporting this bill.

EARL C. MICHENER.

THE SMALLEST ELECTRIC MOTOR

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, in the State of Washington the Federal Government is building the largest dam in the world, the Grand Coulee, the greatest thing conceived by the mind of man and constructed by the hand of man.

In our State also has been constructed the smallest electric motor. It is only thirteen-billionths of 1 horsepower. I have it here with me and will show it in the lobby to any of you who are interested. We cannot bring the Grand Coulee to you. We cordially invite you to come out there and see it; but I have this tiny motor with me, and I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to insert, at this point in the RECORD, the data about this electric motor.

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. HOUSTON. Can you use that in a Packard car all

LXXXIV-699

Mr. HILL. You can use it in a Packard car, yes; for the amusement of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. Houston], who is universally regarded as the "wag of the House" and most entertaining storyteller.

On Saturday I will have the privilege of presenting this tiny motor to President Roosevelt for his inspection. He will ever be remembered in history as the one who first gave actual support and momentum to the building of the Grand Coulee, and the greatest friend public power has ever had. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

The matter referred to follows:

Stator winding: Eight turns of No. 40 enameled copper wire. Bearings: Gold sleeve.

Horsepower: Thirteen billionths of 1 horsepower. Constructed by Merle L. Bassett, Kelso, Wash.

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

[Mr. Pierce of Oregon addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.[

UNLAWFUL USE OF VETERANS' ORGANIZATION BADGES

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following request from the Senate, which was read:

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

August 3, 1939.

Ordered, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (H. R. 5982) entitled "An act for the protection against unlawful use of the badge, medal, emblem, or other insignia of veterans' organizations incorporated by the act of Congress and providing penalties for the violation thereof."

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the request will be granted.

There was no objection.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE-REPUBLICAN ORGANIZATION IN THE HOUSE

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I regard Secretary Wallace as one of my friends and entertain a high regard for his character, his integrity, his capacity, and his gentility of spirit, even though we do not always agree on matters of policy. Because of this high respect I have for him, it was with some distress of spirit that I read his statement in the morning papers of August 3 in which he characterized the Republicans in Congress as "the best organized and most irresponsible opposition" to the policies of the administration. This statement was prompted, no doubt, by defeat of the amendment to restore to the third deficiency bill an item of $119,599,000 for the repair of the capital structure of the Commodity Credit Corporation so that this agency might continue its program of commodity loans in accordance with the mandate carried in the Farm Act of 1938.

I agree that the Republicans are well organized, but I cannot agree that they are irresponsible in their opposition. Nor can I agree that it was due to the Republicans that this item was not inserted in the deficiency appropriation bill.

In the first place, the bill was reported by the Appropriations Committee, consisting of 24 Democrats and 15 Republicans.

In the second place, it was considered in a Congress consisting of 260 Democrats, 169 Republicans, 2 Progressives, 1 Farmer-Labor, and 1 American Labor Member.

In the third place, two members of the Appropriations Committee-namely, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON], who is a Democrat, and myself-fought the committee on this item and sought to secure its incorporation in the bill.

In the fourth place, other Republicans actively supported this effort during the debate on the floor.

In the fifth place, I took particular note of those who passed between the tellers when this item was defeated by the narrow vote of 116 to 110 and observed that a substantial group of Republicans supported the amendment. I also observed that the majority of those who voted against the amendment came from the Democratic side.

It can scarcely be contended, therefore, that the Republicans defeated the Commodity Credit Corporation item so that loans might continue to be made on farm commodities.

Republicans from the Farm Belt appreciate, as does the Secretary, the necessity for this item and made a determined effort to secure its enactment.

I express the hope, therefore, that the genial and charming Secretary will make public correction of the impression which he may have left with the country because he has been misinformed.

There was no objection.

W. P. A. FURLOUGHS

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute and to extend my remarks in the Record.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, Colonel Harrington, Work Projects Administrator, was quoted in the press a few days ago as saying that he "did not plan to rescind his recent order halting furloughs for W. P. A. workers who have been on the rolls 18 months or longer until he can determine whether Congress is going to change the relief act."

Colonel Harrington had halted furloughs as a result of the amendment of Senator Murray of Montana to the lending bill, while that bill was pending in the Senate. Colonel Harrington is to be complimented for his action.

The "30-day furlough" provision of the present law works great hardship on a deserving class of persons. It certainly works considerably more hardship than it does good. It is a provision that results in such extreme hardship that it should be repealed or sharply modified.

The argument that persons whose names are upon eligible lists, but who cannot be assigned to a project because of quota limitations, as a justification for the furloughing of those who will be affected, is inequitable. It is based upon the unfair idea that Congress is justified in harming some persons, many thousands, in this case, to help others. Such a procedure or policy does not appeal to me. It never has.

There are other sound arguments in favor of those who have not been assigned as yet to a project, without harming one group to help them. I doubt very much even if those who will benefit want to do so at the expense of others who are badly in need of assistance.

It is admitted that at least 90 percent of those who will be affected are deserving cases. What are they going to do during the furlough period? Certainly, any assumption that any such persons have been able to save any money is an erroneous one. Furthermore, while it is called in the law a "30-day furlough," it will be in fact, in most cases, a considerably longer, if not permanent separation. If persons are furloughed, and other persons assigned in their places, at the end of 30 days will those furloughed be reassigned? Will the opportunity exist for such action? The simple and honest answer is "No."

The better course to follow, it appears to me, instead of proceeding upon the theory of harming one group to help another, both of whom are badly in need of assistance, is to make a special investigation of such cases to ascertain among those who have been employed 18 months or longer which persons have had their family income changed so that at the present time they do not meet the eligibility requirements of the W. P. A., fill their places from existing eligible lists, instead of arbitrarily furloughing all persons, without regard to their finances, without regard to the distress that will follow.

At the time that this provision was before the House, the membership did not have an opportunity of passing upon it in a direct roll-call vote. An opportunity of passing upon other provisions of the bill by a direct vote was also not afforded to the Members of the House. Such an opportunity should be given to us. Congress should not adjourn without this provision being repealed or sharply modified, thereby averting the extreme hardship that the existing law will produce to many thousands of persons throughout the United States.

THE CASE OF HARRY BRIDGES

Mr. ANDERSON of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. ANDERSON of California. Mr. Speaker, on last Saturday the gentleman from California [Mr. Geyer], in speaking about Harry Bridges, the notorious alien labor racketeer out on the Pacific coast, made the following statement, which appears in the Congressional Record on page 10453:

I do not know about Harry Bridges. I do not know whether he is a member of the Communist Party or not. He claims he is not. I do know this: I know, as the gentleman has said, he has caused a lot of trouble here. Yes; he has caused a lot of trouble. But for whom? For the employers who were trying to make the longshoremen work for 10 cents an hour.

Now, I hope the gentleman desires to be fair, but the statement he made is a gross misrepresentation of the actual facts. In the interests of fair play, and to keep the RECORD straight, let us take a look at some of the figures.

Prior to the big strike in 1934, which tied up the San Francisco water front for 83 days, longshoremen were receiving 85 cents per hour straight time and $1.25 per hour overtime. Does that sound like 10 cents an hour? Since the 1934 strike they have been receiving 95 cents per hour and $1.40 per hour overtime. The San Francisco longshoremen, on their own statements, have the best working conditions in the world; they have frequently stressed the fact that none of their members are on relief. So what! On June 2, despite operating losses, the water-front employers offered to renew the existing contract, as is, and the longshoremen refused.

Since 1934 Mr. Bridges' influence has made itself felt in many ways. Twenty-six steamship lines have folded up or moved to other seas. There have been about 300 stoppages of work, ranging from a half hour to 14 days, each an open violation of existing contracts, together with a second major strike in 1936–37 lasting 99 days.

Yes, indeed; Mr. Bridges' influence has been felt up and down the Pacific coast. I wonder what the total cost to the American public has been as a result of his activities. The cost in cargo diversions, lost man-hours, business, and so forth, has been incalculable. Idle cargoes, idle men, farmers' produce spoiling on the docks, world markets lost which can never be regained.

Mr. Bridges did his job well, but the Labor Department has finally caught up with him. He is now being investigated as an undesirable alien, subject to deportation. I trust that the Department will review the situation fairly and impartially. If that is done, when a decision is handed down Mr. Bridges will undoubtedly be removed from the United States and consigned to the country from whence he came. We Americans can get along very nicely without him. [Applause.]

PUBLIC USE OF CERTAIN HIGHWAYS IN SHENANDOAH NATIONAL PARK

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 160) to provide for the maintenance for public use of certain highways in the Shenandoah National Park.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is this the Senate resolution which was spoken about somewhat yesterday?

Mr. ROBERTSON. Yes. It changes two country roads.
Mr. TABER. As I understand it, the maintenance of those roads is not expected to be on an elaborate scale?

Mr. ROBERTSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. TABER. That is, it is not expected that the Secretary of the Interior will maintain and improve the roads?

Mr. ROBERTSON. Absolutely not.

Mr. TABER. They are just dirt roads?

Mr. ROBERTSON. Just dirt roads, to give those farmers who have been bottled up on either side of the mountain a chance to get across, as they have been doing for the last hundred years.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution as follows:

Whereas the State of Virginia acquired and deeded to the Federal Government an area of approximately 180,571 acres for the establishment of the Shenandoah National Park; and

Whereas from early Colonial days this area has been traversed by certain essential and historic public highways; and

Whereas the Secretary of the Interior has caused to be closed all highways crossing the Blue Ridge Mountains in the area of the said Shenandoah National Park, except United States Highway No. 211 and United States Highway No. 33, to the great injury and inconvenience of the people of Virginia: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to keep open and available to the public in a safe condition for travel, the following-named highways, from their intersection with the Skyline Drive to the boundary line of the Shenandoah National Park: State Highway Nos. 629 and 663, known as the Browns Gap Road, and State Highway Nos. 611 and 649, known as the Gordonsville-New Market Turnpike.

The resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

By unanimous consent, Mr. Curtis, Mr. Gille, and Mr. Jenks of New Hampshire were granted permission to revise and extend their own remarks in the Record.

GENERAL LEAVE TO EXTEND REMARKS ON THE HOUSING BILL

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, a great many Members have asked me if general consent was given on yesterday for Members to revise and extend their own remarks on the housing bill. I understand that was not done, and in order to save time, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to extend their own remarks on the housing bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. RANDOLPH asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks.

NATIONAL CENSUS OF HOUSING

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 281. The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 281

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of S. 2240, an act to provide for a national census of housing. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Census, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Taylor]. Pending that, I yield myself 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri is recognized for 5 minutes.

TO PROVIDE FOR A NATIONAL CENSUS OF HOUSING

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, unless the present session of Congress acts it will be impossible to take a census of housing in conjunction with the 1940 population census. The opportunity to secure housing facts with population figures will not recur for 10 years.

This bill authorizes an impartial, scientific gathering of facts. It does not commit the Congress or the administration to any course of action. But it will provide essential knowledge, upon which future action in the Seventy-seventh and subsequent Congresses can be taken.

This bill would be of benefit to business, to businessmen, to all lending agencies, to labor, to Congress, to the Federal agencies interested in housing and reemployment, and to many State and local agencies.

I am told that there has been no opposition whatsoever received by the committee from any business or governmental agency; that not a single letter, telegram, or oral statement from business or governmental agencies has been made to the committee in opposition to this measure. On the contrary, it has, I understand, received unanimous and urgent support from business and government alike.

The housing statistics which will be obtained under this authorization are desired and needed by both Government and business alike. The committee believes that a housing census is essential to insure the most economical and intelligent development of residential construction, with its great potentialities for the investment of idle capital, stimulation of durable-goods industries, and the relief of unemployment.

The bill is strongly approved by the Department of Commerce, the Department of Agriculture, and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. The proposal for a housing census has been urged by the National Association of Real Estate Boards, the American Federation of Labor, the United States Conference of Mayors, and many business groups.

In the interests of maximum economy, accuracy, and value of the data to the Nation, a census of housing should be taken in close relation to a census of population. If taken at any other time its cost would be materially increased because of the necessity of setting up a special field staff for this purpose, while if taken in conjunction with the population census the extensive staff of trained enumerators could be used.

Somebody remarked to me that they feared this was an effort to make people dissatisfied with the homes they have now. Mr. Speaker, I was born in an humble home. If I thought this bill had any tendency to make men dissatisfied with their homes, I should not be here advocating this rule.

I stand for the old-fashioned home with its ideals. In answer to my friend who said a housing census might make the people dissatisfied with their homes, I would say that we want to save the homes. They may have modern conveniences, I hope they do; but some of the most ideal homes, the happiest homes, I have ever known, were without such. One trouble, Mr. Chairman, is that in these modern days the home, instead of being a service station is too often but a filling station. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri has consumed 6 minutes.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks very briefly at this point in the Record, and I also ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Appendix of the Record.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McCormack). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Ferguson]?

There was no objection.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, it is not my purpose to resist this rule; however, I am opposed to the bill, because, in my judgment, it provides for an improvident and unnecessary expenditure of public money. I applaud the very eloquent apostrophe which my distinguished colleague from Missouri paid to the old-fashioned home. I am a product of the old-fashioned home myself. Instead of patriotism residing in the palaces I think that the very seat of patriotism is in the old-fashioned home. But this measure, if enacted into law, will not improve the character of the old-fashioned home in any respect, so far as I can see.

This is a rather novel idea. We have never had any census of the homes before and to me this proposition smacks of a promotion scheme.

On the third page of the report you will find a suggestion as to what is proposed by this legislation. This report states—

Although some sample studies have been made, there are no reliable figures for the rural United States as a whole on such essential facts as the types of houses now in use, their age, condition, size, and facilities for heating and lighting—

And so forth. It is the intention of the Census Department to ascertain the ages of homes, the types of homes, the number of toilets, the heating facilities, the electrical appliances, the number of radios, bathtubs, musical instruments, and things of that kind, which clearly indicate to me that the purpose of this legislation is promotional. One of the purposes of this legislation is to ascertain the number of homes that are encumbered by mortgage or otherwise, and also encumbrance on home equipment. The head of the family will take pride in telling the enumerator how many children he has and their sexes, but he will suffer some embarassment when he is asked if his piano or his radio is paid for and how many installments are still outstanding.

Mr. DONDERO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. After that information is obtained, just what good will that do so far as helping the people of this country is concerned?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. It is not going to help the home owner, but it will afford data for people who are engaged in the manufacture and sale of musical instruments, electrical appliances, and things of that kind. In my judgment, that is the nub of the whole proposition.

Mr. GEYER of California. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. GEYER].

Mr. GEYER of California. The gentleman is not really serious about not wanting to aid business, is he?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Why, of course, I want to aid business, but it is not the province of the taxpayers of this country to furnish the business people of the country with data which they should acquire at their own expense.

Mr. GEYER of California. I thought the gentleman was in favor of anything that would help business and that that would help the people.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Yes. My votes on this floor have shown that I am interested in promoting business. I think I demonstrated that on two occasions this week when I voted against the housing and lending-spending fallacies.

Mr. GEYER of California. I should think the gentleman would be for this then.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Here you are making the Government an instrumentality to collect data and information to furnish business which business itself ought to acquire at its own expense.

Mr. DONDERO. When the people have enough money to buy the things the gentleman has mentioned, they will usually buy them without some census bureau furnishing the information to the businessman.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Yes; that is correct.

Mr. KELLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. KELLER. Is it not true that every one of our departments go out and gather information and data for the use of the people of the country, not especially business but for everybody, including the gentleman and myself?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. This is the first time the Government has ever embarked on a snooping and fishing excursion of this character.

Mr. KELLER. I agree with that, but is it not true that it had to do it the first time in connection with a lot of other things?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of no

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Will the gentleman withdraw that for the present?

Mr. CARTER. I will withhold it for the present.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, replying to the gentleman from Illinois, this is a poor time, in my opinion, for the Federal Government to unnecessarily and wantonly waste $8,000,000 on a scheme of this kind. We have already authorized $45,000,000 to take the population census, and we have already appropriated $21,000,000 for that purpose, which is about twice as much as it cost 10 years ago to take the same census.

Mr. KELLER. What other proposition would be of greater interest and benefit to the population of the country than a thoroughgoing knowledge of the condition of the homes of the country?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Oh, we could carry this program to any sort of an extreme. I have an idea that the gentleman would like for us to go out and count the butterflies and the beetles, as has been done in some sections under the beneficent New Deal.

Mr. KELLER. May I suggest that the gentleman's imagination is running wild this morning.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. It seems to me that the gentleman wants to collect all sorts of information for the benefit of somebody, regardless of how much it will cost the Federal Treasury.

Mr. KEEFE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KEEFE].

Mr. KEEFE. Has the gentleman any knowledge or information as to the amount of money that has been expended under W. P. A. projects set up to do this identical work throughout the Nation?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I understand that several million dollars have been so expended. I know that down in my section, in the T. V. A. area, the T. V. A. agencies have been acquiring just such information as is provided by this proposed measure.

Mr. KEEFE. I may say for the benefit of the gentleman that in the district I represent numerous W. P. A. projects have been set up and any number of people have been engaged in projects just exactly like this for a long period of time, gathering different information.

Mr. MASON. Including the building of outhouses. Mr. KEEFE. This is a duplication of effort.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I believe the gentleman is absolutely correct; it is just supplementing and duplicating work that has already been done.

Mr. KEEFE. Does the gentleman know whether those reports have ever been compiled and made available? Has anybody ever seen the result of the expenditure of all the money that has been spent for that purpose under W. P. A.?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I seriously doubt if there has ever been any compilation of the information that has been acquired, as suggested by the gentleman, because it is utterly worthless.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. KELLER. That has been here, there, and yonder, for the very purpose of justifying a thing of this kind. The statistics have been compiled.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. THORKELSON. Does the gentleman know that we have built about a million outside privies?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. How many?

Mr. THORKELSON. Nearly a million, a little over 900,-

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. We have built them at the expense of the taxpayers, and now we want to go out and count them. If we could utilize the services of "Chic" Sale in this undertaking it might be worth while.

Mr. MASON. That is the idea.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. That is the idea, of course. Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. This survey will be just as useful as a certain allotment made by W. P. A. whereby W. P. A. allowed $300,000 to one county to establish doll-lending centers. It will be just as about as useful to the people as that.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Certainly. This is the same type of research and investigation as has been suggested by the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. KELLER. I hope the gentleman will be for the rule in order to permit a real discussion of this subject.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I announced at the outset that I am not opposing the rule.

Mr. McKEOUGH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Tilinois.

Mr. McKEOUGH. May I inquire of the gentleman if he will be kind enough to indicate whether or not he believes that all the surveys made by the Department of Commerce for the purpose of developing information of use to business are of the same type he now characterizes this survey as being?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Of course, I am not familiar with all the activities of the Department of Commerce.

Mr. McKEOUGH. I am sure the gentleman is familiar with the fact that the Research Division of the Department of Commerce has developed information that is of great benefit to the businessmen of this country.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Oh, I am not surprised, for instance, that the Construction League of America has endorsed this measure, that the Associated General Contractors of America are in favor of it, or that the National Retail Lumber Dealers' Association is supporting the bill.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Mr. McKEOUGH. Is not the gentleman willing to have these people benefit by this information?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. As I stated a moment ago, I am opposed to the Federal Government spending money to acquire data and information for business that business ought to acquire itself at its own expense. I explained that at the outset.

Mr. McKEOUGH. The gentleman is not opposed to the Government spending money to develop the T. V. A. system,

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I am very heartily in favor of that, as the gentleman must know.

I am not surprised that the Portland Cement Association should endorse legislation of this type, or the National Lime Association, the Mason Contractors Association, the Structural Clay Products Institute, or the Metal Window Institute. Of course the Metal Window Institute wants to know just what kind of windows there are in these old-fashioned homes, whether they are wooden windows or metal windows. If the Government will just be kind enough to spend the money to obtain that information for them, of course they will greatly appreciate it.

There is a minority report filed on this bill which sets out the fact that the legislation was not given material consideration. The Director of the Bureau of the Census never appeared before the committee to explain the scope of the bill. The minority contend that this bill was reported out without the benefit of the counsel of the Bureau of the Census.

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. DUNN. I understood the gentleman to say that the Director of the Bureau of the Census did not appear before the committee.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. The minority report sets out that the Director of the Bureau of the Census never appeared before the committee to explain the scope and purpose of the bill as amended, and I accept that statement on faith, of Mr. DUNN. May I say that the Director of the Bureau of the Census did appear before the committee.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. That is a contradiction of the minority report.

Mr. MASON. Not on this feature, however.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I am opposed to this bill because, as I stated at the outset, it provides for the expenditure of an exorbitant sum of money to perform a task that is not the business of the Federal Government. This is a very poor time in view of the terrible plight of the Federal Treasury to waste another $8,000,000 in experimentation.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. CURTIS. In order that the RECORD may be clear, the minority report recites this:

The Director of the Bureau of the Census never appeared before the committee to explain the scope of this bill as amended.

The day that the Director was present, when the original bill was considered, the bill was tabled by the committee. The only contact with the Director of the Bureau of the Census on the day this bill was considered was by telephone.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. The only thing I regret is that the bill did not continue on the table, because I believe it is utterly useless and unnecessary legislation. [Applause.] This legislation, if enacted, will authorize an unwarranted invasion of the privacy of the home, and should meet the defeat which it deserves. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order a quorum is not present.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. Culkin asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein a petition signed by various Members of the House.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman what the petition is, please?

Mr. CULKIN. It is a petition signed by 10 Members of the House from dairying States.

Mr. CHURCH. I have no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks on the subject of waterways and to include therein certain extracts.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. ELLIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an editorial from the Arkansas Gazette.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TINKHAM].

Mr. TINKHAM. Mr. Speaker, it would appear from the policies pursued this year by President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull that their secret alliance with Great Britain with respect to Europe extends to Asia as well. If such an alliance does exist, there can be only one result for the United States-war.

President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull, not finding a convenient war in Europe to enter, have found a convenient war to enter in Asia, and they are taking the first steps to

It would appear from current dispatches that the United States is supporting Great Britain in its immediate differences with Japan. These differences involve questions of British interests in Chinese Nationalist currency and Chinese silver in British banks in Tientsin. These are political questions in which the United States is represented as intervening on the side of Great Britain. Such intervention would be unneutral as between China and Japan in their war. It would be political intervention which might well call for accusation and retaliation.

The United States should certainly maintain a policy of genuine neutrality and should immediately disassociate itself from Great Britain, whose political and economic interests in China so greatly exceed those of the United States.

The United States cannot underwrite the boundaries, the political commitments, and the interests of Great Britain in Europe and Asia without becoming involved in war-and war would mean the destruction of our Republic.

I am accordingly introducing in the House today a joint resolution which seeks to put Congress on record as opposed to the administration's course in the East and in favor of strict neutrality. [Applause.]

The resolution referred to follows:

Joint resolution providing that the United States should maintain a policy of strict neutrality in Asia

Whereas such an alliance must inevitably mean war for the

Whereas such conduct by the Department of State in the war in Asia is political intervention in Asia and is wholly unneutral; and

Whereas such conduct cannot but involve the United States on the side of Great Britain in its differences with Japan and must ultimately lead the United States into war: Therefore, be it

NATIONAL CENSUS OF HOUSING

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, we are here considering a rule to authorize the consideration of a bill to provide for the taking of a housing census costing $8,000,000.

Now, why are we going to take this census? The committee has reported an amendment which states that we are not only going to take a census of the number, but also the characteristics, including utilities and equipment of all the houses in this country.

In taking the census for 150 years it has always been customary to take the name, the age, and the address. Do the folk that got up this bill assume that the people whose names have been taken did not live in houses in the previous census? When it appears that a man lives on a particular farm or on a particular road in a town or at a particular street number in a city, that is evidence in itself that he lives in a house. Now, it is true that such a census would not provide information as to whether the madam of the house had an electric curling iron, and it would not tell whether or not she had two radios or three, neither would it tell whether or not the water in the house was supplied by a well with a hand pump or a power pump, or whether or not it was supplied from city mains.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. I think the gentleman has omitted one thing. Neither would they know whether the gentleman of the house has an electric razor or whether the madam has some electric waffle irons or a pancake griddle.

Mr. TABER. Well, the electric razor would be very important, because they say it only takes three times as long to shave with one of them as it does with an ordinary razor. [Laughter.]

Mr. CULKIN. And not as close. Mr. TABER. That is probably so.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. GIFFORD. I would like to know what authority there is in the law that would compel a householder to disclose what he did have. Can they refuse to admit him to the kitchen, or must he be admitted in every instance?

Mr. TABER. There would be no authority of law to force such admission or to force an inventory of one's private effects and utensils?

Mr. GIFFORD. What is the genesis of this request? Who wants it?

Mr. TABER. Well, this is one of those mysterious things. There have been no hearings. At one time the committee, I understand, tabled the proposition. When we asked for a copy of the hearings we were told that none were printed. It was not considered of importance enough to print the hearings.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 more minute to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that we should not embark on this large expenditure of money at this time. The 1910 census cost $15,968,000; the 1920 census cost $25,-117,000; the 1930 census cost $39,381,000, and we have already authorized an appropriation of $45,000,000 to do this job. The Census Director tells us that is enough. Why should we go ahead and embark on a new program that sounds absolutely ridiculous, and that was so ridiculous that the committee itself put it on the table the first time the matter was considered, and for which they have had no hearings whatever? If we are going ahead and authorizing more and more appropriations, there is never going to be any recovery anywhere.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Johns].

Mr. JOHNS. Mr. Speaker, if there ever was any necessity for this survey to be made it was dispensed with by the vote that we have had in this House in the last couple of days. The lending-spending bill cut out all of this housing project, and vesterday we voted down an $800,000,000 appropriation, most of it to be spent in housing. The purpose of this, of course, is to go out and find some place to build a house. Most people who want to build a home know when they want to build it, and they are perfectly willing to go and get the money if they want to build a home and do it. There is no necessity for this $8,000,000 to be spent at this time at all. It is true that there were no hearings on this bill. I inquired for them and none were had. There has been no appearance on the part of the Census Director. There is a letter here in the committee report from the president of the American Federation of Labor in which he says it would be a fine thing for the housing industry, with the plans that the Government has in mind to carry out, but this Congress has stopped that, and there is no necessity for any appropriation of this $8,000,000 at this time. Of course, you could go out on a fishing expedition, but that would not get you any place. I remember a few years ago-I do not know whether it is true of all cities-when people in my home city went around measuring homes and counting them and seeing the different home conditions. I do not know whether that data are available at this time or not. I do say frankly that this rule should be voted down so that this bill will never be brought out for consideration. We do not need it.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. JOHNS. I yield.

Mr. GIFFORD. Did these investigators to whom the gentleman refers disclose whether the houses they entered were in an unclean condition? Is that a characteristic they were trying to find?

Mr. JOHNS. I do not know what the duty of these men was, but I know they were running around with a tape line measuring the size of the houses, just like people running around on farms with a wheel measuring them, when the farmer knew the number of acres that he had, because he had a deed to it.

Mr. GIFFORD. Were they measuring the dirt?

Mr. JOHNS. I do not know about that, but I do know that you do not need any count of houses in this country.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN].

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, the last speaker, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Johns], certainly did not know his lesson. I hold in my hand a letter addressed to the chairman of this Committee on the Census from the Director of the Census specifically endorsing this bill. There is also in my hand a letter from Secretary Hopkins, the last sentence of which reads as follows:

This subject has been discussed with the President and we are advised that S. 2240, as passed by the Senate, would not conflict with his program.

So, as far as its having Budget clearance is concerned, and so far as its having the endorsement of the Director of the Census is concerned, I think that is a complete answer to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. JOHNS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. Yes.

Mr. JOHNS. Where did that report appear?

Mr. RAYBURN. I do not know, but I have in my hand a letter signed by Mr. Austin.

Mr. JOHNS. Where did the gentleman get the letter?

Mr. RAYBURN. I got it from the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Dunn] to whom it was sent. I also have a letter from Secretary Hopkins addressed to the chairman of this committee. Mr. Austin says in the first paragraph of his letter that he understands there is some misunderstanding with reference to his position on this matter, and he writes this letter to the chairman of the committee in order to clear that up.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I have yielded to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Johns].

Mr. JOHNS. Under heading No. 2 in the minority report I find this language:

The Director of the Bureau of the Census never appeared before the committee to explain the scope of this bill as amended.

Mr. RAYBURN. I have read that. Everybody knows that.

Mr. JOHNS. That is all I said.

Mr. RAYBURN. No. I understood the gentleman to say that it did not have the endorsement of the Bureau of the Census and did not have the endorsement of the Budget. I simply wanted to clear that part of it up, because I have those two letters here.

Mr. LELAND M. FORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield.

Mr. LELAND M. FORD. I talked to the Director of the Bureau of the Census, and he O. K.'d the amended bill as it

Mr. RAYBURN. Now, let me say here is a little bill that passed the Senate unanimously. I see my east Tennessee friend smiling at me. It passed with no objection. Everybody seemed to think that this was a necessary thing to do; that it was a wholesome thing to do; that it would be beneficial to the departments of government in administering the law that is now on the statute books; that it would be helpful to business in giving them leads on various and sundry matters. Then we come here and somebody says, "Well, you turned down the lending bill. Then you turned down the housing bill. This is a back-door way of getting into the housing matter." There is nothing on earth that could be further from the truth. There could be no connection between this bill and the so-called housing bill that was voted down yesterday.

Now, as to the amount. I discussed that matter with some of the gentlemen on the minority side this morning. They said they were not going to fight this rule on the question of amount. Some people thought that because this was finally joined up with the census, and not an independent examination, this money would not be needed. I called Mr. Austin. Director of the Census, and he said that if this additional work is put upon him, he does not have one dollar with which to do it, because every dollar that Congress has given him to take the regular census has been budgeted.

It does seem to me that if everybody should agree, this would be a beneficial thing to do. It certainly cannot hurt anybody. It is endorsed by every department of government that has anything to do with this kind of matter, either directly or indirectly, and it is endorsed by an imposing array of business people, who are named in the report of the committee. I think this House would not look very well if it did not pass this rule and did not pass this bill, after it had been passed unanimously by the Senate, and no legitimate objection that I have ever heard from any speaker on either side of the aisle has been raised to it, simply because somebody thinks it can be connected up with the housing bill. They are going to get the surprise of their lives one of these days when they think we cannot pass anything in this House. It will be much easier for some things to be passed in this House next January and February after such friends of mine as the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GIFFORD] go home and feel the pulse of their people. [Applause.]

I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. NELSON. I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. GIFFORD. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. RAYBURN. Certainly.
Mr. GIFFORD. Since the gentleman referred to my name, I trust he will not worry too much about the pulse of my people.

Mr. RAYBURN. No, indeed. Frankly, I like the gentle-

Mr. GIFFORD. I like the gentleman exceedingly. I sincerely sympathize with his plea for business. Does he not think that if they show up the characteristics of our people and they find slovenly, dirty conditions, the soap peddler will learn about it and our doorbells will ring? Those are the characteristics you want to find out, are they not?

Mr. RAYBURN. Oh, no. Surely the gentleman does not think we are going out to do scavenger work.

Mr. GIFFORD. I do not know how they can avoid doing it under this bill.

Mr. RAYBURN. The gentleman's mind may run to such things, but if I were he I would take that out when I revised my remarks.

Mr. GIFFORD. I used that as illustrative. I think the gentleman understands.

Mr. RAYBURN. Now, the gentleman used that as illustrative of what?

Mr. GIFFORD. Of this boring into other people's conditions of living and reporting it. If they find slovenly conditions, will they not report them?

Mr. RAYBURN. They would probably put it in a report. Mr. GIFFORD. As a necessity for better housing.

Mr. RAYBURN. And with the hope that they could make living conditions a little better. Perhaps the gentleman does not understand-

Mr. GIFFORD. Oh, I understand. Mr. RAYBURN. Maybe he was not reared out on the prairie somewhere, where there were no accommodations, and where, by good roads, rural electrification, and sanitary conditions being brought about, these people are now being made happy, getting a few of the accommodations that the gentleman has probably had all of his life. [Applause.]

Mr. GIFFORD. Very true, but I live in a section where the housewife is proud of her handiwork.

Mr. RAYBURN. We trust that in bringing about better conditions for people who live in the villages-

Mr. GIFFORD. And I live in a section-

Mr. RAYBURN. Just a minute—in the towns and in the

Mr. GIFFORD. Oh, but the gentleman should let me answer.

Mr. RAYBURN. And out in the countryside, that these conditions calling for scavengers, which the gentleman mentioned, may be eliminated.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explana-recommended in the accompanying conference report:

On amendment No. 1: This amendment provides that on and after January 1, 1941, a State plan for old-age assistance in order to be approved by the Social Security Board must provide for financial participation by the State in an amount not less than $10 each month with respect to each needy individual receiving old-age assistance for the month. There was no comparable provision in the House bill. The Senate recedes.

On amendment No. 2: The House bill stated that the State plan

On amendment No. 2: The House bill stated that the State plan for old-age assistance in order to be approved by the Board must provide such methods of administration (other than those relating to selection, tenure of office, and compensation of personnel) as are found by the Board to be necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the plan. The Senate amendment struck out the parenthetical clause and inserted a new parenthetical clause which target that after Lanuary 1, 1949, such methods of administration states that after January 1, 1940, such methods of administration shall include methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis. The House recedes with an amendment which retains the Senate amendment but provides that the Social Security Board shall exercise no authority with respect to the selection, tenure of office, and compensation of with respect to the selection, tenure of office, and compensation of any individual employed in accordance with such methods.

On amendment No. 3: The House bill provided, as in existing law, that the Federal Government would match on a 50-50 basis the amounts expended by the State as old-age assistance and increased the amount up to which the Federal Government will contribute one-half from $30 to $40. The Senate amendment retains the $40 maximum of the House bill, and provides that the Federal Government will contribute two-thirds of the expenditures for old-age assistance under the plan up to a State-wide average of $15 per month for the needy individuals receiving such assistance, plus one-half of the excess over such amount up to the $40 maximum. one-half of the excess over such amount up to the $40 maximum. This amendment also changed the amount to be contributed by the Federal Government for administrative expenses from 5 perthe Federal Government for administrative expenses from 5 percent of the Federal contribution to an amount equal to one-half of the total of the sums expended during any quarter as are found necessary by the Board for the proper and efficient administration of the State plan. It also states that in the case of any State which shall reduce the amount paid in such State in 1939 to its needy individuals for old-age assistance, such State shall not receive such increased amount but shall receive from the Federal Government only one-half of the sums expended up to $40. The Separte recedes Senate recedes.

On amendment No. 4: This is a technical amendment made necessary by amendment No. 3 changing the matching provisions from a 50-50 basis. The Senate recedes.

On amendments Nos. 5, 6, 7, 8, and 10: These amendments make clerical changes; and the House recedes.

On amendment No. 9: The House bill provided that the administrative expenses of the Social Security Board and the Treasury Department for the administration of title II and title VIII of the Social Security Act, and the Federal Insurance Contributions Act, should be estimated monthly by the chairman of the Board and the managing trustee of the Federal old-age and survivors trust fund. The managing trustee was directed to pay each month from the trust fund into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts the amount so estimated. The Senate amendment provides that such amount shall be estimated quarterly and that such payments shall be covered into the Treasury as repayments to the account for reimbursement of expenses incurred in connection with the for reimbursement of expenses incurred in connection with the administration of such titles II and VIII and such Federal Insurance Contributions Act. The amendment also provides that such repayments shall not be available for expenditure but shall be carried to the surplus fund of the Treasury. If the payments made by the trust fund to the Treasury for such cost of administration were covered into the Treasury as provided in the House bill, the receipts and expenditures would be overstated in the account of the Treasury by the amounts so deposited. Collections, when originally received are classified in the Treasury accounts as account of the Treasury by the amounts so deposited. Collections, when originally received, are classified in the Treasury accounts as "social-security taxes," and subsequently, under the House bill, a portion would be deposited as "miscellaneous receipts," thus overstating actual receipts. Also, when funds are expended from appropriations for such administration, such items would be shown as expenditures under "Social Security Board" and "departmental," and the reimbursements for such expenses from the trust fund would also be shown as expenditures, unless such items are deposited as repayments instead of miscellaneous receipts. The Senate amendment cures this administrative problem. The House receipts. recedes.

On amendment No. 11: The House bill provided for a small lump-sum death payment upon the death of a fully or currently insured individual, leaving no surviving widow, child, or parent, who would, on filing application in the month in which such individual died, be entitled to a benefit for such month under subsection (b), (c), (d), (e), or (f) of section 202. The Senate amendment struck out the reference to subsection (b) since this subsection deals with a wife's insurance benefit, which would not be applicable after the death of the primary individual. The

On amendments Nos. 12 and 13: The House bill provided for the distribution of such lump-sum death payments and included in such distribution persons who may be entitled under the law of the State to share as distributees with the parents of the deceased. These Senate amendments eliminate this provision of the House bill, and also provide that when more than one parent is entitled to a payment, each of them would share equally. The House

On amendments Nos. 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18: The House bill provided that any benefits payable on the basis of an individual's wages shall be reduced, so that the maximum for any benefit (if wages shall be reduced, so that the maximum for any benefit (if only one benefit for a month is payable with respect to the wages of an individual) or for the total of all benefits (if more than one benefit is payable for a month with respect to the wages of an individual) shall not exceed (1) $85, or (2) two times the primary insurance benefit of such individual, or (3) 80 percent of the average monthly wage of such individual, whichever is least. This takes the place of the provision now in the Social Security Act limiting the monthly rate of benefits to $35. The Senate amendments change this provision of the House bill so that the reduction in the amount of a benefit will be required only where the total of benefits payable with respect to an individual's wages is more than $20, and provide that the total of benefits shall in such cases be reduced to (a) the least of the amounts referred to under (1), (2), and (3) above, or (b) $20, whichever is greater. They also strike out reference to reduction of a single benefit as superfluous. The House recedes. House recedes.

On amendment No. 19: The House bill provided that whenever a reduction or increase was required under subsection (a) or (b) of section 203 and more than one benefit was payable for the month with respect to the wages of an individual, each of the benefits should be proportionately increased or decreased, as the case might be. The Senate amendment excepts the primary insurance benefit from any reduction under section 203 (a) or (c). The House recedes.

On amendments Nos. 20 and 21: These amendments are clarifying amendments providing that the deductions to be made from any payment or payments under title II shall be made in such any payment or payments as the Board shall determine. The House recedes.

On amendments Nos. 22 and 23: The House bill provided that deductions would be made from a child's insurance benefit if such child was under 18 and over 16 years of age and he failed to child was under 18 and over 16 years of age and he falled to attend school regularly. These Senate amendments were intended to make it clear that children serving as apprentices without pay shall be considered as attending school and are placed in the same category as children attending school. Since the Social Security Board has ample authority to care for this situation by regulation, it is not necessary to incorporate these provisions into the law. The Senate recedes

The Senate recedes.

On amendments Nos. 24 and 25: The House bill provided a penalty for failure to report the occurrence of an event specified in the bill which would cause a deduction in benefits. These Senate amendments require that such report be made by any individual who is in receipt of benefits subject to deduction, or is in receipt of such benefits on behalf of another individual. The House recedes.

On amendments Nos. 26 and 27: Under the House bill as under On amendments Nos. 26 and 27: Under the House bill as under existing law, employees who worked for more than one employer in a year and who have a total salary from such employers of more than $3,000 are taxable upon the first $3,000 of such salaries from each employer. These Senate amendments provide that no more than $3,000 total remuneration for any calendar year after 1939 is counted for benefit purposes. (See amendment No. 85 for special tax refund on such salaries in excess of $3,000.) The House recedes.

on amendments Nos. 28, 31, 32, and 33: These are clerical amendments changing paragraph numbers. The House recedes. On amendments Nos. 29 and 30: These amendments exclude from the definition of wages payments made by an employer under certain conditions on behalf of his employees on account of death (including life insurance) where it is clear that the employee, while living, does not have certain rights and options. These slight changes from existing law are effective as to wages from employment after 1939. The House recedes.

On amendment No. 34: This amendment makes a clarifying change. The House recedes.

On amendment No. 34: This amendment makes a clarifying change. The House recedes.

On amendment No. 35: Under present law services performed by an individual after he attains age 65 are not counted for benefits under title II nor are they taxed under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act. The House bill provided that such services performed after 1939 would be counted as employment and taxed the wages for such services after such year. The Senate amendment provides that such services performed after 1938 by such an individual shall be counted as employment. (Amendment No. 173 taxes such wages, and amendment No. 175 deducts from any benefit under title II an amount equal to 1 percent of any wages paid to any such individual for services performed in 1939 if taxes on such any such individual for services performed in 1939 if taxes on such wages were not paid.) The House recedes.

On amendment No. 36: The House bill exempted from the definition of employment service performed in the employ of an agricultural or horticultural organization. The Senate amendment clarifies this exemption to make certain that these organizations are identical with agricultural and horticultural organizations exempt from income tax under section 101 (1) of the Internal Revenue Code. The House recedes.

On amendments Nos. 37 and 38: These amendments make a clarifying change to bring this provision into conformity with a similar provision contained in the Revenue Act of 1939. The House recedes.

On amendment No. 39: This amendment makes a clerical change. The House recedes.

On amendment No. 40: This amendment would exclude fisheron amendment No. 40: This amendment would exclude lisher-men from coverage. It would also exclude officers and members of crews (even though not fishermen) of any vessel less than 400 tons, or of any sail vessel regardless of tonnage if the vessel is engaged in the specified fishing activities. There was no comparable provision in the House bill. The House recedes with an amendment which exempts from coverage service performed by an individual in (or as an officer or member of the crew of a vessel while it is engaged in) the catching, taking, harvesting, cultivating, or farming of any kind of fish, shellfish, crustacely cultivating, or farming of any kind of fish, shellfish, crustacea, sponges, seaweeds, or other aquatic forms of animal and vegetable life (including service performed by any such individual as an ordinary incident to any such activity), except (a) service performed in connection with the catching or taking of salmon or halibut, for commercial purposes, and (b) service performed on or in connection with a vessel of more than 10 net tons (determined in the manner provided for determining the register tonnage of merchant vessels under the laws of the United States).

sales of newspapers, and in making house-to-house deliveries of newspapers and shopping news, including handbills and other similar types of advertising material. It does not include the handling of newspapers and advertising material prior to the time they are turned over to the individual who makes the sale, the house-to-house, or other final distribution. There was no comparable provision in the House bill. The House recedes.

On amendments Nos. 42 and 43: These amendments make a clarifying change. The House recedes.

On amendment No. 44: This amendment places a top limit of $250 on the average monthly wage upon which computation of the primary insurance benefit may be based. It will be impossible to exceed this average from employment after 1939 due to Senate amendment No. 27; nevertheless, in an occasional case a person earning large amounts with several employers, prior to 1940 and retiring in the near future, might otherwise receive unjustifiably large benefits. There was no comparable provision in the House bill. The House recedes.

On amendment No. 45: This amendment provides that the minimum primary insurance benefit shall be $10. There was no comparable provision in the House bill. The House recedes.

comparable provision in the House bill. The House recedes.
On amendments Nos. 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, and 52: The House bill set up an "average monthly wage" formula in terms of years. These Senate amendments set up such formula in terms of quar-

ers. The House recedes.
On amendment No. 53: This amendment is complementary to amendment No. 35 and excludes from the divisor in determining the average monthly wage of an individual any quarter, after the quarter in which he attained age 65, occurring prior to 1939. The House recedes.

On amendment No. 54: This amendment is complementary to amendments Nos. 46 to 52. The House bill defined the term "fully insured individual" in terms of years and years of coverage. The House bill provided that in any case where an individual had at least 15 years of coverage he would always be a fully insured in-dividual. The Senate amendment defined such term in quarters dividual. The Senate amendment defined such term in quarters and quarters of coverage. It also provides that where an individual had at least 40 quarters of coverage (10 years) he would always be a fully insured individual. The House recedes.

On amendments Nos. 55 and 56: The House bill defined the term

On amendments Nos. 55 and 56: The House bill defined the term "wife" to mean a wife of an individual who was married to him prior to January 1, 1939, or, if later, prior to the date upon which he attained the age of 60; and defined the term "widow" (except when used in sec. 202 (g)) to mean the surviving dependent wife of an individual who was married to him prior to the beginning of the twelfth month before the month in which he died. These Senate amendments eliminate the requirement as to the date of marriage in any case where the wife is the mother of a son or marriage in any case where the wife is the mother of a son or daughter of the insured individual. The House recedes.

On amendments Nos. 57 and 58: The House bill defined agricultural labor to include all services performed on a farm, in the employ of any person, in connection with cultivating the soil, or in connection with raising or harvesting any agricultural or horticultural commodity. These Senate amendments struck out the words "connection with." The conference action restores such words; and the Senate recedes.

On amendments Nos. 59, 60, 62, 63, and 66: These amendments make clarifying changes to the definition of agricultural labor.

clarifying changes to the definition of agricultural labor. The House recedes.

On amendment No. 61: This amendment includes in the definition of agricultural labor service performed on a farm with respect to other wildlife in the same manner and to the same extent as service performed with respect to fur-bearing animals. The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

On amendment No. 64: This amendment includes within the term "agricultural labor" service performed in the employ of the owner or tenant or other operator of a farm, in connection with the maintenance of the tools and equipment on such farm. It also includes service performed in the employ of any such owner, tenant, or other operator in salvaging timber or clearing land of tenant, or other operator in salvaging timber of clearing land of brush or other debris left by a hurricane. Both amendments are subject to the limitation contained in the bill that the major part of such service must be performed on a farm. The House recedes. On amendment No. 65: This amendment includes as agricultural labor, in addition to the services included in the House bill, service performed in connection with the operation or maintenance of ditches, canals, reservoirs, or waterways used exclusively for supplying and storing water for farming purposes. The House recedes. On amendment No. 67: This amendment is similar to amend-

The conferees believe that a comprehensive study of the subject matter covered by these two proposals should be undertaken which will enable the Congress to deal more intelligently with the problems involved than is possible at the present

> R. L. DOUGHTON, THOS. H. CULLEN, JOHN W. MCCORMACK, JERE COOPER, ALLEN T. TREADWAY, FRANK CROWTHER, THOMAS A. JENKINS, Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the conference report on the bill (H. R. 6635), an act to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the statement may be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

Mr. RAYBURN (interrupting the reading of the statement). Mr. Speaker, this statement, of course, will be printed in the RECORD. It is technical, it is 21 pages in length. I believe the House is not getting a great deal out of listening to its reading. I therefore ask unanimous consent that further reading of the statement may be dispensed

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, the conferees have reached a full and complete agreement on the amendments which were in disagreement between the House and the Senate to the social-security bill, H. R. 6635.

The Senate adopted 182 amendments to the social-security bill as it passed the House. Many of these amendments were of a clerical and typographical nature, the changing of section numbers to make the bill comport with final action, and were not very important.

The conferees have given careful and painstaking study to all the amendments adopted by the Senate in order that a workable and intelligent solution of the differences between the House and the Senate might be reached. The conferees were in session 21 days. I have never known conferees to work more assiduously, more unselfishly, or more determinedly to bring back to their respective Houses a report that would be worthy of the subject under consideration and would be the best possible solution of the points in disagreement between the two Houses.

The Committee on Ways and Means also gave this bill, as you all know, long and careful study before it was reported to the House, and the bill was fully explained to the House at the time of its consideration by this body.

As to the amendments that have been added by the Senate, most of them have been explained in the statement that has just been read by the Clerk. If there is any question as to any of them, especially the important and major amendments, some of us will be glad to make the best explanation we can.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from North Carolina yield me 5 minutes?

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY].

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, the longer a man is a Member of the House the more impressed he becomes with the fact that important legislation is the result of compromise.

The gentleman from North Carolina has referred to the long and tedious sessions the conferees have had on this very important bill; and it is a great pleasure to the minority members of the conference to be in hearty accord with the majority in signing the report, as we have today. [Applause.]

Most of the controversy was over a Senate amendment which the House had previously rejected by a 2-to-1 vote, namely, the proposal that the Federal Government put up $2 to $1 of the first $15 for old-age pensions. That controversy has finally been settled in accordance with the previous action of the House. On other amendments there was, of course, a great deal of give and take, as there necessarily had to be.

I am very sorry to find that it is necessary at this time to eliminate from the bill what is known as the Massachusetts plan, making possible a reduction in the unemployment tax. I wish some compromise could have been reached on this particular detail; but it is not dead—it is simply resting until some future action on the part of the House takes place.

The most important result of the conference, as I see it, is to make possible the freezing of the pay-roll tax at 1 percent for the next 3 years. This will save something like $275,000,000 to employers and employees during 1940.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield, certainly.

Mr. COOPER. That, of course, is for the year 1940 only.

Mr. TREADWAY. One year.

Mr. COOPER. It is frozen at that figure for 3 years.

Mr. TREADWAY. The freezing of the rate will be in effect for 3 years. The saving during this time will be $825,000,000.

The gentleman is correct. I was referring simply to the year 1940.

Mr. McCORMACK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TREADWAY. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. And also the freezing of the unemployment pay-roll tax on the first $3,000 results in a saving of $65,000,000?

Mr. TREADWAY. Yes.

Mr. McCORMACK. Which is permanent. There is no limitation on that?

Mr. TREADWAY. I was coming to that. Then the provision relieving employers of the 90-percent penalty under the unemployment tax involves a saving for 1936, 1937, and 1938 of $15,000,000 in addition.

I think the House can be well pleased with the results that the conferees on the part of the House have been able to secure. While it has been a very long and tedious process, as I previously said, nevertheless, the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means is most heartily to be congratulated for the success of the conference, and I hope the conference report will be adopted by unanimous vote.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the conference report will be agreed to.

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON SOCIAL SECURITY

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON]?

There was no objection.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the Members on both sides of the House for this expression of confidence and approval of the work of the conference committee. I feel I would be derelict in my duty, a very pleasant one, I assure you, if I did not express my thanks and appreciation to not only each member of the House conferees but especially to my good friend from Massachusetts [Mr. Treadway], who has labored faithfully and unselfishly, even to the extent of foregoing a trip abroad, in order that he might remain at his post and discharge his duty. [Applause.] I especially extend my thanks to him for the fine service he has rendered in connection with the work of the conferees on this important measure.

NATIONAL CENSUS OF HOUSING

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 2240) to provide for a national census of housing.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill S. 2240 with Mr. Gavagan in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Poage].

Mr. POAGE. Mr. Chairman, the bill now before us simply provides that when the census is taken next year there shall
